Third. To prevent a national disaster threatening all classes of bank, industrial, and utilities stock, and promising employment for hundreds of thousands of men and the release of millions of dollars which can be deflected into the ordinary courses of trade; and Fourth. The fact that there is an absence of any other solution than that proposed in this enactment.

It is quite possible that the solution offered might be improved upon, but the significant fact remains that no better solution has been suggested.

There are features in the bill which, very frankly, do not meet my approval; but, considering the subject as a whole, the gravity of the situation and the absence of a remedy, it receives my support.

The readjustment affects 555 separate properties, of an approximate value of $20,000,000,000, which includes 250,000 miles of main line and all the necessary shops, yards, roundhouses, bridges, and many accessories required, to which must be added 2,500,000 freight cars, 66,000 locomotives, 55,000 passenger cars, and the still more important human element of nearly 2,000,000 employees.

During the 26 months of Federal administration, maintenance and repair were neglected or, to be conservative, maintained only at the lowest possible minimum cost.

Under Government control, from less than $500,000,000 in 1917, the expenditures of the railroads for materials required for maintenance and operation of the properties increased until they exceeded $1,000,000,000 in 1920.

The fuel bills of the railroads have increased from approximately $209,000,000 in 1915 to $673,000,000 in 1920. Eliminating entirely the disputed question of the increased cost of labor these two items alone show the difficulty of refinancing without Government assistance.

It has been estimated by the Interstate Commerce Commission that over 600,000 employees have been laid off between August 20 and March 21 of this year. Banks, trust companies, and financial institutions throughout the country, reaching down even to the smaller towns, are carrying what might be called "the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker," whose bills have been unpaid waiting for this Government adjustment.

Prior to our entrance into the war various foreign relief expeditions were given the right of way by the railroad management, followed by the shipping of vast stores of war materials to our future allies, thus disarranging even at that time the normal progress of business.

Upon our entrance into the war in April, 1917, the country mobilized, the Nation was strained in its effort to move supplies, both of food, camp equipment, arms, munitions, and the hundreds of essential things necessary to assemble, equip, and transport an army of 4,000,000 men, and all this work was to be accomplished by a peaceful Republic, unfamiliar with the arts of war.

Cars which were the property of one road would be concentrated and diverted to another section of the country to haul wheat and at other periods they would be again concentrated in another portion to haul coal.

The entire management and organization as regards the efficiency, personnel, and detail was unsettled, and the vital energy of this enormous property was diverted to the main purpose of serving our necessities in war.

All the great nations of Europe commandeered and took control of all railroad and transportation properties, and, very naturally and properly, the same thing was done in our country.

Congress authorized the President to take over the control and management of our railroads. The bills providing for this control were supported by Democrats and Republicans alike. It was a nonpartisan support wisely and patriotically given.

President Wilson said:

> Immediately upon the reassembling of Congress I shall recommend that these definite guaranties be given, first, of course, that the railroad properties will be maintained during the period of Federal control in as good repair as when taken over by the Government, and, second, that the roads shall receive a net operating income equal in each case to the average net income of the three years preceding June 30, 1917.

In his subsequent message to Congress he recommended that the carriers should receive an unqualified guaranty—> that their properties will be maintained throughout the period of Federal control in as good repair and as complete equipment as at present, and that the several roads will receive under Federal management such compensation as is equitable and just alike to their owners and to the general public.

Following this recommendation Congress passed the Federal control act and the railroads were given over to the control of the President under a director general appointed by him.

Partial settlements have been made with a number of railroads who were especially pressed for funds for immediate operating expenses. The question now to be settled relates to the balance of claims not adjusted.

The President was named by Congress to make these settlements, and he delegated the matter to the Director General of Railroads, who has associated with him traffic, mechanical, and other experts, and before any railroad claim can be settled or adjusted it must be first approved by the President acting through the director general with the advice of these experts.

It is not for me to attempt to state what claims are good or what claims are bad when the President has selected his own competent force to make the adjustment.

The pledge for the American people made by President Wilson was for the necessary additions, betterments, and maintenance which has heretofore been credited to the capital account of the railroads. Now an adjustment is being sought by which the railroads are to pay to the Government certain sums of money which the Government paid out for this purpose while under its control.

In the final settlement it will appear that there will probably be a balance due the Government from the railroads of approximately $500,000,000. The railroads in their present condition can not immediately make this payment, nor can our financial institutions supply them with this large sum of money, so it is proposed under this bill to advance them sums of money sufficient to make this settlement on a 10-year loan basis; the Government accepting from them proper securities which the bill provides may be sold by the Government acting through the War Finance Corporation at its discretion when the market is propitious.

It is believed by the Director General of Railroads and the chairman of the War Finance Corporation that it is impossible for the railroads to enlarge their equipment and secure a complete rehabilitation with their own moneys and at the same time pay their indebtedness to the Government, and this extension is arranged by the Government to procure an increase in efficient railroad service for all the people.

During Government control and due to the uncertain financial condition created by the war, the Government did not have time to float bonds or make financial arrangements, but was compelled to pay cash to keep the railroads going and to perform the necessary functions of transportation during the critical period of the war.

Ordinarily railroads requiring the expenditure of large sums of money would have secured this sum of money by the issuance of bonds which would have been accepted by the financial institutions of the country. Now the Government wants its money and the railroads are willing to pay, but can not at the same time pay both the debt and restore the railroads to the efficiency demanded by the public service.

This is not giving the railroads one dollar.

It means the Government guarantees a loan for a period of 10 years, supplemented by securities furnished to the railroad director and the War Finance Corporation by the railroads.

It is a situation similar to a mercantile or industrial business which faces a crisis due to some unusual and extraordinary cause, where the bank temporarily extends the notes of the industrial corporation and lends it the necessary money to tide it over the immediate difficulty.

It is not intended to give the railroads anything. We are simply assisting them in the refunding of their debt to the Government and extending it over a period of years, and to enable the railroads to continue the improvement of their property and give that service to the public which it requires.

The plan is for refunding for 10 years at 6 per cent the debt of the railroads to the Railroad Administration for additions and betterments made during Federal control.

The War Finance Corporation is authorized to purchase from the Railroad Administration securities now held by it, or to be acquired by it, to an aggregate purchase price not exceeding $500,000,000.

Provision is also made that the securities acquired by this corporation from the Railroad Administration may be sold at not less than the original cost to the corporation, and it is also authorized to sell, at the request of the President, railroad securities not purchased by the corporation.

It will be observed that there are two distinct elements in the final adjustment: The first is the general settlement between the Government and the railroads, and the second is the funding proposed under this bill.

Mr. Davis said:

> It seems to me that this is an exigency that is the result of war, and what the Government is asked to do in this case is to refrain from collecting certain amounts that the roads owe, and do the same for the transportation system of the United States that the Government is doing for France and England, Italy and Germany, in extending the obligations growing out of the war.

Some of the expenditures for betterments upon the railroads made by the Government during the war period were made at the request of the railroads in carrying out a general plan of improvement which was interrupted by the war; but in other cases they were made against the protests of the carriers and without their consent.

There were many additions and betterments purely for war purposes that were useless, and all of these expenditures were made at a time when both labor and material were at its highest peak and greatest cost.

Some of the roads were in good condition when the Government took them over; some were not.

These are questions to be determined by our Government agencies in final settlement. The properties were taken over quickly. There was no attempt to make proper inventories and go into that exact accounting which would take place under normal conditions. This adds to the delay of final settlement.

The 26 months of Federal control necessarily disorganized the individual organization of each railroad, and it has required time for the railroad agencies to prepare for adjustment their estimates and claims.

The personnel of the proponents of a bill is always interesting as illustrative of the ultimate object sought to be attained.

This bill was the joint product of the chairman of our Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, James Davis, Director General of Railroads, and Eugene Meyer, managing director of the War Finance Corporation, assisted by the attorney of that corporation, and the final phraseology and form was supplied by Mr. Beaman, official bill maker of this House.

These are all men in the employ of the United States Government, and supposedly, and certainly in my opinion, working for the single and sole purpose of promoting the best interests of our Government.

Mr. Meyer, managing director of the War Finance Corporation, was originally appointed by President Wilson and recently reappointed by President Harding, so that it may be said he has represented both a Democratic and a Republican administration. He is a man of fine intelligence and devoted to the public interest.

Mr. James Davis, Director General of the Railroads, is a man of exceptional ability, who resigned a lucrative law practice during the early period of the war to assist in the railroad administration in a legal capactiy under Mr. McAdoo.

Upon the resignation of Mr. W. D. Hines, President Harding selected Mr. Davis as director general.

Mr. Davis is a man of great experience. He impressed me—and I think he did our entire committee—with his straightforward manner of answering questions, with his entire candor, with his honesty, and those who read his testimony will be impressed with the idea that he is what is called "a regular fellow," of fine attainment, who will secure for the Government every dollar to which it is entitled.

It will not be upon his individual judgment alone that matters will be adjusted, because back of him is the Interstate Commerce Commission with its corps of experts and another list of well-posted men in the immediate employ of the director general.

He, like Mr. Meyer, may be called a nonpartisan appointee, because he represented both a Democratic and a Republican administration and was selected solely upon the ground of efficiency and ability.

The chairman of our committee is a man of broad business experience, not interested in the railroads in any way, but desirous, above all things, to pass to his posterity a record of public achievement well and faithfully done in the public interest.

A bill prepared by such men naturally secures at first our very respectful consideration, and when we find that no better plan is offered there is but one obvious course, and that is support, when back of it all we find the approval and indorsement of the President.

No witnesses were called before our committee excepting Government witnesses. The railroads presented no specious claim for extraordinary allowances, nor was the socialistic propagandist heard, and if there was any objection to the bill it did not make its appearance.

Let me introduce some statements made by Mr. Meyer in response to questions propounded by me relating to the general effect upon industrial conditions of the country if this or similar legislation is not undertaken by Congress. Mr. Meyer answered:

> The effect, I should say, would be a continuation of the stagnation in industry and unemployment to the extent that it would be directly or indirectly affected by railroad purchases. The employment by railroads for maintenance and repair work and by other companies, which in turn furnish supplies to railroads by all the mines affected and their labor, in iron and steel, and in the quantity of lumber affected and in the quantity of other raw materials affected, and the industries remotely affected as well as directly affected.
> I do not know any single thing that could be done to restore the industry of the country at this time, before the winter comes on, when the amount of unemployed labor will be increased by the return of the men who have gone into the harvest fields during the fall than this particular measure.
> This, in my mind, is a measure essentially to do something about unemployment through reducing our financial relations between the Government and the railroads to some kind of proper solution. This does not affect the settlements between the railroads and the Government. It affects the financial settlements between them or the financial adjustments. It does not affect the compensation or the damages or any other claims. I believe it is a distinct economic asset to this country, of the greatest importance, to restore a full degree of employment to labor.

* * * * * * *

The farmer is the big factor in our population. We can not be prosperous without the farmer being prosperous, but industrial labor and the industry of the country is also a vital factor, and you can not help the country unless you help it in all its important departments, because one part of this machine being broken down badly breaks down the whole machine.

It is no exaggeration to say that in the entire business community, whether it is a corporation with capital running into millions or a small retail firm, we find a unanimous demand for a practical adjustment of the railroad situation, a return to the normal, a reduction of freight rates, and adequate service, safe equipment, and the avoidance of car shortage, which is always followed by a coal famine.

This great compelling public interest is what concerns me.

We loaned to France, England, and Italy, our allies, enormous sums of money during the war, and because of the war these nations can not pay the loan now, so arrangements must be made for an extension of time.

We assumed control of our railroads for war purposes and they can not settle now, but can do so if given time. To demand cash and immediate payment from our allies would paralyze the industries of those nations and put Europe into bankruptcy. To demand cash and immediate payment from the railroads would throw them into bankruptcy or force Government operation and control, resulting in tremendous outlays of national revenues and enormous increase in our tax rate.

The two cases are almost parallel, and it is certain the effect will be the same.

In my opinion, it would be bad business to force immediate settlement in either case. The underlying purpose of this legislation is not so much to help the railroads as to secure a return of normal conditions.

Some of the claims of the railroads may be extravagant, but it does not by any means follow that simply because they have a claim it will be paid. In no case will they receive compensation or the funding power of extended credit unless it has first been approved by the President.

We must not permit the prejudice of accumulated hostility to cloud our judgment in the consideration of this matter.

There have been periods in our history when public anger was properly directed to railroad management.

This bill does not solve nor is it intended to solve the larger questions which arise from the operation of a public utility whose proper function is vital to national prosperity.

The broader questions are postponed until the exigencies of this emergency have passed.

There are those who would seize upon this emergency created by war to force the railroads into bankruptcy and secure Government ownership. This would be, under the circumstances, unfair and dishonest.

Railroads have passed through a period in our history which may be roughly divided into five parts:

First. The old railroad kings—resourceful, rough, and dominating—were pathfinders for an expanding colonization and demanded in return for their adventures a larger profit because of the gamble and uncertainty which attended the promotion of each enterprise.

Second. There followed an era of stock speculation, watered stock, combining of enterprises, and some disregard for public welfare.

The third period may be described as the period of resentment. This resulted in the formation of State commissions, usually composed of political favorites without railroad experience or knowledge, the enactment of 2-cent passenger rates, various irritating regulations, and created forms of State machinery which were not entirely helpful and by their continuous change required the railroad president to keep one eye on the legislature of each State and the other upon the management of his property. There followed a confusion of rulings and regulations in the various States which did not always better the public service, but, on the contrary, in some cases caused an impairment of its efficiency.

The fourth period marked the disappearance of the old railroad king and the distribution of railroad stock into the hands of many thousands of the investing public, and in a large number of cases the estates of widows and orphans, and the public to an extent became possessed of the holdings of the railroad king.

At this period a radical change took place in the character of the men who directed the railroad properties. Men of long practical experience in railroad building and management gradually came to the top. They brought with them a practical experience and a sound judgment which was not affected by stock speculation or the desire to make quick money by the manipulation of stocks and the overvaluation of property. Each railroad, as it passed into the hands of a receiver, had its management directed to a large extent by our Federal judges and were to a degree fortunate in the selections which have been made by the Federal courts.

The fifth period immediately preceding the war found most of the railroads in the hands of competent and experienced men, but suffering from a lack of money for reequipment, extension, or improvement of service.

The Interstate Commerce Commission had developed into a unique tribunal with extraordinary power. It has removed many abuses, educated the public in regard to railroad management, and furnished a forum before which the shipping public may secure a hearing.

The work of this commission has been in the main helpful, and the amount of statistics collected by it and placed in readable condensed form is now making it almost impossible for men of the type of the old railroad king to operate without the public and the Government becoming cognizant of their plans.

The railroad management to-day is suffering for the sins of the old railroad kings, and some general reorganization, consolidation of systems, improvement of service, and reduction of rates is essential.

But these questions have no part in the matter immediately under consideration.

This measure promises employment to hundreds of thousands of men and women, may prevent a coal famine, and will, in the opinion of the President's agents, restore confidence, increase stability of railroad management, and be one more move toward that national condition of certainty and prosperity which existed before the war.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. LADISLAS LAZARO,

OF LOUISIANA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921.

Mr. LAZARO. Mr. Speaker, we are now going through a period of readjustment. We are trying to solve our problems with the view of getting back to normal conditions as soon as possible. In the consideration of proposed laws to solve these problems we must remember that we are facing economic laws instead of theories, and we must meet the new conditions which arise in a practical way.

One of the most vital problems confronting the American people to-day is taxation. In the consideration of this important matter we must view it as an economic and not a partisan question. That the American people want their taxes reduced there can be no doubt. The platforms of both parties, the Democratic Party and the Republican Party, are very plain on the question of taxation. The Democratic platform says:

The continuance in force in peace time of taxes devised under pressure of imperative necessity to produce revenue for war purposes is inadvisable and can only result in lasting injury to the people. We advocate tax reform and a searching revision of the war revenue acts to fit peace conditions, so that the wealth of the Nation may not be withdrawn from productive enterprise and diverted to wasteful or nonproductive expenditure. We demand prompt action by Congress for a complete survey of existing taxes and their modification and simplification with a view of securing greater equity and justice in tax burden and improvement in administration.

The Republican platform says:

Sound policy demands a real reduction of the tax burden, which may be achieved by substituting simple for complex tax laws.

Both candidates for the Presidency, Mr. Harding and Mr. Cox, advocated a reduction of the Federal taxes. There are some who seem to be under the impression that the taxes can not be reduced at this time. I am of the opinion that we should pass the bill reducing our Federal taxes right now. This, of course, will mean a reduction of our revenues to pay our debts and run the Government, but my judgment is that the best way to start the practice of economy is to reduce the revenues and then "make the suit fit the cloth." In other words, remove the temptation for useless appropriations, and see to it that the money appropriated is spent carefully and for the purpose for which it was appropriated.

I have great faith in the budget system which we have adopted, and I believe that with the assistance of the Director of the Budget and the hearty cooperation of Congress, with one Committee on Appropriations to carefully guard the Treasury, we can carry on the affairs of our Government with the money raised in this bill. If there is cooperation, business, and efficiency, it will not be necessary to come back with deficiencies later.

I believe the war debt should be cared for in an orderly funding and gradual payment. I believe, too, that the Government should get out of all business which can be carried on better by private enterprise than by the Government as soon as possible. I believe also that we should abolish those revolving funds as soon as possible. Revolving funds are justifiable only to meet emergencies, but in time of peace there is no reason for a continuance of such practices; on the contrary, there are strong reasons for stopping them. They are unnecessary and lead to extravagance.

The people of the United States are suffering terribly as a result of the paralysis in agriculture and business, and they demand that their taxes be reduced and that rigid economy be practiced. There are provisions in this bill which I do not like, and I shall vote for the motion to recommit the bill to the Committee on Ways and Means with the hope that it will be presented to us in a better form on final passage. Of course, I realize that legislation is a matter of compromise, especially in a body like this, where there are 435 Members. Because of the many good provisions in the bill and the large reduction in the people's taxes that will be made if the bill passes, I shall vote for it.

The three great needs at this time, in my judgment, to help revive agriculture and business are a reduction of taxes, with a sensible method of collecting them; better credit facilities to help move our surplus agricultural and manufactured products; and the reduction of our transportation charges. I hope to see that done as soon as possible.

The Achievements of This Session.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. S. D. FESS,

OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I wish now to take a short time to call the attention of the House and the country to the work of this special session of the Sixty-seventh Congress.

Less than six months ago Harding was inaugurated President of the United States. Within a month he called into special session Congress, which has been in session a little over four months. Mr. Harding had inherited the Government of a Nation whose fundamental principles had been wholly suspended, if not overturned, by a world-wide conflict. The war had involved all the world and had completely interrupted the normal process of the laws of economic and scientific operation. The stress induced governmental interference, which suspended the laws of production and consumption. The new administration inherited a public debt of $25,000,000,000, which had been increased from $973,000,000 to this bewildering figure, the annual interest of which is much greater than the total cost of Government, including Army and Navy, before the war. It inherited a running expense that is six times what it was prior to the war, which means that the burdens of public taxation is that much heavier than it was in 1914. It found the Nation's industries overexpanded by war demands, a pay roll overbalanced, the laws of supply and demand suspended, the Nation's capital and labor menaced, and the cost of production abnormally high. It found the debts made, but the bills unpaid.

Disturbed as were our domestic conditions, they were less critical than were our foreign relations. The intricate problems growing out of European jealousies were further complicated by an effort to bind the Nation in a plan of supergovernment, prevented only by the Senate, which was overwhelmingly ratified in the "solemn referendum" of last November.

The new administration immediately attacked the problem and has courageously proceeded in the work of readjustment to the point where in less than six months' time it has challenged the admiration of the world. Let the record speak for itself. Our foreign-relations policy is definitely and certainly resuming and reclaiming our honorable position of noninterference in matters not our own, and our uncompromising insistence of rightful recognition of our place among the nations, preserving our rights without offending our rivals.

The proposed surrender to Japan of our uncontested international rights in the Pacific attempted by the treaty of Versailles, as evidenced in the Yap episode, is already recalled, and we are assured of national composure upon our view as stated by the State Department and reinforced by including it in the program of the coming conference. The same can be said with Britain on the Mesopotamia controversy, which is assured in satisfaction of both parties. The same with Mexico on her attempted confiscation of property owned by Americans. The exalted position taken with the Reds of Russia was final, justifiable, and salutary, not only for us but for the Old World, including Russia. Our position with Panama is consonant with these accomplishments.

The war was ended by congressional resolution July 1 this year, and steps are already completed for the conference of nations called together by the President to agree to disarmament. This much talked about thing of world peace has taken longer strides within the past six months than in a century of dogmatic theorizing in the past and promises to be the crowning event of this century. All this has been accomplished by and with the consent of those parties responsible for the movement of world peace at home and abroad, and in a manner which displays a warmer spirit of cosmopolitan cooperation than has up to date been noticed in the conduct of nations in all our history.

In the four months of Congress in special session attention is called to a program of achievement not equaled by any Congress in the same length of time. Besides the two deficiency appropriation bills, the Army and Navy appropriation bills have been enacted, saving $658,000,000 in the bills below the estimates of Secretary Baker and Secretary Daniels.

To insure against a flood of immigrants determined to escape from Old World turmoil incident to war, and thus increasing our serious problem of unemployment, Congress passed at an early date the immigration bill limiting further immigration to 3 per cent of the nationals already in the country. This was a platform pledge made to the country.

The mammoth expenditures called for by the war, and the incredible waste and extravagance in the use of public funds during the war, presented a staggering problem and have emphasized the demands as never before for fiscal reforms which were embodied in a national budget system which had been defeated by Wilson's veto, but which is now in operation with all the machinery provided and at work in admirable fashion. This is the Nation's greatest fiscal reform and is one of the most outstanding achievements of recent times. This is the fulfillment of another platform pledge. In accordance with this reform we have reduced the pay roll here in Washington over 41,000 since the armistice.

The liquidation of war conditions fell most heavily and suddenly upon the agricultural interests. While other industries still sustain high levels, agriculture sank even below prewar prices. This is due largely to the character and condition of agriculture, largely induced by a lack of organization and marketing facilities. Congress outlined a program of relief which is now completed.

The emergency tariff was passed and became law in May. It restrained by increased duties foreign importations of products whose importations had increased 50 per cent, and to the great hurt of our own farmers. Congress also authorized a commission to investigate the causes of the prostration of agriculture with power to recommend to Congress remedial legislation. This commission has been at work for weeks and will soon make its report. Congress also enacted the packers' legislation in the interest of the live-stock industry. It also enacted what is known as the grain futures act to correct the fictitious price manipulaion on the stock market.

The Farmers' Cooperative Association bill is now in conference and will soon become a law. This secures the right of collective bargaining to the agriculturist.

The agricultural aid bill permitting the War Finance Corporation to aid in financing exports of farm products is just passed and promises greater relief by loans to European capitalists upon satisfactory security, and upon condition that the money is limited to be expended to purchase the product of the American farm.

Two measures looking to assist the farm loan banks to further extend farm credit have been passed by both Houses. One allows $31,000,000 to relieve the credit situation and the other allows 5½ per cent interest on land-bank bonds.

No Congress in our history has carried through such far-reaching remedial legislation looking to the rehabilitation of agriculture as this special session of the Sixty-seventh Congress.

This Congress faced not only greater but graver questions than any former one in our history. One committee of this Congress, the Ways and Means Committee, has conducted the hearings and reported out the tariff and taxation bills. Note this work, which ordinarily could not have passed within two years.

The emergency tariff to prevent immediate distress of the farm. That measure is now a law, since May.

Then came the permanent tariff bill. That legislation has been passed through the House after weeks of committee consideration, and was passed in this body and is now in the Senate.

The revision of war-time taxation. That bill came before the House after mature committee consideration and was passed in this body and is now before the Senate. There is an annual saving here of $700,000,000, or more than the total cost of the Government in 1912.

The committee will now take up the funding of the foreign loans. The Senate is already considering this most important problem. This will be followed by the refunding of the public debt. All this will be accomplished before the session adjourns.

The establishment of the Veterans' Bureau, unifying under one head the activities of the War Risk Insurance Bureau, the soldier rehabilitation previously under the Federal Board for Vocational Education, and the Public Health Service is already accomplished, and will not only insure expeditious action on disabled claims but will operate in distinct saving to the Government.

The amendment to the Volstead Act to prevent the traffic in beer through the avenue of prescriptions will also be placed to the credit of this session.

The reclassification of the postal employees upon a more equitable basis of compensation is also enacted into law. These are some of the achievements already accomplished.

An examination of the calendars of House and Senate of date August 21 will reveal an amount of work by committees unsurpassed by any session in the history of Congress. A summary of the bills and resolutions which have become law and those which have passed one House and await the action of the other body reveals an achievement that challenges the admiration of the country. The record shows 35 House bills and 13 Senate bills which have become law. They are as follows:

The calendar shows favorable committee reports to the House of 233 House bills, 29 House joint resolutions, 60 House resolutions and 7 House concurrent resolutions. Of this number, 55 House bills and 8 House joint resolutions have been acted upon by the Senate. Fifty-eight of the 60 House resolutions reported for action have been favorably acted upon by the House.

A complete summary of the session up to date is conclusive against the senseless criticism that the Congress has been inactive.

The calendar shows a greater amount of constructive legislation than any equal period of legislative history. In our past any one of the great outstanding measures would have been thought sufficient to signalize the Congress.

Let the record speak for itself:

NUMERICAL ORDER OF BILLS WHICH HAVE PASSED EITHER OR BOTH HOUSES AND BILLS NOW PENDING ON THE CALENDAR.

[Bills which have become laws are designated by black type in bill numbers; bills and resolutions which have passed the House are designated by italic type in their numbers.]

Revival of Business.

OF
HON. JOHN PHILIP HILL, OF MARYLAND,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, August 22, 1921.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, this morning, by a vote of 315 to 21, the House passed the amendment to the War Finance Corporation act providing relief for producers of and dealers in agricultural products. The district which I have the honor to represent, the third congressional district of Maryland, is not an agricultural district, but realizing the absolute interdependence of all classes of American production, I voted with the great majority of this House for that bill. We are now considering in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union H. R. 8331:

To amend the transportation act, 1920, and for other purposes.

This bill is for the relief of the great transportation systems of the country, just as the bill we passed this morning was for the relief of producers and dealers in agricultural products. They are both measures necessitated by the Great War's industrial chaos from which we are just emerging under the wise guidance of President Harding. The bill before us makes no appropriation for the railroads, but renders them a needed assistance at the present time.

The great third congressional district of Maryland has a particular interest in this bill. There are thousands of men in this district who are part of the organization of the railroads and derive their living from the railroads.

The headquarters and the home office of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, one of the pioneer transportation systems, which contributed so greatly to the development of this Nation, is located in the district which I represent. This, the first railroad in the United States, is itself one of my constituents and employs thousands of my constituents. I therefore deem it necessary to bring to the attention of this committee certain pertinent facts in reference to the general railroad situation, and especially in reference to the effect of the pending measure upon the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, the people of the third congressional district, and the citizens of Baltimore city and Maryland at large.

A few moments ago the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] in a very few words gave the clearest exposition of the pending bill that I have ever heard used in explanation of any such important measure. He said, as I recall his remarks from my notes, that the Government, through the Railroad Administration, owes to the railroads large sums of money for current account; the railroads in their turn owe to the Government great sums of money, mostly for permanent improvement. It is not customary and in the main not proper for a railroad company to pay for its permanent improvement out of the current receipts. Such action would increase railway rates. Money for permanent improvements is generally borrowed from the investing public. The proposition before us is, as the gentleman from Illinois stated, that the President may make a settlement with the railroads of the indebtedness due from the railroads to the Government, namely, for these permanent improvements, take securities from the railroad companies, and let the War Finance Corporation sell the securities to the investing public, using the money to pay to the railroads the indebtedness due from the Government to the railroads on current account.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] characterized this as a "common-sense and practical proposition," and representing alike my constituent, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, the people of my district and of Maryland, I agree with his views.

It is also to be noted that the report filed by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SANDERS], from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, specifically states that this measure provides a means whereby the President may pay to the carriers debts owed them without an appropriation taking money from the Nation's Treasury. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WINSLOW], chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, has made most clear the effect of this act. Let me apply its provisions to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and consider its effect upon the people of my district, my city, and my State.

Applying this bill to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which is such an important factor in the business situation of Maryland, it means this: There is due to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. on account of compensation, depreciation, and other cash items subject to adjustment in final accounting some $13,000,000, which amount the director general would be enabled to pay to this company if he had the money available, and if in his discretion it were wise to fund the expenditures made by the Government for additions and betterments on the Baltimore & Ohio's property during Federal control.

The Baltimore & Ohio has on its tracks awaiting repair 739 locomotives, as compared with 327 in normal times, an abnormal number of 412. It is estimated it would cost to put these engines in condition $2,682,325. The company also has at present 9,081 cars in bad order, as compared with 2,446 when it turned its property over to the Government on January 1, 1918, an excess over normal of 6,635 cars. It is estimated it would require to repair these cars from $6,000,000 to $7,250,000, a total sum of money required to repair locomotives and cars of $9,932,325.

If the company had the cash available, it would at once undertake the repair of this equipment, and in so doing would very largely increase its number of employees, and, as its principal shops are located in Maryland, the increased employment would be proportionately larger in this State.

Such a program, aside from adding to employment at a period when it is most needed, would enable it to put this equipment in condition so as to be ready to take care of the demands of traffic as it gradually revives, otherwise it might happen that when there is a resumption of business it will find the railroad unprepared to meet the requirements.

I have received very numerous requests from railroad employees in my district advocating the immediate passage of this remedial legislation. I am in favor of this measure, because it means more work, more prosperity, and the general revival of business for the people of my district, my city, and my State. The passage of this bill means work for the laborer, purchasing power for the housewife, sales for the storekeeper, and a general impetus to the revival of business.

OF

HON. CLEVELAND A. NEWTON,

OF MISSOURI,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, August 22, 1921.

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, on the 9th day of last month I introduced in this House a bill directing the Alien Property Custodian to fulfill his trust by turning over to the rightful owners all properties still in his possession which were seized during the late war.

The peace resolution adopted by Congress provides that all property belonging to the Imperial German Government, to the Austro-Hungarian Government and their successors, or to their nationals, and held by the Alien Property Custodian of this country shall be retained by the custodian until all American claims against such Governments shall have been adjusted, except such property as shall have been heretofore or shall hereafter be released under authority of law.

When the armistice was signed, the Alien Property Custodian held property amounting to more than $800,000,000 belonging to people who lived in Germany and Austria-Hungary. I am advised that he held no property belonging to the Imperial German Government or to the Austro-Hungarian Government. Under various acts of Congress the custodian has released property seized during the war until the amount held by him has been reduced to $391,727,971. That property is owned by people who live among the distressed of central Europe, who had no official connection with either of these Governments when the war began, who were not consulted about the starting of the war, who had no power to stop it once it was begun, and who had no control over the manner in which it was conducted; but they were people who, by their investments in this country long before the war, had aided in the development of our industries. And yet it is contended that we should continue to hold this private property in order to insure the payment of claims held by us against the Imperial German Government and its allies.

Hon. Francis P. Garvan, Alien Property Custodian, testifying before the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on the 11th day of January, 1921, stated that, according to his information, the face value of American claims against the Imperial German Government and her allies amounted to approximately $1,000,000,000. He stated further that Secretary Lansing had informed him that as a result of 100 years' experience of our Government in dealing with international disputes over claims it had been found that only between 4 and 5 per cent of such claims have been allowed. Upon this basis it would appear that the valid claims of Americans against the Imperial German Government and her allies would probably not amount to more than $5,000,000. And yet two years and eight months after the armistice we are holding as security for these claims approximately $400,000,000 in money and property, all of which is owned by persons who were not consulted about the war and who had no control over it.

Charitable organizations in this country have raised millions of dollars for the relief of the suffering peoples in central Europe, and I am advised that among the suffering are those whose property is being held by the custodian in this country and to whom relief would come if that property were restored to them. If our people are justified in contributing to the relief of the suffering among the peoples whose governments we conquered, then certainly we are justified in restoring to those same people the property which they own and which we hold in trust for them. Furthermore, not only have the people of this country contributed millions for charity funds to be used for the relief of the suffering peoples of nations who were our enemies, but this Government is permitting its people to carry on commerce with the people of those countries. Our commerce with Germany and Austria-Hungary during the fiscal year just ended amounted to $461,000,000, and this commerce is increasing at a marvelous rate each month, and our allies long ago began trading with the people of Germany and Austria-Hungary. Surely if this Government is justified in permitting this enormous commerce between the people of this country and those of the countries who were our enemies, then it is justified in turning over to the people of those countries the money and property which our custodian holds in trust for them.

The President, as our representative, in public statements and proclamations issued during the war, repeatedly made a distinction between the military rulers of Germany and their allies and the peoples whom they ruled. In a message to Congress delivered on April 2, 1917, the President said:

> We are glad, now that we can see the facts with no veil of false pretense about them, to fight thus for the ultimate peace of the world and for the liberation of its peoples, the German people included.

This declaration of sympathy and of friendship for the people who were being forced to fight by the military powers of Germany and Austria-Hungary undoubtedly had much to do with the overthrow of their military rulers. The people of Germany read the proclamations of our President; they doubtless trusted our promise of friendship, and the Kaiser was forced to abdicate and to flee, and the war was brought to an end. If our Government meant what it said when the conflict was on by declaring its friendship for the oppressed people of the enemy countries, then its example now should harmonize with its precepts and proclamations then.

As a further evidence of our unselfishness in entering the conflict, the President, in his message delivered to Congress on April 2, 1917, said:

> We ask no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when those rights have been made as secure as the faith and freedom of nations can make them.

It was our right to have our claims fixed and to have their payment arranged for precisely as the other nations did at the Versailles conference, but instead we took the position that we wanted no benefits out of the war. We have presented no bill against Germany, and yet we find ourselves in the position of having virtually confiscated the property of private and helpless alien citizens for the payment of public debts.

The President's messages and proclamations delivered during the war were in harmony with the terms of the treaty in force between the United States and Germany at the time the war began, which treaty provided for the treatment of the nationals of the two countries and of their property when found in enemy country in time of war. The provision of that treaty dealing with this subject reads as follows:

If war should arise between the two contracting parties, the merchants of either country then residing in the other shall be allowed to remain nine months to collect their debts and settle their affairs, and may depart freely, carrying off all their effects without molestation or hindrance; and all women and children, scholars of every faculty, cultivators of the earth, artisans, manufacturers, and fishermen, unarmed and inhabiting unfortified towns, villages, or places, and, in general, all others whose occupations are for the common subsistence and benefit of mankind, shall be allowed to continue their respective employments, and shall not be molested in their persons, nor shall their houses or goods be burnt or otherwise destroyed, nor their fields wasted by the armed force of the enemy, into whose power by the events of war they may happen to fall; but if anything is necessary to be taken from them for the use of such armed force the same shall be paid for at a reasonable price.

Due, perhaps, to reports current in this country to the effect that the German Government had confiscated all American property within its boundaries, our Alien Property Custodian administered his office with severity. Mr. Garvan in his testimony before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on January 11 last, stated that the property reported to the custodian consisted of everything from a merchant ship to a canary bird, and that when once reported many small items were seized. He stated further that the property held by his office comprised 47,000 trusts. Thus it will be observed that the average trust of the Alien Property Custodian amounted to only $1,702. Inasmuch as many of the items of property consisted of steamships and large blocks of stocks in corporations, it is evident that there are thousands of persons who own small amounts of property now held by the custodian and who are undoubtedly in serious need of such property. In view of our altruistic ideals, oft proclaimed during the war, we surely should not attempt now to collect our claims from the oppressed peoples for whom we declared sympathy during the conflict and for whose liberation our President declared we were fighting. Surely this great Government by economic pressure or by some other means can compel the German Government and her allies, if need be, to discharge any obligation which may be found due without holding the property of private citizens who had no power to control the conduct of the war.

Our people who suffered through the acts of the Imperial German Government or its agents or the Royal Austro-Hungarian Government or its agents are entitled to compensation, but that compensation should come from those responsible for the injuries perpetrated and not from the oppressed people for whose liberties our President declared we were fighting.

There was nothing in the conduct of our former enemies in dealing with American property in Germany to justify us in continuing to hold the property which our custodian seized. As a matter of fact, the records on file in our State Department show that the American property actually taken over by the German custodian amounted to only 118,703,100 marks, or $29,675,775, while American property located in Germany and only nominally taken over by being merely hooked amounted to 339,425,320 marks, or $84,863,080. The records on file in our State Department further show that, in compliance with an ordinance of the new German Government, dated January 11, 1920, much of the property held by the German custodian was released upon the application of the legitimate owners, and that on June 21 last the present German Government announced its decision to release all the remaining sequestrated American properties.

Mr. Garvan, in his testimony before the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on January 11, 1921, further stated:

There is nothing in the treaty proposed and nothing in any way connected with the administration of our office which does not give this Congress absolute power to return the property in each individual trust. Every trust has been kept separate, so that it is within the realm of your legislation to do with it as you please.

No doubt Mr. Garvan is correct in his statement that each trust has been kept separate, but it is to be regretted that the conduct of his office was such that much of the property seized can not now be returned. He and his predecessor seemed to have regarded the duties of that office not as trustees but as auctioneers; and because it was impossible for the owners of such property to come here to protect their rights, much of such property was sold under such circumstances as to reflect suspicion upon the altruism and unselfishness of our participation in the war. A flagrant example of this abuse was the sale of 4,000 dye and chemical patents for an average price of $60 each. These patents were not perishable. It was not necessary to sell them to preserve their value, and they were not sold for that purpose.

The Salvarsan patent alone was probably worth as much as the total proceeds of the sale of all the patents, and yet the inventor of that valuable patent will be paid the munificent sum of $60 for his property rights in a remedy which has done so much for suffering humanity in this country. Such a flagrant abuse of official power makes it possible for our critics to inquire whether we were fighting for ideals or for spoils. It is a reflection upon our good faith and it is to be hoped that the wrong will be righted.

It is contended that we are still at war. But our declaration was against the Imperial German Government with a Prussian military ruler at its head. That Government has been overthrown, its ruler banished, its military system destroyed, and the people for whose liberation our President declared we were fighting have set up a new Government with a President at its head. And the people who own the property we hold are citizens of that Government. Why hold their property now?

The one German, next to the Kaiser, most criticized in this country was Count Von Bernstorff. A rich American woman married him as a matter of choice. To me her position is less enviable than that of a German girl who was never afforded an opportunity to marry an American boy; and yet we have turned over to Mrs. Bernstorff more than $1,000,000, while we deny the same right to the German woman whose father invested in this country.

Now that a resolution of peace has been passed by Congress; in view of our former President's repeated declaration of sympathy for the oppressed people of Gemany; in view of the fact that the wrongs suffered by our people were perpetrated by the military rulers who have been overthrown; and in view of the fact that the property of our citizens in enemy countries has been restored, it would seem that the time has arrived when legislation authorizing the release of all property held by the custodian should be speedily enacted.

The Volstead Beer Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. JOHN W. RAINEY,

OF ILLINOIS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, August 23, 1921.

Mr. RAINEY of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, under the gag rules which have obtained in the consideration of this legislation it has been impossible for all those of the minority to submit their views. Many have sacrificed an opportunity to address this House so the members of the committee concerned with this question might have sufficient time to make an intelligent analysis of the measure. On many occasions in the past I have taken the floor to assist in the fight being made against prohibition, and my views on the question are therefore well known to most of the membership of this body, but I would be amiss in a duty if I failed at this time to draw your attention to the scope of the legislation. The bill, which will be thrust upon the people by this Congress against the will of the majority, as is evidenced by the disrespect in which this statute is held, will prohibit physicians from exercising discretion in the treatment of patients by depriving them of the right to prescribe, as they have for years, the moderate use of wines and beers.

Mr. Speaker, I am astounded at the Congress saying, in effect, to its doctors we have no confidence in you, we do not respect or believe in your profession, although you have taken a course in medicine and surgery you do not know anything about either, and we are going to tell you how many patients you are to have who need alcoholic stimulants. You were great assets during the national emergency which just passed, and as a reward we are to shelve you and then treat the Nation's ailments by legislation, and the first dose is herewith. If the patient lives, we will be along with more later.

The bill as it is presented to-day seeks to continue the manufacture of poisonous preparations and drive from business people who have long since been established and have conducted a respectable business selling medicinal preparations that are as desirable for many disorders as the specialists of Johns Hopkins Hospital, and more available to the poor. The bill violates the fundamental law of the land in that it dictates the kinds of wine that are to be used in religious services. Our forefathers came here to escape religious persecution, and the very purpose for which they died in making this country free from the tyranny from which they escaped is being legislated away by men who do not vote according to the dictates of their own conscience, but vote so they may be perpetuated in office. No man voting for this bill thinks for a moment that the section of the bill to which I have just made a reference is constitutional, and in supporting it they violate the oath taken when they assumed the duties of a Representative in Congress, but they will respond to the whip of a small minority of their constituency. Finally, and in order to harass an already overburdened people, Congress quibbles over the search-and-seizure features of the measure. One body seems to have some respect for the instrument under which we live and suggests that a search warrant be obtained before the property of an individual is disturbed, and the other wishes to continue the policy of disregarding society and order and enact legislation according to its fancy.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know what can be in the minds of the Congress when in the face of official reports on the conditions of the country, the absolute failure of the prohibition laws, and the general unrest it desires to further restrain the citizenry of these United States by farcical legislation. Everyone realizes if an act was passed here legalizing the manufacture and sale of light wines and beers it would be hailed everywhere with enthusiasm and would be the best tonic possible for law and order.

Fordney Tariff Bill.

SPEECH

OF

HON. JOHN M. ROBSION,

OF KENTUCKY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, July 18, 1921.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. ROBSION. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, I regret to find myself out of accord with some of my colleagues on this important question, but I feel strongly the necessity of this country imposing a protective tariff on imported crude oils, and I shall vote for this provision regardless of the position of anyone else. [Applause.]

The Committee on Ways and Means in reporting the tariff bill recommend and provide for a duty of 35 cents per barrel of 42 gallons each on all crude oils brought into this country. I think the committee is right. This bill provides for protection in the way of a tariff for everything produced on the farm in Kentucky, as well as many of the products produced in the factories, and I likewise give these provisions my cheerful support. Kentucky has become the fifth State in the Union in the production of coal and eighth in the production of oil. In recent years hundreds of independent oil producers have come to Kentucky and have spent hundreds of millions of dollars in building up this industry in our State. It is one of the very big industries of the State to-day. The taxable value of the oil properties in Kentucky is about $300,000,000. I want to see the oil and coal industries in Kentucky protected as well as the farmers and manufacturers of the State. [Applause.]

A REPUBLICAN POLICY.

When the Republicans turned control of the Government over to the Democrats eight years ago last March the national debt was about $1,000,000,000. When the Democrats turned the control of the Government over to the Republicans on March 4, 1921, the national debt was about $25,000,000,000, with other claims against the Government which had not been liquidated amounting to billions more.

This debt must be paid. Money must be provided to pay the interest on this debt, take care of the World War soldiers and other soldiers, and provide for the ordinary running expenses of the Government. This will amount to something like $4,000,000,000 per year and will continue for many years. This money can not be picked from trees or bushes; it must be raised through revenues produced by taxes on our people or tariff on imported goods and materials. The Republican Party has always held to the doctrine that a protective tariff not only affords protection to American labor and American industry, but at the same time produces revenue to carry on the expenses of the Government. We must have something like $4,000,000,000 per year. It must come from somewhere. This tariff bill contemplates the raising of hundreds of millions of dollars in revenues, and one of the 6,000 items on which a tariff is recommended by the Ways and Means Committee is a tariff of 35 cents per barrel on crude oil. The question arises, Is it necessary to protect the American oil industry, and how much revenue will it produce?

OIL AND COAL BUSINESS PARALYZED.

Heretofore there has been no tax on imported crude oil. When the Republicans went out of power in 1913 practically no foreign crude oil was coming into this country. Mexican crude oil began to come into this country in rather a small way in the year 1915, but since that time it has grown with leaps and bounds. In 1916 there were brought in about 20,000,000 barrels; 1919 about 52,000,000 barrels; 1920 about 108,000,000 barrels; and the increase has kept up for the year 1921. There were brought into this country in June, 1921, about 17,000,000 barrels, and it now appears there will be brought in from Mexico this year more than 150,000,000 barrels of crude oil. At 35 cents per barrel duty or tariff it would bring in about $50,000,000 of revenue, one-half the sum the road people of America are asking for good roads. We need the revenue, so why not place this tariff on oil? But as important as is the question of revenue there is another phase more important, and that is the protection of the American oil and coal industries, the capital invested in these industries, and the hundreds of thousands of men who earn their support in the coal and oil industries.

I have received hundreds of letters and telegrams from coal men, oil men, banks, officials in my own district, and many others from various parts of the State; letters and resolutions from president of United Mine Workers and American Federation of Labor; also following telegram:

LEXINGTON, KY., July, 1921.

Hon. J. M. ROBSION,
Congressman, Washington, D. C.:

Oil business in Kentucky and over the country paralyzed. Use every effort to secure a duty of at least 35 cents per barrel on imported crude oil.

A. R. MARSHALL,
President Kentucky Oil Men's Association.

I quote part of a letter from Gov. Morrow:

You, of course, know that within the last five or six years the oil industry of Kentucky has assumed large proportions and with a return of good prices for oil the industry will assume greater proportions. The oil industry is our industry and should receive the protection to which it is fully entitled, and it is up to the Kentucky Members of Congress to look after this. Mexican oil is a very cheaply produced oil; produced under inferior wages and can therefore undersell the product produced by American labor paid for by American standard of wages.

JOHN LEWIS, PRESIDENT UNITED MINE WORKERS, URGES TARIFF ON MEXICAN OIL.

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 14, 1921.

To the Members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Sixty-Seventh Congress, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: It is our most earnest desire that you give your fullest support to the end that the import tariff on Mexican oil contained in the original draft of the Fordney bill may be enacted for the protection of labor's interest and to better insure the possibility of employment of hundreds of thousands of workers now totally unemployed and to give them means of subsistence of which they are now totally devoid.

It is estimated that there are at present approximately four and one-half million laboring men in the United States who are unemployed, including about 242,000 miners and many thousands of oil field workers. * * *

We respectfully submit that one of the main contributing causes for the present condition of unemployment is occasioned by the unrestricted importation of Mexican fuel oil * * *.

We reiterate that the unrestricted importation of Mexican fuel oil is one of the greatest factors in the throttling of American industry. * * * The importation of Mexican oils jumped from something over 50,000,000 barrels in the year 1919 to 106,175,000 barrels in the year 1920, and, on the available figures of 1921 for the first three months of this year the importation was 36,879,174 barrels, the average increase in 1921 over the same period in 1920 being 101.92 per cent despite a stagnated trade condition. This importation displaced a like amount of American-produced oil or occasioned the displacement of 61,162,865 tons of coal * * * three and one-half barrels of Mexican fuel oil being the equivalent of one ton of American coal. * * *

* * * * * * *

In view of these facts and in the interests of the workers and national prosperity, we earnestly request your support for the enactment of the provisions of the Fordney bill placing an import tariff on Mexican oil.

Respectfully, yours,

JOHN L. LEWIS,
President United Mine Workers of America.

Mr. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in his letter points out that the Mexican crude oil after being shipped to this country is made into fuel oil, and the Mexican oil that will come into the United States during the year of 1921 will take the place of more than 61,000,000 tons of coal. This is more coal than will be produced by the State of Kentucky. He says there are more than 4,000,000 laboring men out of employment in this country, and of this number 242,000 come from the coal and oil fields. He points out that one of the great causes for the present condition of unemployment is the unrestricted importation of Mexican fuel oil. He concludes his letter by saying:

In the interest of the workers and national prosperity we earnestly request your support in placing a tariff on Mexican oil as provided in the Fordney bill.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR FAVORS TARIFF ON OIL.

The American Federation of Labor at its recent national convention passed a resolution urging the Members of Congress to vote for a tariff on Mexican oil, and in that way help the oil and coal industries of this country and relieve as far as possible the unemployment of American labor. Some time ago Congress passed a law greatly restricting foreign immigration because we had a full supply of men in this country to run the railroads, mines, factories, and other industries. Is it wise to permit oil and other products to be produced in foreign lands with foreign labor and brought into this country and in that way displace the demand for American labor and American capital? This is contrary to the teachings of the Republican Party ever since its beginning. President Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, and the American Federation of Labor in advocating a protective tariff on oil are standing squarely with the policy of the Republican Party ever since the days of Abraham Lincoln.

STANDARD OIL CO. AND MEXICAN OIL.

A few years ago the Standard Oil Co. practically controlled the production of oil in the United States. Thousands of men with energy, courage, and brains began to drill wells, produce and refine oil in opposition to the Standard Oil. To-day about 82 to 84 per cent of crude oil is produced in this country by independent concerns, and the Standard Oil now controls only about 16 to 18 per cent of the oil production of the United States. There are more than 16,000 independent oil producers in the United States. There are about 250,000 oil wells in the United States. Some years ago the Standard Oil invested largely in the Mexican oil fields, and last year the Standard Oil brought into this country from Mexico nearly 107,000,000 barrels of crude oil produced under conditions very different to the oil produced in this country, and it is estimated the Standard Oil will bring into this country in 1921 from Mexico something like 150,000,000 barrels of crude oil. The Standard Oil controls the oil production in Mexico, and the Standard Oil Co. is very much opposed to a tax or tariff on crude oil. Wages are cheaper in Mexico. The average daily production of the 250,000 wells in the United States per well is less than 5 barrels, while 184 wells in Mexico, in 1920, produced 163,000,000 barrels, or an average of about 2,400 barrels per well per day. Oil wells in this country must be pumped. This is not true of the Mexican oil wells, and therefore we can see that oil can be produced much more cheaply in Mexico than in the United States. The total production of oil in this country last year was about 450,000,000 barrels. Now, what effect has the importation of Mexican oil had and is now having on the American oil industry? It has practically killed it. Less than a year ago Kentucky oil was selling for about $5 per barrel. To-day it is selling for less than $1 per barrel. The oil wells are idle everywhere in this country. Perhaps more than 125,000 men who have been working in the oil fields of this country are now idle, but the workers in the oil fields in Mexico are working overtime. The American oil producers can not compete with this cheaply produced Mexican oil. Thousands of oil wells are idle, because it costs more to produce the oil than they can get for it on the market, and those familiar with oil wells know that oil wells must not stand idle. They soon become lost and destroyed. If it is a good policy to protect American laborers and American industries from the importation of cheap goods from Europe and other countries; cheap cattle, cheap sheep, and hogs from Mexico; sheep and wool from Australia; fruit, vegetables, and sugar from South America and the West Indies, why not protect the American laborers and American capital in the American oil industry?

But it is contended that we are consuming the oil supply of this country, and we need all of the oil we can get as a matter of national defense in the event of war. We must not think all of the time in terms of war. No reasonable man anticipates that this country will be in war for many years. The world is bankrupt and sick. We need to prepare for peace and think more in terms of peace. We must build up the industries of this country, so as to enable our people to meet and bear the burdens of war that are already upon us. At least, a tariff should be placed on oil until the oil industry of this country can get on its feet. It is unfair to force it to compete with cheap Mexican oil.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS VERSUS STANDARD OIL.

The 16,000 independent oil producers and refiners of the United States are urging Congress to place a tariff on imported crude oil. The Standard Oil Co. and its subsidiary concerns are urging that no tariff be placed on imported crude oil. The reason is very plain to me. The former are producing oil in this country and the Standard Oil Co. is producing oil in Mexico. I am not prejudiced against any business concern that is engaged in an honest business and giving to the American people and their employees a square deal, but we must first take care of the industries and workers under the Stars and Stripes, who are paying the State and Federal taxes on their business and property in this country and who are furnishing employment to hundreds of thousands of men in this country. But for the courage, brains, and energy of these thousands of independent producers the Standard Oil Co. would have a monopoly upon the oil production of this country. Because of the great reduction in the price of oil, the capital of the independent oil producers, as well as their property, has been reduced more than half. They have lost billions of dollars and bankruptcy is staring thousands of them in the face. Give them protection and let them get on their feet, and if it should appear wise later on, remove the duty on imported crude oil. The independent producers are not in condition to receive the blow of competing with free Mexican oil at this time.

WILL NOT INCREASE COST OF GASOLINE.

Some persons have made an attempt to alarm the people of the country by saying that a tariff on Mexican crude oil will greatly increase the price of gasoline. The Standard Oil Co. controls the prices of gasoline and refined oil. While the price of oil has come down from $5 to 95 cents per barrel, gasoline has only dropped from about 35 cents to 24 cents a gallon. The price of crude oil we can see has very little to do with the price of gasoline. This is especially true of Mexican oil. Very little gasoline comes from Mexican oil. It is very low in gas. As Mr. Lewis points out in his letter, the Mexican oil is used principally for fuel and takes the place of coal as well as the place of fuel oil produced in this country. On the 1st of July there were more than a billion gallons of gasoline stored away, and this supply was increasing. There are stored away more than 100 gallons of gasoline for every motor vehicle in America, and this quantity is increasing all the time. American crude oil is much higher in gas, and the same quantity of American crude oil will produce from three to five times as much gasoline as Mexican crude oil. When we shut down the American oil wells by reason of free oil from Mexico, we destroy the chief source for the supply of gasoline. Encourage American producers and thereby increase the supply of gasoline and reduce the price.

LINCOLN'S POLICY.

It was the policy of Lincoln and has been the policy of the Republican leaders ever since his day to encourage production in this country rather than in some foreign land, to protect the laborers of this country from the cheap labor of other lands, to encourage the production of everything that American energy, American brains, American courage, American capital, and American natural resources will produce. This policy has made our country the greatest under the sun. It has produced the greatest system of railroads and the best railroaders, the best mines and the best miners, the best factories and the highest type of factory workers, the best farms and the highest class of farmers, the best schools, churches, homes, and citizens of any country on earth, and why should we abandon all of this and favor the Mexican oil producers and workers and the labor the capital of foreign nations?

Hundreds of millions have been spent in developing the oil and coal industry of Kentucky. They have been furnishing employment to thousands of people; food, shelter, and clothing with opportunities for education to thousands of others. These industries are now paralyzed, and they are asking Congress to give to them protection in order that they may not be destroyed but may live and grow; and for these reasons and many others I give my support and shall record my vote for the tax on imported Mexican crude oil and protect the oil and coal industries and the workers in these industries in our own country.

OF
HON. CHARLES H. BRAND,
OF GEORGIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921.

Mr. BRAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by printing in the RECORD a historical statement entitled "Georgia," prepared several years ago by one of the most scholarly and distinguished women of the State of Georgia.

The author of this publication is Miss Mildred Lewis Rutherford, of my home city, Athens, Ga.

She prepared and gave this statement to the public as State historian of the Georgia United Daughters of the Confederacy.

For many years Miss Rutherford was and is at present principal of the Lucy Cobb Institute, from which many of the leading and cultured women of Georgia have graduated.

The statement is as follows:

GEORGIA.

(Items of interest prepared by Miss Mildred Lewis Rutherford, State historian of Georgia United Daughters of the Confederacy.)

These items are presented for information and correction. Georgia has greatness enough without claiming what belongs to other States. When proof is given, Georgia will gracefully yield her claim to any one of the items upon this list.

WHERE GEORGIA LEADS.

Georgia motto: Non sibi sed aliis—Not for themselves, but for others.
Georgia flower: Cherokee rose.
Georgia seal: Wisdom, justice, and moderation.
First in America to build an orphan asylum, 1740—showing loving interest in others.
First to rule rum from the colony, realizing liquor makes "a feeble folk."
First to rule slavery from the colony, realizing that slaves tend to produce laziness.
First to have a vagrancy law, 1813; no idle people in Georgia.
First and only military colony; law must be maintained.
First to escape the Indian's tomahawk; no tomahawking in Georgia.
First to trail the Spanish flag in the dust. Remember Bloody Marsh!
First Christian baptism in America—1540, in Ocmulgee River.
First cannon ever fired in America—1540, by one of De Soto's men, near same spot.
First to have a headright policy—200 acres of land to every settler and 50 acres to every child.
First toast ever offered to the United States—"Free and Independent States of America," July, 1776.
First to have a Sunday school—John Wesley, at Savannah, 1735.
First to ordain a Negro preacher—George Leile, 1774.
First to use an Indian alphabet—the Indian Sequoyah, or George Guess.
First to have a hymn book—Charles Wesley—published at Charleston, 1737.
First to legislate against the slave trade.
First to have a commissioned ship.
First to send a schooner against the British.
First to send powder to Bunker Hill.
First to erect a Liberty pole in the South, 1775.
First to send steamer across the Atlantic—The Savannah, 1819.
First to suggest the possibility of steam as applied to navigation—William Longstreet. Patent granted by Georgia legislature to I. Briggs and William Longstreet, February 1, 1788.
First to have ironclad steamboat with ram—Charles Austin.
First botanical garden in the South, 1833. See weeping willow from Napoleon's grave.
First passenger railroad planned—Ebenezer Jenks, 1825.
First colony or State to appoint a Thanksgiving Day—Oglethorpe, at Augusta, 1735.
First to pass the married woman's act, giving a woman the right to manage her own property.
First to pass law forbidding that women shall be imprisoned for debt.
First to codify the English law to principles of equity—Thos. R. R. Cobb.
First to have a paper mill in the South, 1809.
First to make cottonseed oil, Athens, Ga., 1829.
First to have a railroad commission—1877, Americus.
First to give free railroad transportation to farmers.
First to have a farmers' club in the South, 1891.
First State department of agriculture—1810.
First to plant cotton for commercial use in America, 1734.
First cotton to be made into thread in America—sent by Richard Leak to Massachusetts.
First to chop out cotton with a hoe—Purnal Truitt, 1818.
First to ship a bale of cotton to England from America—James Habersham, or Samuel Auspourgeur—both of Georgia.
First to invent and patent the cotton gin—Joseph Watkins, Petersburg, Ga., 1792.
First to suggest the brush in the gin—Mrs. Hillhouse, of Augusta.
First to toll Eli Whitney of Watkin's gin—Mrs. Nathaniel Greene, of St. Simons.
First to invent a cotton tie—Dudley Lee, Blakely.
First to invent the sewing machine—F. R. Goulding.
First woman to use a sewing machine—Mrs. F. R. Goulding.
First to diversify crops. Prize at St. Louis Exposition.
First to discover ether as an anæsthetic—Crawford W. Long.
First woman to own and edit a paper—The Washington Gazette, 1802. (Mrs. Hillhouse, of Wilkes County.)
First to cultivate grapes, Worsham de Lyon—1735.
First bay tree in America.
First to invent a cotton picker.
First philosophical apparatus in the South—bought in Paris by Dr. Henry Jackson for Franklin College, 1817.
First to have a State university, 1784.

First to suggest State Day—Miss Frances L. Mitchell.
First to have a State Day authorized by law—Joseph Habersham Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution.
First Southern State to hold an exposition—Atlanta.
First State to give woman her full and equal rights by law, and this without suffrage.

WHAT GEORGIA CLAIMS.

Nine climate belts in United States—Georgia has eight.
Georgia's marble surpasses Vermont's: Corcoran Art Gallery, in Washington City; State capitol building, St. Paul, Minn.; State capitol building, Providence, R. I.; State capitol building, Frankfort, Ky.; State capitol building, Little Rock, Ark.; Stock Exchange, New York City; Royal Bank, Montreal, Canada; Bank of Montreal, Winnipeg; Illinois State monument at Vicksburg; Louisville & Nashville station, Louisville, Ky.; and monuments and buildings without number all over the country are of Georgia marble.
Georgia has 142 square miles of coal.
Georgia has 175 square miles of iron.
Georgia has the largest deposit of kaolin.
Georgia has the only asbestos in the United States, except Wyoming.
Georgia has the only mountain of solid granite—Stone Mountain.
Georgia's corn excels Iowa's.
Georgia's wheat excels Illinois'.
Georgia's oats excel Ohio's.
Georgia's apples the finest in United States. Prize for best variety at International Horticultural Exposition.
Ogeechee shad is the finest in the world.
Georgia's shell pecans sell for $1 a pound.
Georgia's watermelons finest that are grown. One weighed 147½ pounds.
Georgia's roads can not be beat.
Georgia's wool the best in the South.
Georgia's gold the purest in the United States.
Georgia's pine forest extends over 1,000 miles.
Georgia's wood made the six frigates for War of 1812.
Greatest astronomer and geologist in America—Joseph Le Conte.
Purest Anglo-Saxon blood out of rural English.
Georgia has the largest tobacco plantation in the world, 25,000 acres, and employs 3,500 hands.
Georgia's tobacco received the first prize at Paris Exposition.
Three-fourths of all the wrapping tobacco in the United States grows in Georgia.
Georgia has more minerals than any other State.
Georgia's cassava produces more starch to the acre.
The largest block of marble ever quarried in the United States came from a Georgia quarry, in capitol building at St. Paul, Minn.
All gypsy wagons are made in Georgia—Klein & Martin, Athens.
Georgia makes almost all of the duck cloth used by United States, Cuba, and Mexico for mail bags, tents, etc.
Georgia's raw silk was used to make Queen Charlotte's wedding gown.
Oliver Goldsmith referred to St. Simons Island in his Deserted Village.
Georgia gave Texas a president—Mirabeau Lamar.
Georgia gave Texas her flag—Joanna Troutman, in 1836.
Georgia pays more to her Confederate veterans than any other State, and she does not pay what she should.
Georgia soil and climate can produce anything that can be grown in any other part of the United States.
The one who suggested the famous Lick Observatory in California was a Georgia man—Joseph Le Conte.
The one who managed the finances of it was a Georgia man—Capt. R. S. Floyd, of Camden County.
The only gunpowder factory in the South in 1861 was at Augusta, Ga.—George R. Rains.
Augusta, Ga., was the only city of note in the South that during the four years of war floated undisturbed the Confederate flag.

The four guns at Newburgh, N. Y., marking Washington's headquarters, were made at the foundry in Augusta during the War between the States.

The women of Augusta and Summerville in 1864 made 75,000 cartridges in a day and thus saved the Army of Tennessee before the fall of Atlanta.

The first shaft dedicated to the Confederate men who fell in battle was the tall shaft of Augusta's powder mills.

Grier's Almanac belongs to Georgia.

No State but Georgia has mountain peaks in the north tipped with snow while surf bathers are sporting in the waves in the south.

No State but Georgia can raise everything a family eats or drinks, even coffee and tea.

Six crops a year can be raised on same land in some parts of Georgia.

Dougherty County has land that produces 756 bushels of sweet potatoes to the acre.

California sends to Georgia for yam slips.

Lowndes County raised a watermelon that weighed 147½ pounds.

It takes 10,000 cars to move Georgia's watermelon crop out of the State.

Effingham County raised a cabbage weighing 27 pounds; it was 48 inches in diameter and 144 inches in circumference.

Stewart County has 41 different minerals.

Jackson County can raise coffee and tea.

Clarke County furnishes all the material for making the best roads.

No State but New York has better roads than Georgia.

Thomas County has one farmer who sold $1,700 worth of sugar-cane sirup in 1913.

Rabun County has land that 1 acre in celery, 1913, brought $1,400.

Lincoln County has blue diamond mines which Tiffany owns.

Bibb County has fuller's earth sufficient to supply the United States.

Berrien County has seven brothers weighing 1,568 pounds, averaging 224 pounds each. Georgia produces big men physically as well as morally and mentally.

Ware County has a man weighing 600 pounds and another county one weighing 750 pounds.

Fulton County had a man who lived to be 132, and married when over 120 years of age. Rev. J. W. Lee is authority.

Georgia has six counties that received $21,000,000 from their cotton crop, 1913—Laurens, Burke, Walton, Jackson, Bulloch, Emanuel.

De Kalb County raises hogs weighing from 1,000 to 1,600 pounds.

Finest flute player in the world—Sidney Lanier.

In the Spanish-American War more troops went from Georgia in proportion to population than from any other State. First to raise the flag at Manila—Tom Brumby.

Only State to have had an empress—Consaponakeeso—Mary Musgrove.

Only State to have had an emperor—Alexander McGillivray, Emperor of Creek Nation.

Only State to have had a queen—the one who presented De Soto with a string of pearls—those must have been Georgia pearls.

Only State made by England's King a free, sovereign, and independent State—George III, 1732.

Savannah has the lowest per cent of illiteracy of any city of its size in the world.—World Almanac.

Athens the lowest death rate of any city of its size in the world.—World Almanac.

No other State has a tree that owns itself—William H. Jackson had deed recorded; George Foster Peabody had tree protected.

No other State has a double-barrel cannon; it is true it almost killed the inventor when fired.

No other State had a Sidney Lanier.

No other State had an Uncle Remus.

No historian better than our Charles C. Jones. George Bancroft said so.

No finer statesman than William H. Crawford. Napoleon I bowed twice to him upon introduction.

No greater orator than Benjamin H. Hill. Called "the silver-tongued orator."

OF

HON. JOHN N. GARNER,

OF TEXAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, August 23, 1921.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, under leave to print, I insert the following letter, since it briefly, and I think favorably, shows the good that flows from our citizens' training camps:

CITIZENS' MILITARY TRAINING CAMP,
Camp Knox, Ky., August 18, 1921.

Hon. JOHN N. GARNER,
Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN: I have just said good-bye to Maj. FITZGERALD, a Representative from Ohio, who has spent two weeks with me, helping to train the young men I have in charge.

It would please me greatly if you would make an opportunity to talk with him about his experiences. He has been a great help to me; of great simplicity and earnestness, with fine personal standards; no task set him has been too trivial not to demand his best efforts. We have shown him all we have, have demonstrated what we believe to be our conception of the will of Congress regarding the training of the Organized Reserves. I hope he may be well listened to.

The letter I am inclosing herewith is self-explanatory. It reaches the parents of 1,225 boys who have successfully met all our standards. In addition to this letter, and that of the boys' closest officer, I am inclosing to parents a list of questions to be answered and returned to me, giving the parents reaction to the camp's influence on their boys. Also, in the cases of about 200 boys, parents are told of minor physical defects discovered in the very rigid physical examinations, and of our surgeon's recommendations, as to how these defects may be remedied.

We have had absolutely no bootlegging, no venereal, practically no sickness. The boys have gained more than 2 tons in weight; have grown more than 800 inches in height while here. Their chest expansion has increased an average of 1¼ inches. They are full of enthusiasm. I feel that the $90,000 of our money that you have permitted us to spend has been well invested.

I shall be in Washington next week and look forward to another visit with you after the recess.

With best wishes,

Very truly, yours,

F. C. MARSHALL.

HEADQUARTERS CITIZENS' MILITARY TRAINING CAMP,
Camp Knox, Ky., August 19, 1921.

From: The commanding officer Citizens' Military Training Camp, Fifth Corps Area.
To: The parents of a successful candidate.
Subject: Your son.

1. It is not possible for me to write each one of you the letter you should receive, giving you an account of how your son has conducted himself while on duty at this camp. So, in order that you may be advised on this point, I have directed the officer who has been in immediate command of your son to write you a letter for me and to inclose this one with it.

2. It is with great satisfaction that we can testify to the fine character of your boy, the earnest way he has applied himself to all duties assigned him, the manner in which he has endured the rough privations of camp life, and his willing observance of camp rules.

3. The purpose of this camp is to demonstrate to our citizens that military training and the military environment can profitably develop their sons, physically, mentally, and morally. We early dismissed from camp all young men who were idle, who resisted proper control, who exhibited incorrect habits, or who, it was feared, might have an improper influence on the group of boys in our charge. We feel that your son has taken full advantage of the opportunities offered him, and that he has been benefited physically, and that the national defense is strengthened because he has submitted to training.

4. The ultimate objective of these camps is to provide for the national defense a huge body of organized reserves composed of patriotic men of high character, who, by their mere existence, as organized and partially trained soldiers will convince all the world that the United States must be respected, and will, with certainty, insure our people and their homes from the terrors of war.

5. Please accept the thanks of the War Department for the loan of your son for this high purpose, and my personal congratulations that you have so fine a son.

Very sincerely, yours,

F. C. MARSHALL,
Colonel, Cavalry, Commanding.

OF

HON. WILLIAM W. LARSEN,

OF GEORGIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, August 22, 1921.

Mr. LARSEN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe the enactment of the proposed legislation can be justified. It is certainly in the interest of the wealthy classes and detrimental to the impoverished masses. When we talk about adjusted compensation for the soldiers who defended this country during the war and enabled the profiteers to horde their millions, you plead poverty; when the hard-pressed wheat grower of the West, the cotton and tobacco grower of the South, or other agricultural interests of the Nation asks a pittance at your hands to save them from bankruptcy and ruin, you have no money—the Treasury is depleted—but, when the railroads of the country, or other great financial interests, demand support, you respond immediately.

Government control of railroads in this country was intended as a war measure to aid the country and not primarily to enrich the roads. I am not sure it was either wise or that it can be justified. Certainly the roads should have been returned to their owners much earlier than was done.

The responsibility for inauguration of Government control rests upon the Democratic Party, but delay in returning them to private ownership must be charged to the Republicans. The armistice was signed November 11, 1918, less than a year after the roads were placed under Government control. During the same month, by the sovereign vote of the people, the legislative affairs of the Government in both branches of Congress were intrusted to the Republican Party. Being called into extra session to regulate the affairs of the country, you took more than 12 months to formulate legislation for return of the roads to private ownership, and then did so under such offensive legislation that those who voted for it were forced to hold their noses.

The Democratic Congress appropriated $500,000,000 for railroad operation during the period of Government control. The Republicans held them until March 1, 1920—about one and a half years after the war—and during the time appropriated $1,250,000,000. Not satisfied with this, you granted them a six months' guaranty period of 6 per cent by the Esch-Cummins bill, and this has cost at least $600,000,000 additional. Now, by the terms of this bill, you propose to give them about $500,000,000 more. You have sufficient Republican votes to do it, and I suppose you will do so; but it will not be by my vote.

Two and a half years of Government control demonstrated to the people that Government ownership is not advisable. There is certainly no immediate danger of Government ownership of the railroads—but railroad ownership of the Government is not so uncertain.

Gentlemen, I am not a pessimist, but it is not necessary for one to be pessimistic to see and understand that the trend of legislation in this country is most favorable to the corporate interests. The predatory interests of the country have enriched themselves at the expense of the masses until the burden has become unbearable.

I recently received a sample of high-grade tobacco from a very reputable constituent of mine, Mr. L. C. Goodin, of Abbeville, Ga. He stated to me that such grade is used in the manufacture of Bull Durham, Duke's Mixture, and Prince Albert smoking tobacco, and that thus manufactured it is sold at from $1.76 to $2.16 per pound. He advises that tobacco such as sample sent me sold last year for 25 cents per pound, in 1919 at 35 cents, in 1918 at from 45 to 50 cents, in 1917 from 50 to 60 cents, and says it is now selling at from 6 to 8 cents per pound. The wheat grower may illustrate by showing that his grain is now worth about one-fourth of what it sold for in 1917 and still be able to show that flour has not materially decreased and that bread is selling for 10 cents per loaf. The cotton producer can also show that his staple is worth not more than one-fourth of what it was two or three years ago and that manufactured cotton goods are beyond reach of the consumer.

Instead of endeavoring to tax the farmers of this country to support the railroads, whose freight and passenger rates you have increased more than 100 per cent, would it not be well to turn your attention to the agricultural interests of this country and see if you can not do something for them? Only last week you voted down a proposition to aid the farmer on the ground that the Government was financially unable to do so—this week you propose to give millions to the railroads. You must have grown very rich or generous in this short period. You can not continue such legislation. A suffering public will not stand for it and the righteous indignation of the people will not permit it.

$818,000,000 Lifted From Taxpayers' Shoulders.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. JOHN M. ROBSION,

OF KENTUCKY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921,

On the revenue bill (H. R. 8245) to reduce and equalize taxation, to amend and simplify the revenue act of 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. ROBSION. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, we are now nearing the close of the consideration of the new revenue bill, and I wish to submit some observations on this bill and reasons for giving it my support.

The present tax law was passed by a Democratic Congress before they lost control of the legislative branch of the Government on March 4, 1919. Perhaps no tax law has been the cause of more criticism and complaint than the present tax law. It has been universally condemned, and the Republican Congress is in no wise responsible for this iniquitous law. The bill under consideration proposes to amend the present tax law and give relief to the taxpayers of America. We wish to say at the outset that this bill will reduce the tax burden for the years of 1922 and 1923 $818,000,000—a reduction of $8 in taxes for every man, woman, and child in America.

DEMOCRATIC EXTRAVAGANCE AND CRIMINAL WASTE RESPONSIBLE.

We hear much from Democratic spellbinders, and will hear more from them in the future criticizing this bill; but who is responsible for the tremendous tax burdens that are now resting upon the shoulders of the people of the United States? We have inherited this burden because of the willful extravagance and criminal waste of the Wilson administration. When we turned control of the Government over to the Democrats in 1913 our national debt was about $1,000,000,000 and the annual expense of the Government was around $1,000,000,000.

When the Democrats turned control over to the Republicans March 4, 1921, the national debt and other obligations of the National Government were nearly $30,000,000,000 and the annual expenses of the Government were about $6,000,000,000. They had loaned to foreign countries about $10,000,000,000 and agreed with them that they would not have to pay the interest on this enormous sum for several years. This interest now amounts to over a billion dollars, and the Republican administration has been unable to collect the interest because of this agreement made with our foreign debtors by the Democratic administration. Wilson took over the railroads, telephone and telegraph lines, and steamship lines, and this cost the taxpayers of America more than $4,000,000,000, more than the entire cost of the Civil War, and we still owe the railroads a large sum. The Wilson administration undertook to build a merchant marine, and this took more than four billions more of the taxpayers' money. We still have these ships on our hands. We can not sell them without great loss, and we have been losing about $1,000,000 per day undertaking to operate them. As further evidence of waste and extravagance, we built a lot of so-called wooden ships. The Shipping Board the other day sold 205 of these ships at $2,100 apiece, about one-half million of dollars for the 205. These 205 ships cost the Wilson administration $270,000,000.

After the armistice was signed the Wilson administration bought and had delivered 70,000 high-priced automobiles and trucks; 40,000 of these were sent to France, mark you, after the armistice was signed. Thousands of others were piled up in the open at various places in this country and were lost or destroyed. After the armistice was signed we had in France more than $1,700,000,000 worth of hams, sugar, clothing, automobiles, and other high-class supplies. We sold all of these to the French Government for $430,000,000. We lost $1,270,000,000. We sold 24,000,000 pounds of sugar at 2 cents per pound when the American housewife was paying 30 cents per pound for the same kind of sugar. We sold millions of yards of good cloth that cost $3.85 per yard for 80 and 85 cents per yard.

THIRTY-SIX MILLION SETS OF SPURS FOR ABOUT 130,000 HORSES.

We had 148,000 horses, and for these the Democratic administration provided 975,000 saddles, 1,500,000 halters, 195,000 branding irons, costing $14 apiece, to brand the letters "U. S." on the hoofs, more than a million currycombs, and 36,000,000 sets of spurs. They provided about 7 saddles, 10 halters, 5 sets of harness, 4 sets of currycombs, brushes, and blankets, 20 sets of spurs, and more than 1 set of branding irons for every horse we had in the Army, but not a single horse was branded with any of these 195,000 branding irons. They spent hundreds of millions for so-called powder plants without producing a pound of powder. Although we only used 6,000,000 shells for the Army and Navy during the World War, after the war the Democratic administration tried to purchase and keep on hand 22,000,000 shells. They bought $97,000,000 worth of nitrate and had it on hand, as they said, to make explosives for future wars. They spent nearly a hundred million to put up temporary buildings to furnish quarters for Government employees. Some of these buildings were never used. They are now being torn down. The Government could have made each employee taken care of in these buildings a present of a nice house and lot a free gift and made money. President Wilson, with about 1,500 aids, wound up the orgy of waste and extravagance by going to Europe, spending millions of dollars, to bring back to the American people the League of Nations, which has been repudiated by both Democrats and Republicans and the American people with a majority of more than 7,000,000. The Wilson administration spent the people's money, the hard-earned dollars of both the rich and poor of this country, like drunken sailors. Now pay day has come. This Republican Congress must devise ways and means to meet the payment of money wasted by the last administration. Democratic spellbinders will now abuse the Republican administration for meeting the obligations and debts created by them. Their waste and extravagance and unwise legislation have paralyzed business and almost wrecked the country. The Republican administration, like ambulances following a great battle, must now gather up the sick and wounded and nurse them back to life and health. It is much easier to tear down than it is to build up. We must restore business conditions in the country. We must take care of the obligations growing out of the war. We must have about $4,000,000,000 per year. Part of this will be produced by a tariff on imports and the balance of the revenue must be produced by this bill.

RELIEF TO ALL CLASSES.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon recommended that the postage on first-class letter mail be increased from 2 cents to 3 cents, that a tax of $10 be placed on every automobile in America, and a $10 tax be placed on every soft-drink stand in America. The Congress thought these recommendations unwise and have cut them out. First-class letter mail is already paying its full part of the burden. It would not be fair to put the same tax on a Ford as on a Pierce-Arrow car. It would not be just to put the same $10 tax on a soft-drink stand with a capital of $50 as a soft-drink stand with a capital of $500,000. We also cut out the so-called "nuisance taxes"; that is, the 1 cent, and so forth, taxes on ice-cream cones, lemonade, and so forth. We also cut off the taxes on shoes and clothing.

TRANSPORTATION TAXES REPEALED.

It was a Democratic Congress that put all of these obnoxious taxes on the American people, including a heavy tax on passenger fares and freight rates. This bill repeals the transportation taxes; that is, the taxes on railroad tickets, freight rates, and express rates. This affects everybody in America. This will take effect the 1st of January, 1922, and will save the American people next year $202,500,000 in taxes.

MEN OF SMALL INCOMES HELPED.

Under the present law a married man with a family has an exemption of $2,000 and $200 for each dependent child. Sixty per cent of the persons who pay tax on an income are married men with families whose incomes are more than $2,000 and less than $5,000. This bill gives all of such an exemption of $2,500 instead of $2,000 and $400 exemption for each dependent child instead of $200. This will save to these small income taxpayers $70,000,000 per year in this country, and under this provision hundreds of thousands of married men, who have been paying income taxes under the present law, will not be required to pay any tax under this bill.

I OPPOSE REPEAL OF SURTAX ON LARGE INCOMES.

This bill cuts down the surtax on incomes of $70,000 and more from 65 per cent down to 32 per cent. This undoubtedly does help men of large incomes. If I understand this bill, it provides a surtax of 32 per cent on incomes of $70,000 and more. The present law permits the surtax to go as high as 65 per cent on incomes of $1,000,000. I think this provision of the law should stand, and I, with 49 other Republicans voted for the motion to cut out the provision in this bill that reduces the surtax on large incomes.

Taxes must be laid and paid according to the ability of the persons to pay. Men having large incomes—most of them made tremendous profits out of the war—should be required to carry a proportionate amount of the taxes to pay the expenses of the war. I know it means much to give 65 per cent of your income to taxes, but thousands of American boys gave their lives to defend this country, as well as the large property holdings of men of these large incomes, and if our boys had not won the war the German Government would have taken much more from these men of large estates and large incomes than the present law takes. A man with a million income can give $650,000 of it for taxes, and yet can not in a legitimate way, for his necessary expenses, use the balance of $350,000. He can pay six hundred and fifty thousand in taxes much easier than many American citizens could pay $5 in taxes. I realize that those who favor cutting down this surtax have some excellent reasons. It has been generally stated by men who know that no Government in peace time can successfully collect more than 25 per cent of a man's income. When it gets higher than 25 per cent, rather than to pay any such sum they will shift their property and dodge the tax in other ways. Under the bill 32 per cent of the income may be collected on all of the incomes of all individuals of $70,000 or more. It is also shown that at the beginning of the World War about $3,000,000,000 was invested in State, municipal, and other tax-exempt bonds. Now there are about $16,000,000,000 invested in these bonds. The reason assigned for this is that the rich men of this country, in order to avoid the heavy surtaxes now provided by law, have withdrawn their money from productive industries and invested their money in these tax-exempt bonds. It is argued by Mr. FORDNEY, the chairman of this committee, and others that if surtaxes are reduced these rich men will again invest their money in factories, railroads, mines, and other industries, and in that way provide employment, and the workers of the country, being employed, will furnish a market for the producers of this country, and to reduce these surtaxes will revive business. This may be true. I hope it will, but I dislike to think that the men who are best able to pay the taxes to meet the burdens of the late war can escape in this way. As a matter of principal and justice, I am opposed to this reduction of the surtaxes on these large incomes.

REPEAL EXCESS-PROFITS TAXES.

This bill repeals the excess-profits taxes on corporations and increases the normal corporation tax from 10 per cent to 12½ per cent. From the facts before us I am satisfied that the excess-profits tax provisions of the present law do not reach the big corporations. They fall on the little corporations of the country. The big corporations have so much "watered stock" and are so much overcapitalized that it is impossible for them to make excess profit on their capital. They have increased their capital in order to avoid excess-profits taxes. The small corporations that have an honest investment and an honest capitalization and who have not learned the tricks of "watered stock" or "overcapitalization" or do not desire to engage in such questionable practices are hit by this excess-profits tax law. They pay the penalty for doing an honest and decent business. Because of business depression small concerns were hit hard. It is made clear that the repeal of this part of the law would encourage small business and help put the country on its feet, and for that reason I favor this provision. Under the present law the small corporations are carrying the burden of the big corporations. The big corporations, like the Standard Oil Co. and others, have been dodging other millions of dollars in taxes by issuing new stock to absorb dividends instead of paying the dividends in money.

WAR OVER—TAXES MUST BE REDUCED.

The war is over and has been over for nearly three years. Taxes must be reduced and simplified. There was some excuse for these high taxes while we were in war. The people and the business concerns can not live under them in time of peace. These enormous taxes are killing business enterprises. This bill is not all that I should like it to be, but it reduces taxes all along the line, and every Member of this House who favors the reduction of taxes should vote for it.

Refunding Foreign Loans.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. WILLIAM F. KOPP,

OF IOWA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, August 23, 1921.

Mr. KOPP. Mr. Speaker, the American people are intensely concerned about the debts due to the United States from foreign Governments. Practically no interest has been paid upon them, and they now amount to more than $11,000,000,000. If these debts were paid, more than two-fifths of our national debt would be wiped out, and the interest due on our national debt would be diminished by $500,000,000 annually.

The American people are groaning under a heavy burden of taxation and demand relief. They want the interest on our foreign loans paid promptly from year to year, and they want the principal paid at the earliest possible date.

This country is full of European propaganda, backed by international bankers. The first purpose of this propaganda was to procure entire cancellation of the debts due us from foreign Governments. That scheme having failed, the present purpose of this propaganda is to postpone payment of these debts for a long time upon terms unfavorable to the United States, and thus in effect secure partial cancellation.

The men in charge of this propaganda are exceedingly clever. They possess great cunning. They have vast resources at their command. They know how to play the game. Nevertheless, I can not believe that the American people will be misled or deceived. I can not believe that this propaganda will ever accomplish its intended purpose.

To show how keenly and deeply the American people feel on this subject, I want to insert as part of my remarks a resolution recently adopted by a body of substantial and patriotic citizens of my home community, said resolutions being as follows:

Whereas the Mount Pleasant Council of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic is an organization composed of a large number of citizens, residents of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, and Henry County, Iowa, who, while having at heart the rights and liberties of all peoples, are, above all, interested in the welfare and just treatment of the citizens of the United States; and

Whereas the United States is undergoing a desperate financial depression, causing the suspension of industries and the consequent unemployment of millions of our citizens; and

Whereas the indebtedness of foreign nations to the United States, including principal and interest, now amounts to more than $11,000,000,000, and these debtor nations are now doing all in their power to arrange for canceling or deferring these debts in a manner suited to the best interests of the debtor; and

Whereas the Penrose bill (S. 2135), which provides for the refunding of these debts, has been recently reported to the Senate, which bill proposes to give to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States complete power to make final disposition of these debts without submitting the terms of settlement for the approval of Congress: Be it

Resolved, That the Mount Pleasant Council of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic protest the passing of the Penrose bill (S. 2135) by Congress, giving the Secretary of the Treasury unlimited power to refund or otherwise dispose of the indebtedness of foreign countries, and particularly Great Britain, and that the Senators and Representatives from Iowa be urged to do all in their power to defeat the passing of the bill by Congress, or any other bill providing for the refunding of foreign debts without submitting complete terms of settlement to Congress for its approval.

Taxation.

OF
HON. EDWARD VOIGT, OF WISCONSIN,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 8245) to reduce and equalize taxation, to amend and simplify the revenue act of 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. VOIGT. Mr. Speaker, it will cost at least $4,500,000,000 to run the United States Government from July 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922. Before the war the cost of Government was around a billion dollars a year. Now the interest on the public debt alone amounts to that, and we have the disabled soldiers of the late war to take care of and other charges growing out of the war, and it is very probable that the annual expenditures of the Government will run between three and four billion dollars for many years to come. At the outbreak of the war the public debt was about a billion—a relic of the Civil War—now it is $24,000,000,000, and we have $10,000,000,000 coming from the Allies. They have paid us no interest, and will probably pay us no interest for another year or two, and the Lord only knows when they will pay the principal. The Allies are spending billions for standing armies and armaments; it would be better for them and for us if they were to stop this useless expenditure and pay us interest at once and arrange to pay the principal in reasonable installments.

It is claimed by some that future generations should pay part of the cost of the war, because it is claimed they will reap some of the benefits of this war "to make the world safe for democracy." Personally I believe that the treaty of Versailles has sown the seeds of many future wars, and future generations will have plenty of their own wars to pay for, and should not be burdened with debts not made by them. Judging by past history, I regret to conclude that statesmen and politicians will juggle and juggle so that part of this enormous debt will be unpaid a hundred, perhaps two hundred, years from now. We will probably pay out in interest from five to ten times the amount of the debt before the principal is paid. My position is, that that is poor business, and that the debt should be paid with reasonable dispatch. We ought to collect an additional amount in taxes every year so that with what we hope to get from the Allies we can shake off this debt in 20 or 25 years.

Now, then, we have the enormous war debt, and for the present at least we must raise at least four billions a year to keep the Government going, and that raises the question, How should this money be collected? In fairness to all the people of this country, who should pay? I recognize but one principal way to collect taxes, and that is to make every man pay according to his ability, and that ability can best be measured by his net income. Of course, we derive some revenue from the tariff, and minor amounts from other sources, the collection of which may be proper and expedient, but what I mean to say is that in my judgment there is only one fair way for the Government to raise the bulk of its revenue, and that is by a properly graded income tax. Let him pay who makes the money, and the more he makes the higher should be his tax.

The bill before us does not meet these requirements, and therefore I am going to vote against it. I can not vote for a bill which appears to me to be unfair to the great mass of the American people. This bill lifts the burden from the very rich individuals and corporations and gives no corresponding benefit to those less favorably situated. In fact, when the total burden imposed by this bill is considered, the proportion of the whole tax to be paid by the less wealthy is actually increased. Of course, the bill is hailed with joy by big business, by the trusts, and the millionaires and multimillionaires.

There has been a howling propaganda directed at Members of Congress for months past claiming that the excess-profits tax on corporations should be repealed in order to bring about a revival of business. The excess-profits tax, it is true, was enacted as a war measure, but it is a just tax which may well be retained in peace times, and should at all events be continued so long as the burdens of the war are with us. The excess-profits tax on corporations in substance is this: The higher your rate of income on your investment the higher your rate of tax. Who will say that this is not a proper method of taxation? It is claimed that this bill will bring about a saving in taxation of seven or eight hundred million dollars, but the question that I am interested in is, Whose money is going to be saved?

The bill no doubt will save that amount to the millionaire class and not for the great mass of the people. During the past five years the corporations of the United States have made net profits of $47,000,000,000, and after paying all taxes they had left net profits of thirty-eight billions. Four-fifths of this money was made by about 10,000 corporations, although over 300,000 corporations made income-tax returns. About $19,000,000,000 was made by a thousand corporations, in round numbers, such as the Steel Trust, the Powder Trust, the Standard Oil, the Bethlehem Steel, the Coal Trust, the Woolen Trust, the Packer Trust, and so forth. The Steel Trust made over five hundred millions in 1918. When we repeal the excess-profits tax we are relieving a small number of monster profiteering corporations making anywhere from 15 to 50 per cent, placing a heavier weight on thousands and thousands of smaller corporations which make only a reasonable profit. This course violates the first principle of taxation.

The excess-profits tax provides that the first $3,000 of a corporation's income shall not be taxed. In addition to this, a corporation is allowed a profit of 8 per cent per year upon its invested capital. The excess-profits tax applies only to profits above such exemption. The next 20 per cent of the profits is taxed at the rate of 20 per cent. When the profits go above the 8 per cent and the 20 per cent, then the rate is 40 per cent. Under this law the greedy profiteering corporations have been compelled to pay into the Treasury part of the loot which they stole from the people during the war. It is claimed that the excess-profits tax is passed on to the consumer and that the corporations really do not pay it. It is probable that a small part of this tax is collected from the public in increased prices, but I am convinced that the bulk of the billions paid in excess profits would have been retained by these corporations if it had not been for the excess-profits tax. If it is a fact that the excess-profits tax is passed on to the consumer, then why are all big business corporations in the country asking for its repeal? If they can pass on to the consumer the excess-profits tax, they can pass to the consumer all other taxes. The fact is that the profiteers who shamefully robbed the American people out of billions of dollars during the war would have taken all they could gouge out of the American people, tax or no tax.

It should be remembered that while these big corporations were making unheard of profits our soldier boys were drafted, many of them against their wills, and sent 3,000 miles across the sea to make the world safe for democracy, as it was claimed. These boys had to face shot and shell, and many of them laid down their lives, and they were drawing very small compensation, while not a single officer or director of these corporations who raked in the billions risked his life or limb in any way. The soldiers' bonus law has been sidetracked. Would it not be better to keep in force the excess-profits tax and carry out the promised soldier bonus legislation? I do not want to see anyone make money out of war, because I do not want to hold out such an inducement to war, and therefore I think that the excess-profits tax should be retained until we have paid the soldier boys the bonus which is due them and until our $24,000,000,000 debt is wiped out.

In lieu of the excess-profits tax it is now proposed to put a flat tax of 12½ per cent on profits of corporations. As I have said, this will increase taxation to many thousand small corporations who are making only a small profit. A corporation having a capital of $250,000 and making 8 per cent profit under the present law pays $1,800 in taxes and under the proposed law will pay $2,250. Under the present law, a corporation with the same capital which makes 50 per cent pays a tax of $44,160 and under the proposed law $15,375. Under the present law a corporation with a capital of $10,000,000 which makes 50 per cent is taxed $1,795,260, and under the proposed law the tax will be $624,750. No wonder big business is in favor of the repeal of the excess-profits tax.

Furthermore, it is proposed by this bill to reduce the income tax of the very rich. Any individual who is fortunate enough to have an income of $70,000 per year or more is going to have his taxes reduced as per the following table:

Effect of reductions of surtax on individual incomes as proposed in H. R. 8245.

Income.	Reduction.
72,000	60
76,000	200
78,000	300
84,000	720
86,000	900
88,000	1,100
90,000	1,320
92,000	1,560
94,000	1,820
96,000	2,100
98,000	2,400
100,000	2,720
150,000	12,720
200,000	24,720
300,000	52,720
500,000	114,720
1,000,000	274,720
1,500,000	439,720
2,000,000	604,720
5,000,000	1,594,720

For reasons already stated, I am opposed to this reduction. This reduction will benefit a comparatively few of our very rich men, but will do nothing for over 5,000,000 others who pay income taxes. It looks to me like a disgrace that our Government allowed these men to accumulate billions during the war while our boys were fighting and dying in Europe and then leave the boys and their families and the common people to stagger under a big bonded debt besides.

The bill provides that the Secretary of the Treasury shall have the authority to float an additional loan to the extent of $500,000,000. Evidently the committee fears that the taxes have been so reduced to the rich that the Government will not have enough money and that we will have to borrow and further increase the public debt. I think that this provision should be taken out of the bill and that sufficient taxes should be collected so that a bond issue will be out of the question. Another provision of the bill to which I object provides that individuals and corporations, 80 per cent of whose incomes are received from business done in foreign countries, shall be exempt from taxation. It is claimed that such a provision is necessary in order to give our citizens equal opportunity with citizens of foreign countries. If an American citizen is not willing to pay his just share of taxation here at home, let him keep his capital in the United States. Furthermore, many of our corporations, like the Standard Oil Co., which do business all over the world, will simply form corporations to do their foreign business, and no matter what profits they make, they will escape taxation.

It is claimed that unless we reduce income taxes that the very rich will invest their funds in tax-exempt securities. We now have securities estimated anywhere from eighteen to twenty-five billion dollars, issued by the Government, agencies of the Government, States, counties, cities, and so forth, the interest from which is exempt from income taxation. I have no doubt that the millionaire class of this country is very largely holding these securities because they have bought them in order to escape taxation in the past. They can not all put their money into these securities, because there will not be enough to go around.

If anyone buys them for the purpose of escaping taxation he will probably cause some one to pay taxes who holds these securities now. I do not think there will be much shifting of nontaxable securities under this bill, as the rich have them and will keep them in order to escape taxation. The whole theory on which tax-exemption securities are issued is wrong. Every income above a reasonable exemption should pay its share of the cost of Government, no matter how that income is derived. We should have a constitutional amendment making it impossible hereafter to issue tax-exempt securities.

There are some good features in this bill, but they are all of minor importance in view of the repeal of the excess-profits tax and reduction on large incomes. The bill provides for a repeal of the tax on freight, passenger, and express charges. It would be well if we could go a step further and provide for a reduction of the present exorbitant rates. These rates hamper business much more than the income tax. The bill also increases the exemption of the head of a family from $2,000 to $2,500, provided that the income does not exceed $5,000; in other words, it saves a few dollars in taxes for any married man or head of a family whose income is between $2,500 and $5,000 per year. If I had my way about this, I would exempt from income tax the head of a family up to $4,000 and would allow an exemption of $500 for each dependent child, and would exempt the income of single individuals up to $2,000. The bill also exempts taxes on soft drinks, ice cream, and toys. This I approve of, because consumption taxes in general do not distribute the burdens of taxation equally. The bill, on the other hand, puts a tax on cereal beverages, fruit juices, and soft drinks, to be paid by the manufacturer. This tax, of course, will be paid by the public, but they will not notice it as a direct payment. These indirect taxes might well have been omitted and the amount hoped to be realized therefrom added to income taxes. If the tax on express charges is repealed, the taxes on parcel-post shipments should also be repealed. This one-sided arrangement will give express companies an advantage over the parcel post operated by the Government. The taxes on sporting goods, candy, electric fans, furs, and expensive articles of wearing apparel are also repealed.

It will doubtless be good news to the average housewife that she can now buy a carpet costing over $5 per yard, a picture frame for over $10, a trunk for over $50, a necktie for over $2, silk stockings for over $2 per pair, without being obliged to pay taxes. This will be a wonderful relief to the common people of my district.

We should provide for a heavier tax on large estates of deceased persons. According to the statistical abstract for 1920, the wealth of the three countries stated below was as follows:

United States	$250,000,000,000
Great Britain	80,000,000,000
France	70,000,000,000

During the last fiscal year these countries collected in inheritance taxes the following amounts:

United States	$150,000,000
Great Britain	231,962,940
France	179,160,743

If we levy an inheritance tax according to English rates we could raise annually about $700,000,000 and according to French rates we could raise about $625,000,000. This step alone would enable us to provide for a decent exemption from income taxation to every taxpayer in the country and would enable us to wipe out consumption and transfer taxes altogether and still have a margin in the Treasury.

I hope that the Senate will amend this bill so that I can vote for it when it comes back, but I shall never vote for a bill which relieves those who made billions during the war from the payment of the war debt, and from the payment of their just share of the cost of running the Government.

The Tariff Bill.

OF

HON. EVERETT SANDERS,

OF INDIANA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 14, 1921.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, this tariff bill with its 365 pages dealing with 10,000 items, with its carefully drawn administrative features, is a complete answer to the complaint that there has been delay in inaugurating the protective policy. It is a matter almost of wonder that the Committee on Ways and Means has been able to complete this great task in the time in which they have reported it.

The protective principle embodied in the bill has been applied by adding a duty on foreign goods imported into this country which equals the difference of cost of production here and in the foreign countries. The wages paid foreign labor is greatly less than the wages paid labor in this country, and unless such duty is laid it is too plain for argument that such products will be dumped into this country and our industries manufacturing like products must be closed and employees will be put out of business.

The coal industry, for example, depends for its stability upon the operation of factories in America, for practically all our coal market is a domestic market. It will mean disaster to the coal industry if the forges of other countries are glowing while the forges of our country lie idle. If the smoke shall roll from the smokestacks of foreign factories instead of our factories, then our coal mines will be more idle than at present.

In 1914, prior to the European war, the factories of this country were closed and our markets were being flooded with foreign products. The European war, even before we entered, not only stopped the shipping from foreign countries to a large extent, but furnished our factories with employment in the manufacture of war materials.

But now the war is over; these other countries are starting their factories, and we are soon to be subject to the cutthroat competition of cheap labor. We want the American standard of living, and there is no other way to preserve it.

Mr. Chairman, I am glad of the opportunity to speak in favor of the pending bill. The argument that has been made, to give employment to laboring men in Germany, Austria, and Japan in order that they might be furnished with money to provide a market for the sale of some of the surplus products of this country, does not appeal to me. I represent a district in which there are many manufactured products that are being manufactured to-day which, if it were not for the emergency tariff bill, would not be manufactured. For instance, we have in the district which I have the honor to represent the Commercial Solvents Corporation, which manufactures commercial alcohol. Since we have had prohibition in this country there are no such things as by-products of alcohol manufactured in the ordinary way. Their product comes into competition with the by-products of European countries, such as fusel oil, which can be sent over here and sold for a price that will absolutely put the manufacturers of my district out of business. They use in that manufacture 2,000,000 bushels of corn per year. They use 500,000 tons of coal per year. If they are to have no protection and are to go out of business, in a short time the people who furnish that product from foreign countries would absolutely control the market and would sell the product at a higher price than that at which it is now sold.

That is a mere illustration, Mr. Chairman. We have also the Columbian Enameling & Stamping Works, which manufactures enameled ware. If that establishment is to be put in competition with Germany and Austria without protection it means absolutely that that manufacturing business can no longer exist, and can no longer give employment to the thousands of employees now earning a livelihood in such industry. And I can not see my way, Mr. Chairman, to advocating the adoption of a policy which will absolutely wipe these manufacturers out of existence in order to furnish employment abroad. [Applause.]

OF

HON. FREDERICK C. HICKS,

OF NEW YORK,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Speaker, in June and July there were held some bombing tests against ex-German war vessels. The report of the experiments has been issued by the Joint Army and Navy Board, and as this subject is commanding the attention of many people, I ask unanimous consent that I may insert it in the RECORD.

The matter referred to is as follows:

AIRCRAFT VERSUS DREADNAUGHTS.

(By Congressman FREDERICK C. HICKS, of New York, member of Naval Affairs Committee, House of Representatives, chairman of subcommittee on naval aviation.)

The bombs which opened the seams of the ex-German warships and sent them to the bottom of the sea in the recent airplane bombing tests off the Virginia Capes also opened up a controversy which bids fair to be bitter and long contested.

Startling as the results unquestionably were and far-reaching as they may prove to be, it would not be the part of wisdom to draw too hasty conclusions or assert that battleships had thereby been eliminated. Epoch making as these tests undoubtedly were, the assumption that naval supremacy has definitely passed to aircraft is not justified. While that premier position may be approached by aviation with the perfection of enlarged types of planes, better appliances, and heavier bombs, it seems hardly probable that aircraft, even with the great development, which we feel certain will take place, will supersede surface ships as the backbone of the Navy. There are, however, many well-informed persons who honestly believe the doom of the battleship in its present expensive and vulnerable form has been sounded and that future naval conflicts will be fought in the air. This feeling may be due in part to a prejudice which has evidently arisen against the heavy, highly complicated, expensive dreadnaughts with their constantly mounting operation and maintenance costs, and the attendant expense of the necessary auxiliary craft, dry docks, machine shops, and large crews. There are also many who think that the era of big battleship construction has reached its crest and that the stage is set for some new weapon. This opposition to the capital ship may be due in some measure to the appeal which aviation makes to the imagination. It is new, it is spectacular; it is an economical method of waging war, and, therefore, fits in with the American idea of the "short cut." Above all it has proven itself efficient.

That changes, and very material changes, not alone in naval maneuvers and naval construction but in all future building programs and policies must be made as the result of the tests are inevitable if we are to profit by those lessons. These modifications will mean a reduction in battleship construction and an increase in aircraft construction in order to properly round out the Navy.

To those who fail to see in the demonstration the necessity of changes in our naval program to meet the new conditions of combat—and unfortunately there will be many—let me quote from Admiral Percy Scott, of the British Navy, a recognized authority on naval matters:

"Obstinate opposition to change and reform is, in my opinion, a crime. In these days of rapid advance of science and swift development of mechanics, unless we move ahead we are bound to retrograde. Submarines and airplanes have entirely revolutionized naval warfare, for no fleet can hide itself from the airplane eye. The future is with the airplane, which is going to develop rapidly in the next few years."

Lord Fisher, first sea lord of the British Admiralty, said in 1919:

"Flying dominates future war, both by land and sea."

Whatever reasons may be advanced to explain the sinkings, the results clearly demonstrated that battleships are vulnerable to airplane attack. While dreadnaughts have not been made obsolete, as now constructed and with present defenses, it is doubtful if they can survive a well-organized and adequately equipped airplane attack. This statement is borne out by the following extract from the report submitted by the Joint Army and Navy Board:

"The experiments definitely determined in each case that the projectiles used were superior to the defensive features of construction of the vessels attacked. * * * Aircraft carrying high-capacity, high-explosive bombs of sufficient size have adequate offensive power to sink or seriously damage any naval vessel at present constructed, provided such projectiles can be placed in the water close alongside the vessel. Furthermore, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to build any type of vessel of sufficient strength to withstand the destructive force that can be obtained with the largest bombs that airplanes may be able to carry from shore bases or sheltered harbors."

Before the tests were made many experts expressed the opinion that the ships would not be sunk, and that while the bombs would probably "mess up the decks and superstructure a little," the hull proper and the turrets would not be fatally injured, and yet 20 minutes after the opening of the attack by the 2,000-pound bombs the Ostfriesland, a heavily armored battleship of 25,000 tons displacement, was lying on the bottom of the sea.

It is only fair to state that previous to the launching of the 2,000-pound bombs the ship had undergone a severe bombardment by explosives weighing as high as 600 pounds, and also by 11 bombs weighing 1,000 pounds each. This attack probably weakened the underwater structure and caused the flooding of at least one compartment. This damage, which might have been repaired had a crew been on board, may have been a contributing factor in the final result, but in my opinion, whether the preliminary bombardment had taken place or not, the 2,000-pound bombs would themselves have destroyed the ship.

Let it be remembered that this ship was not of an obsolete type, and while not comparable with our latest dreadnaughts, was of modern construction. She was built in 1909, under the specific instructions of Admiral Von Tirpitz, to be made as unsinkable as possible. To accomplish this her hull was divided into numerous water-tight compartments by heavy bulkheads, longitudinal as well as transverse, and three skins amidships and two fore and aft of her machinery were provided to protect her from mines and torpedoes.

In all fairness it should be stated that in the tests, which ostensibly were to demonstrate the effect of heavy bombs on armored decks and steel plating, advantage lay with the attacking force. The battleship was merely a mark; a stationary, inert, defenseless target, over which the airplanes maneuvered without fear of punishment or derangement of sights. The weather conditions were perfect. No limit prescribed the altitude at which the planes were to operate; no smoke screen obscured their vision; no antiaircraft guns challenged their approach; no enemy pursuit planes disputed their control of the air. It would, of course, be impossible for these conditions to prevail in war time. The target being motionless was, of course, a great advantage to the attack. This was clearly demonstrated in the tests on the radio-controlled ex-Iowa, where the number of hits by dummy bombs was relatively small. The obvious inference to be drawn from that demonstration is that a moving ship is not so easy to hit as one that is a fixed target.

Yet, no matter from which angle the argument against aviation may be presented or reasons advanced for the destruction of the vessels, the fact remains that the ships were sunk by bombs dropped from airplanes operating 80 miles out at sea. And they were sunk in an incredibly short space of time after the heavy bombs were called into play. The aviation enthusiasts claim they can repeat the performance irrespective of the movement or gunfire of the target, and that with improved sights and heavier bombs no battleship can survive their attack. They assert that aviators will be willing to risk any barrage a battleship may raise against them and that, while the altitudes at which they flew during the tests—1,200 to 2,000 feet—brought them within range of antiaircraft guns, the danger of being hit is so slight that men will take the chance. They claim that their altitude is determined not by the guns of the target but by the concussion of their own bombs. This pays a tribute to American daring which I do not dispute, but it seems hardly probable that bombing under war conditions can be successfully carried on at close ranges. To inaugurate and maintain an offensive program in which the chances of destruction of men and machines would be so large would probably not be justified from a military standpoint. Apart from the humanitarian side of the question, it would seem futile to launch an attack when fatal injury to attacking force before it reached the position for making a hit would be almost a certainty. It would be a sacrifice of personnel and a waste of equipment without accomplishing results, for it must be remembered that unless a plane reaches the exact spot in the sky from which a descending bomb will strike a target the plane is harmless. All energy expended before that spot is reached is of no avail. That high altitudes must be sought in warfare seems inevitable, especially in view of the development which is certain to take place in defensive weapons. If this proves to be the case it will materially reduce the chances of hitting unless vast improvements are made in the sighting instruments and stabilizing devices are devised. In aviation, as in artillery, the old saying is true: "The larger the distance the smaller the hits."

There is another factor which bears upon this subject of altitude, and that is in reference to the use of armor-piercing shells. That projectiles as large, if not larger, than those used in gunfire will be carried in airplanes is certain, and unless some method is invented of imparting to the descending shell a greater striking force than that given by gravitation, this of itself will compel the attack being made at high altitudes in order to secure penetration. It is estimated that for a 14-inch shell to pierce 5 inches of armored deck it must have a vertical drop of about 8,000 feet.

I merely mention this to include another weapon of destruction, realizing that while a direct hit by an armor-piercing shell would do great damage, it would probably be more effective to use only delayed fuse bombs, depending upon a close-by underwater explosion. In this connection it is well to remember three things: First, that while an A. P. shell might penetrate, the altitude from which it would have to be discharged would seriously reduce the chances of hitting; second, that in proportion to the weight of projectile, the A. P. shell carries only about 3 per cent of its weight in T. N. T., while in a bomb the amount of T. N. T. is 50 to 70 per cent of its weight; third, that the most vulnerable part of a ship is its bottom, and therefore the attack should be made where the chances of success are greatest. Explosions 40 to 60 feet below the surface are more disastrous to ship's plates than those at or just below the surface.

It may be that the solution of the problem of high-altitude bombing lies in sights and appliances, and it is reasonable to suppose that the accuracy of dropping bombs from a moving airplane will attain the same precision which now marks the accuracy of gunfire from the rolling deck of a battleship, with ranges vastly greater. The dreadnaught advocates maintain that by the use of antiaircraft guns and enlarged machine guns airplanes could not approach within any distance which would insure them chances of hitting. They also insist that by maneuvering at high speed the bomber would not be able to adjust his sights to the target. By providing heavier decks and additional water-tight compartments, they claim that capital ships could not be destroyed.

In discussing the interesting and complex question of airplane attack it must be remembered that gunfire from the deck of a ship and bomb dropping from an airplane are two distinct problems. Gunfire can be directed practically in any direction and at varying angles of deflection to meet the changes of distance. It can be continuous within the range of the gun, and the speed of the vessel is merely an element in calculating the flight of the projectile. There is no limit of time in which the salvos must be made, each shot depending upon the relative position of the ship to its target, with the calculations adjusted to meet the change in range at the moment of discharge.

With aircraft the shots depend upon force of gravity, ground speed of plane at time of discharge, and the drift, the latter being a more or less indeterminate factor and varying with velocity of side motion of plane at time of dropping bomb.

The bombing problem can be compared to the gun problem if the bomb is considered as a projectile fired horizontally with an initial velocity equal to the speed of the plane over the ground. But this bomb-release device can be neither trained nor elevated except by changing the course of the plane. This requires that the plane steadies itself on a level, straight course before the instant of release and maintains this course for quite an appreciable time. Even small variations in course or inclination will cause a miss.

For airplanes there is only one position for each direction of attack from which they can hope to make a hit, and there is only the smallest interval of time in which to discharge the bomb. This zone in which the plane must be for effective firing is always the exact size of the danger zone of the target and will remain so as long as gravity is the force utilized to carry the bomb to the target. While its position in the sky will vary, according to the speed of the plane, the altitude, and the force of the wind which may change the trajectory of the bomb, its size will remain the same, and this zone the plane must enter in order to make a hit. If the pilot succeeds in maneuvering his plane into the proper position on a level, straight course and the bomb is released at the exact moment, a hit will result. Should the plane not enter this zone, or on entering it not be on a level course headed in the proper direction, or should a delay take place in the discharge, it would be useless to fire, for there can be no ranging of these gravity bombs. In this case the flight would have to be repeated and another attempt made.

On the side of the battleship, it may be justly contended that while the Ostfriesland was a modern battleship, somewhat similar to the Florida, she was not equal to our latest capital ships in constructive strength and nonsinkable devices with which our most recent dreadnaughts and cruisers are and will be provided. Some of the leakage of both, the Frankfurt and the Ostfriesland, the result of "near-by" water hits, could probably have been checked by the use of pumps and shoring of bulkheads. I can not refrain from stating, however, that, in my opinion, the damage inflicted below the water line by several of the heavy bombs was of such a character as to be wholly beyond the ability of any crew to cope with, and that the ship was doomed the moment these charges exploded.

On the other side of the equation, it must be borne in mind that while the target was helpless in warding off attack by the use of antiaircraft guns and was unable to zigzag to confuse the bomb sighter, the target was also immune from the possibility that a chance shot might destroy her boilers or fire the tons of explosives which normally she would have in her ammunition chambers. Of all dangers to which a battleship is subjected the danger of a magazine explosion is the most dreaded.

It should also be remembered that the ship was not subjected to the fire of armor-piercing shells, from which, if a direct hit had been made from a sufficient height, her protected deck might have been pierced and her vitals destroyed. Had this type of shell been used the deck hits might have been as destructive as the "close by" water hits. And in this connection sight must not be lost of the fact that not only were the heavy armor-piercing shells not employed but that many of the bombs, through lack of experience in their use against such targets, or because of a too-long-deferred fuse action, fragmented previous to the explosion of the charge. T. N. T. was scattered about the decks, and had the shells been constructed to withstand the shock of impact the damage would undoubtedly have been far greater. This defect, by increasing the weight of the shell, is of easy correction. It should be remembered that the airplane will shortly carry not only armor-piercing shells, gas bombs, and bombs weighing as high as 4,000 pounds, each containing over a ton of high explosives, but that torpedo-carrying planes in the near future will be a complement of aircraft equipment. This later type of plane, while at present only in the experimental stage, bids fair to be the most deadly weapon carried by aircraft.

On the side of aviation it is well to remember that in order to disable a ship and put her out of commission it is not necessary to sink her. Injury or demoralization of the crew or derangement of the operating of fire-control systems might render a battleship harmless. Just how serious this would have been, of course, can not be ascertained. From the observations made immediately following each series of salvos it may be successfully contended that while the bombs which dropped on the decks made great gaps in the ironwork and smashed things badly, the destructive effect was largely local, and probably no vital injury was inflicted. It was evident also that the protected deck remained intact.

Under the prevailing methods of construction and arrangement the superstructure of a ship can be battered and twisted into shapeless wreckage without—theoretically, at least—materially retarding the ship's speed or reducing her fighting efficiency. This argument is based on the material side of the question and does not take into consideration the effect of the concussions upon the personnel.

From the terrible accident which befell the destroyer Manley in 1918, when a number of depth charges exploded on her aft deck, it might be argued, with some evidence of proof, that men below the armored deck and in the turrets and conning towers would probably not be seriously injured by the blasts. When those depth charges exploded the men in the immediate vicinity were either killed or seriously injured, but those forward escaped unhurt. Assuming that the crew could withstand the strain of repeated bombing on the decks above them and could continue fighting the ship, a bomb exploding close to the stern, even though not near enough to rupture the plates, might jam the rudder, derange the alignment of the shafts, or cause serious damage to the condenser. In one case the ship would be out of control and would be compelled to drop out of the formation, if in fleet action, and would have to take her chances as a single unit. In the other cases she would probably have to slow down to such an extent as to either lose her place in the line or compel the rest of the fleet to reduce its speed, which would be a serious handicap in an engagement.

There are at least two other factors which should be taken into consideration in this discussion. One is the use of gas bombs by the attacking air force. If such an attack was made, and it is easily possible, it would undoubtedly compel the ship's crew to employ gas masks. It is reasonable to assume that this would seriously hamper their movements and lessen their efficiency. The other factor is the question of pursuit planes. The tests assumed that the supremacy of the air had been won by the attacking force and that no enemy combat planes were in action. If this were true in actual fighting, then the heavier and slower bombers could operate at their leisure and without fear of attack, but until the mastery of the air had been gained, the maneuvering of the bomb carriers would be impeded if not prevented. The tests left this problem unsolved.

Of the lessons taught by the demonstration, aside from the elimination of shells which failed to explode at all, the so-called "duds," or those which fragmented prematurely, details which can be corrected by the ordnance officials, it can be fairly asserted:

First. That aircraft is a weapon of such great value as to warrant the immediate expansion of the service, not only by the construction of more planes and of improved types and the development of aviation ordnance, both for the Army and the Navy, but by the construction of airplane carrier vessels of large size and great speed. These ships must be capable of housing, repairing, and providing floating landing fields for the use of aircraft in conjunction with the fleet. No need in our Navy to-day equals that for ships of this type, of which, unfortunately, we have none either built, building, or authorized. The Langley, now nearing completion and intended for airplane work, is a small, slow ship, which will not meet the requirements.

Second. That for coast defense aircraft are indispensable and are weapons of the first magnitude. With the preponderance of aircraft resting with the defense, as it naturally would, the attack has not only been carried 75 or 100 miles farther out to sea but the approaching fleet has been placed at a serious, if not a fatal, disadvantage, for it could not hope to bring into action, far from its base, a sufficient number of planes to wrest control of the air from the forces operating at home. This, of course, assumes that our Air Service is kept abreast of the times.

Third. That heavy bombs should be employed from the very outset of the attack, except in special cases. This eliminates the use of light bombs for injury to personnel and the demolition of the superstructure. The use of light bombs for the initial attack was adopted for the tests and was employed against the Frankfurt, but was abandoned before the Ostfriesland was bombed. By using large bombs and armor-piercing shells aircraft are placed in the same position as the heavy gun, single-caliber dreadnaughts. Big guns and big bombs go together.

Fourth. That "close by" underwater hits are more deadly than direct hits on the decks or hits on the surface of the water. Underwater explosions can be obtained by delayed fuse action, and, as a matter of fact, the heavy bombs had a delayed action of 1½ seconds. In the case of the light cruiser Frankfurt the death blow was probably delivered by a bomb which exploded under water close by her bow. The vessel was lifted bodily several feet by the blast and at once began to settle forward, sinking in a few minutes.

As she went down her rudder and propellers rose clear of the water and the ship in the few moments of the final plunge assumed a perpendicular position. In the case of the Ostfriesland, the mortal wounds were undoubtedly inflicted by two bombs which in quick succession struck the water close to her stern on the port side. Exploding beneath the surface, the blasts evidently ruptured her plates and bulkheads, causing the ship to settle rapidly aft. Turning completely over, the vessel sank bottom up, the keel being the part of the ship last seen.

These so-called lucky shots were hailed by some as misses because they did not hit the ship. The absurdity of this argument is so apparent as to need no refutation, for aviation has always claimed that the target is the zone within which damage will be inflicted and is not confined to the actual structure. The area of this danger zone is composed of the ship itself and the space around the ship in which an exploding bomb will produce serious results. Just how near to a vessel a bomb must be dropped to be fatal depends upon the weight of the charge used, the depth below the surface at which it is exploded and the protective devices of the target. In the case of battleships, with their numerous compartments and several skins, the distance can not be many yards. The closer to the hull the greater the damage, and should a charge be exploded in contact with the side of the ship, the effect produced will be similar to that of a torpedo or mine. So the old adage is still true, "the shots that count are the shots that hit."

Fifth. That there must be a change in the design of surface craft, with increased water-tight integrity. War vessels must be provided with better means of protection from both explosive and gas bombs. Whether the defense against air attack can be improved by the development of antiaircraft guns and gas shields and greater protection of the vessel itself under water as well as on deck, to the extent of making battleships invulnerable, remains to be seen.

Personally I doubt it. That improvements will be made and the defense strengthened is certain, but it must be admitted that this new element in warfare adds enormously to the strength of the Navy which possesses it, and would probably be the determining factor in a naval engagement. War science develops from the alternate improvements of offensive and defensive equipment, and we should take advantage of all new discoveries. Aviation is in its infancy. Battleship construction represents the advanced thought and skill of a century. The margin of development undoubtedly lies with the newer service. No one can predict the achievements of aviation or foresee the developments which will take place. It is a weapon now of utmost importance, and its potential value is fraught with possibilities well-nigh boundless. But whatever may be the deductions from these tests, we must adjust our building programs to the lessons learned from the Frankfurt and the Ostfriesland and attune ourselves to the possibility that aviation may hold the key to victory in some future war, if that blight should ever come upon us.

It is incumbent upon us, with our energy, our determination, and our inventive ability, to take quick advantage of all discoveries and developments in the art of war. This should be done not for the purpose of seeking war but for the purpose of maintaining the national defenses at a point where it would be suicidal for an enemy to attack our country. When the United States possesses the power to determine for itself whether or not it will go to war, there will be less danger of war. The protection of America will be assured if the Nation holds in its hands the strength to destroy an aggressor.

As America gave to the world aviation, so America should lead the world in possessing the best and most efficient aviation service it is possible to obtain. We have the genius to invent, the talent to produce, the daring to operate. Let us be supreme in the air and thereby guarantee to the present and to the future security against all attack—a security which will be the harbinger of that peace which is the purpose and the hope of our Nation.

This discussion is presented without any reference to the outcome of the conference which will discuss curtailment of armaments. In the interest of humanity and the advancement of civilization it is to be hoped that an agreement between the nations may be reached which will curtail military establishments and eliminate competitive naval construction with its ever-increasing and limitless expense.

ADDENDUM.

By the decision of the supreme council, certain ex-German war vessels were allocated to the United States under a provision which required that they be destroyed. To carry out this mandate, the Navy Department decided to conduct a series of experiments by gunfire and by bombs dropped from aircraft. The following vessels were sunk in these tests:

Type.	How sunk.	Date.
Submarine U-117	Bombs	June 21.
Submarine U-140	Gunfire	June 22.
Submarine UB-48	do	Do.
Destroyer G-102	Bombs	July 13.
Destroyer S-132	Gunfire	July 15.
Destroyer V-43	do	Do.
Light cruiser Frankfurt	Bombs	July 18.
Battleship Ostfriesland	do	July 21.

OSTFRIESLAND.

This ship represented the German dreadnaught type and was one of the surrendered vessels allocated to the United States Government. She was commissioned at Rosyth, England, on May 18, 1920, under American officers and crew, and arrived in New York in August. She was one of the second group of dreadnaughts built for the German Navy, her sister ships being the Thuringen, Helgoland, and Oldenburg. These ships were laid down in 1908 and 1909, and therefore are of the same period as our Florida. Her principal characteristics were:

Length of water line, 546 feet.
Mean draft, 27 feet.
Normal displacement, 22,800 tons.*
Speed on trial, 21.1 knots.
Battery:
Twelve 12-inch 50-caliber guns.
Fourteen 5.9-inch caliber guns.
Six 20-inch submerged torpedo tubes.
Protection, side belt, 11¾ inches at center, tapering to 6¾ inches at top and bottom.
Casemate armor, 6¾ inches.
Turrets, 12 inches.
Barbettes, 8½ inches to 10¾ inches.
Conning tower, 6 inches to 15 inches.
Protective deck on the flat, 2⅝ inches, and on the slopes, 3 inches.

The Ostfriesland class formed the German first battle squadron which took an important part in the Battle of Jutland. They were not seriously engaged until toward nightfall, about which time they were credited by the Germans as having sunk several British vessels, including the armored cruiser Black Prince. Realizing that the Germans would soon retreat, the British admiral ordered mines laid in their probable path, and after being thrown repeatedly in confusion by attacks from British destroyers during the night the Ostfriesland, while steaming along with the rest of the squadron the following morning, struck a mine about 9 o'clock, tearing a large hole in her side and flooding several compartments. She was kept afloat by her pumps and eventually reached Wilhelmshaven.

The vessel was brought to the New York Navy Yard under her own power and was inspected for tightness, and a reasonable amount of care was taken to provide three water-tight skins in way of the machinery compartments and two water-tight skins forward and aft of these compartments, but due to the expense involved none of the bulkheads nor decks were given the customary air or water test, which are necessary to determine whether or not such structure is absolutely water-tight. Manifestly, when the vessel left the navy yard, New York, for the bombing tests she was not in first-class condition.

The Ostfriesland was not equal to our modern battleships as regards underwater protection. While it is true she had three water-tight skins below the protective deck abreast the machinery spaces, this is less protection than given our recent battleships. Below the protective deck she was fairly well subdivided into water-tight compartments, but as there had been no regular crew aboard from the time she was placed out of commission, it is not known how many of these compartments proved to be tight when flooded with water.

FRANKFURT.

The Frankfurt was one of the German light cruisers of recent type and was also one of the surrendered vessels allocated to the United States Government. She was commissioned at Rosyth, England, on June 4, 1920, and arrived in New York in August, being towed across the Atlantic. She is one of the vessels that was scuttled and sunk by the Germans at Scapa Flow. The German vessels of the same class as the Frankfurt are the Dresden, Emden, Karlsruhe, Koln, and Nurnberg. These ships were launched between 1914 and 1917, the Frankfurt being one of the earlier ships launched. The Frankfurt is not comparable with any vessels of our Navy. The armor, armament, and speed of our light cruisers of the Chester class are not equal to that of the Frankfurt, while the armor, armament, and speed of our light cruisers of the Omaha class exceeds that of the Frankfurt. The Chester was launched June 26, 1907. The Omaha is now under construction. The Frankfurt's characteristics are about as follows:

Length on water line, 465 feet.
Beam, 45¼ feet.
Mean draft, 17 feet.
Normal displacement, about 5,400 tons.
Speed on trial, 28 knots.
Battery: Eight 5.9-inch guns; 2 antiaircraft guns; 2 submerged torpedo tubes; 2 above-water torpedo tubes.
Protection, side belt 2⅜ inches thick and 10 feet 10 inches wide, extending nearly the full length of the vessel.
Conning tower: Sides 4 inches, top ¾ inch, conning tower tube, 1⅜ inches, protective deck ¾ inch.

The Frankfurt took part in the battle of Jutland and was subjected to severe fire from the British ships, but eventually reached port.

The Frankfurt was towed to the navy yard, New York. Aside from the cleaning of the ship, made necessary by the fact that she was sunk by Germans at Scapa Flow, no repairs had been made since the vessel was surrendered by the Germans.

Like the Ostfriesland, many fittings, structure, and other material were removed for study and test. As a result of this the sinking of her at Scapa Flow and the time that had elapsed since her surrender, it is evident that her water-tight integrity was adversely affected, and it is reasonable to assume that she was not in as good a condition when she left the navy yard, New York, for the bombing experiments as when she was in commission with the German crew aboard. Owing to the large expenditure of money that would be involved and in view of her ultimate destruction, it was not considered justifiable to give the systems, bulkheads, and decks the customary air and water tests which are necessary to determine whether or not such structure is absolutely water-tight. The vessel was inspected for tightness and a reasonable amount of care was taken to provide two water-tight skins in the way of the machinery compartments.

In way of the machinery compartments she had a two-skin effect, namely, an outer and inner bottom, the latter extending up the sides to the protective deck. Below the protective deck the vessel was fairly well subdivided into water-tight compartments, there being four boiler rooms extending clear across the ship. The main machinery space was divided into six compartments by two transverse bulkheads and one center line longitudinal bulkhead. As no regular crew had been maintained aboard since the vessel was placed out of commission, it is not known how many of these compartments maintained their water-tight integrity through the various stages which the vessel had passed since her surrender.

HISTORY OF AIRPLANE BOMBING TESTS.

U-117 (submarine): Altitude of bombing, 1,200 feet; 12 bombs dropped, each weighing 163 pounds, with an explosive charge of 117 pounds of T. N. T. All fell within a circle having a diameter of 150 feet; two direct hits. Sunk in less than seven minutes after the second salvo landed.

G-102 (destroyer): Altitude of bombing, 200 feet for 25-pound bombs, 1,500 feet for 100 and 300 pound bombs; 95 bombs dropped, 44 of 25 pounds, 7 of 100 pounds, 44 of 300 pounds; 24 direct hits. Sunk in 72 minutes.

Frankfurt: Altitude of bombing, 1,500 to 2,000 feet; 74 bombs dropped, 24 of 250 pounds, 29 of 300 pounds, 7 of 520 pounds, 14 of 600 pounds; 12 direct hits. Sunk in 7 hours and 45 minutes.

Ostfriesland: Altitude of bombing, 1,200 to 2,000 feet; 69 bombs dropped, 33 of 230 pounds, 8 of 550 pounds, 11 of 600 pounds, 11 of 1,000 pounds, 4 of 2,000 pounds. First day's bombardment lasted 2 hours and 46 minutes, during which time 52 bombs, weighing up to 600 pounds, were dropped, with 13 direct hits. Second day's bombardment lasted four hours, during which 11 bombs weighing 1,000 pounds, with three hits, and 6 bombs weighing 2,000 pounds were dropped. These last bombs were dropped in 12½ minutes and three of them were close enough to cause damage. The ship went down eight minutes after the last bomb was dropped. In this last day's bombing the purpose of the aviators was not to make a direct hit but to drop the bombs "close by." Total time consumed in bombardment was 6 hours and 46 minutes.

ness of aircraft in search problems, the ability of aircraft to concentrate for attack on a vessel at sea, and to ascertain the percentage of hits which could be made from an altitude of 4,000 feet against a slow-moving target capable of changing course at will to decrease the accuracy of bombing. Only dummy bombs were used. Twenty-two planes made the attack, dropping 85 bombs, of which 2 made direct hits.

REPORT ON BOMBING TESTS AND RESULTS OF AVIATION AND ORDNANCE TESTS HELD DURING JUNE AND JULY, 1921, AND CONCLUSIONS REACHED.

The joint board submits the following report on the results of the aviation and ordnance experiments held during June and July, 1921, and its conclusions based thereon:

NATURE OF EXPERIMENTS AND THE RESULTS.

2. Certain ex-German war vessels having been turned over to the United States Government in accordance with the decision of the supreme council as to their allocation, the Navy Department decided to comply with the provision requiring their destruction by conducting a series of experiments in which these vessels were to be sunk by gunfire or by bombs dropped from aircraft. In order that both branches of the national defense might gain the maximum benefit the Secretary of the Navy invited the Army to participate in these experiments.

3. In addition to the experiments with the ex-German vessels as targets, one was conducted with the ex-Iowa steaming under radio control as a hypothetical enemy. Search was conducted by aircraft and attacks made using dummy bombs from 4,000 feet altitude. This experiment was conducted with a view to obtaining information as to the effectiveness of aircraft in search operations, the ability of aircraft to concentrate for effective attack on a vessel at sea, and the percentage of hits which could be made by dropping bombs from this altitude under the most favorable conditions against a slow-moving target capable of changing course at will to decrease the accuracy of bombing.

4. The aviation experiments were successfully conducted under the direction of the commander in chief Atlantic Fleet by the air force of the Atlantic Fleet and a provisional air brigade of the Army. The gunfire experiments were conducted by destroyers and battleships of the Atlantic Fleet.

5. The experiments extended over the period from June 21 to July 21, and resulted in the sinking of the ex-German vessels as indicated below:

Type.	How sunk.	Date.
Submarine U-117	Bombs	June 21.
Submarine U-140	Gunfire	June 22.
Submarine UB-48	do	Do.
Destroyer G-102	Bombs	July 13.
Destroyer S-132	Gunfire	July 15.
Destroyer V-43	do	Do.
Light cruiser Frankfurt	Bombs	July 18.
Battleship Ostfriesland	do	July 21.

6. The schedule of experiments was so arranged as to obtain the greatest amount of information for the practical development of aviation and ordnance, including weapons, their appurtenances, and projectiles. Boards of observers were appointed by the War and Navy Departments.

7. The experiments definitely determined in each case that the projectiles used were superior to the defensive features of construction of the vessel attacked. It has long been recognized that the gun carried by any type of war vessel is superior at moderate ranges to the armor or protective construction of vessels of like type. In a large measure, therefore, the greatest interest in these experiments lay in the bombing of naval vessels by aircraft. The main features of this report, therefore, relate to the effectiveness of aircraft in offensive action against various types of naval vessels.

8. The joint board has carefully studied the reports of the boards of observers and as a result of such study, actual observation of the experiments by one or more members of the joint board and general knowledge of the principles of war and methods of conducting war, has arrived at the following general conclusions:

GENERAL CONCLUSIONS.

9. Within their radius of action which, relative to that of naval vessels, is extremely short, the effectiveness of heavier-than-air craft carrying large capacity high explosive bombs depends upon—

(a) Ability to locate the naval vessel.
(b) Ability to hit the target vessel with the projectile carried.
(c) Ability of the projectile to damage or destroy the vessel.

CONSIDERATION OF ABILITY TO LOCATE THE NAVAL VESSEL.

10. Aircraft of any of the three general classes—lighter-than-air ships, flying boats, and land planes—either in combination or singly, have pronounced ability to search sea areas within their radii of action and to locate naval vessels operating in such areas. The high speed of aircraft and the range of visibility obtained by altitude are factors which make these craft especially valuable in the service of information.

11. Heavier-than-air craft may obtain the maximum radius of action for use in the service of information only by carrying additional fuel in place of heavy bombs. When armed with heavy bombs the radius of action of heavier-than-air types is inadequate for extensive search operations. Therefore to conduct an effective attack on naval vessels it will usually be necessary to have certain aircraft for searching and others for conducting the attack with bombs.

12. Darkness, fog, falling or squally weather will greatly reduce the effectiveness of aircraft in search operations. Most of these conditions likewise adversely affect surface vessels conducting such operations, but not to the same extent.

13. The present dependability of the personnel and material of Army and Navy aircraft appears to be such as to insure that search operations, under suitable conditions, can be conducted without an undue percentage of loss. The further development of aircraft will undoubtedly increase both dependability and radius of action.

ABILITY TO HIT THE TARGET VESSEL WITH THE PROJECTILE CARRIED.

14. The number of dummy bombs which actually hit the target during the experiment with the ex-Iowa was a very small percentage of those dropped. Other experiments, however, showed that it is not necessary to make direct hits on naval vessels to put them out of action or to sink them, provided the bombs drop sufficiently close to the vessel and the explosive charge is sufficiently large to produce a mine effect of such proportions as to destroy the water-tight integrity of the vessel beyond the control of its personnel and pumps. The effective target for the bomb being, therefore, greater than the deck area of the target vessel, the percentage of effective bombs would be greater than the percentage of actual hits.

15. Inasmuch as these experiments were not conducted under battle conditions it is difficult to draw conclusions as to the probability of hitting a target with bombs from aircraft while in action. Under the favorable conditions existing during the experiments—namely, stationary, or practically stationary, target, immunity from enemy interference, and excellent visibility and flying conditions—the percentage of hits was greatly in excess of that to be expected under battle conditions.

16. The probability of hitting will be reduced in the case of a target moving at high speed on varying courses; further reduced if the target vessel is protected by effective antiaircraft armament; and practically negligible if the target is protected by effective pursuit planes. On the other hand, the probability of hitting will be increased by more efficient sighting and bomb-dropping control apparatus, by further training, and further development of aerial tactics.

17. In the present state of antiaircraft defense it is believed that, if an air force can obtain the mastery of the air, an effective percentage of hits can be obtained against surface vessels coming within the radius of action of bombing planes without an undue percentage of loss of aircraft. Antiaircraft armament is in an early stage of development. The history of war indicates that means of defense develop rapidly to meet the development of offensive weapons. The effectiveness of the bomb carried by aircraft emphasizes the necessity for the rapid development of antiaircraft armament and for the provision of pursuit planes as a part of the fleet.

ABILITY OF AIRCRAFT TO DAMAGE NAVAL VESSELS.

18. Aircraft carrying high-capacity high-explosive bombs of sufficient size have adequate offensive power to sink or seriously damage any naval vessel at present constructed, provided such projectiles can be placed in the water close alongside the vessel. Furthermore, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to build any type of vessel of sufficient strength to withstand the destructive force that can be obtained with the largest bombs that airplanes may be able to carry from shore bases or sheltered harbors.

19. High-capacity high-explosive bombs hitting the upper works of the vessel are disastrous to exposed personnel, serious to light upper works, comparatively slight to heavy fittings such as guns, and negligible to turrets. The effect of direct hits was completely local. The most serious effect of bombs is the mining effect when such bombs explode close alongside and below the surface of the water.

20. In the case of major ships the mining effect of a bomb will be materially reduced, due to the ability of the personnel to free the ship of large quantities of water by means of pumps, to distribute the excess water through the various compartments, and to shore up the water-tight doors and bulkheads which are in most serious danger of carrying away due to water pressure.

21. Aircraft, through the medium of machine guns and fragmentation bombs, as well as by high-explosive bombs of high capacity, possess sufficient offensive power to seriously threaten the exposed personnel of naval vessels unless such vessels are protected by pursuit planes. This emphasizes the necessity for the further protection of personnel and for the provision of aircraft carriers on which such pursuit planes may be based.

22. The effect of the gas bomb has not been determined, but it is believed that such bombs possess offensive power which, within the radius of action of the aircraft, is to-day a serious threat to vessels insufficiently protected by aircraft.

SUMMARY OF GENERAL CONCLUSIONS.

23. At present aircraft possess the following abilities as regards operations with the fleet in areas beyond the radius of action of aircraft based on shore:

(a) Limited assistance to gunnery in the control of fire.
(b) Limited assistance in the service of information and security.
(c) Important strategical and tactical qualities in operations of coast defense.

In adequate quantities they may be the decisive factor in such operations. The availability of those qualities at present depends largely on weather conditions. The radius of action of bombing planes limits their effectiveness against naval vessels to coast defense or base defense, in which this type is a very powerful adjunct to the present system of coast defense.

24. With reference to the effect of aircraft on future naval construction the Joint Board is of opinion that—

(a) The mission of the Navy is to control vital lines of transportation upon the sea. If no opposition is met from enemy naval vessels this mission can be accomplished without entering an enemy's coast zone within which aircraft based on shore or in sheltered harbors are effective.

(b) Without an effective navy in time of war a nation must submit to an economic blockade fatal to its trade and the importation of necessary materials for the production of war supplies.

(c) If heavier-than-air craft are to be effective in naval warfare, they must have greater mobility, and since their radius of action is not great additional mobility must be obtained by providing mobile bases, i. e., aircraft carriers.

(d) So far as known, no planes large enough to carry a bomb effective against a major ship have been flown from or landed on an airplane carrier at sea. It is probable, however, that future development will make such operations practicable.

(e) Even in the present state of development the aircraft carrier, as exemplified by the Argus of the British Navy, is a type essential to the highest efficiency of the fleet.

(f) Aircraft carriers are subject to attack by vessels carrying guns, torpedoes, or bombs, and will require, as all other types of vessels require, the eventual support of the battleship.

(g) The battleship is still the backbone of the fleet and the bulwark of the Nation's sea defense, and will so remain so long as the safe navigation of the sea for purposes of trade or transportation is vital to success in war.

(h) The airplane, like the submarine, destroyer, and mine, has added to the dangers to which battleships are exposed, but has not made the battleship obsolete. The battleship still remains the greatest factor of naval strength.

(i) The development of aircraft instead of furnishing an economical instrument of war leading to the abolition of the battleship has but added to the complexity of naval warfare.

(j) The aviation and ordnance experiments conducted with the ex-German vessels as targets have proved that it has become imperative as a matter of national defense to provide for the maximum possible development of aviation in both the Army and Navy. They have proved also the necessity for aircraft carriers of the maximum size and speed to supply our fleet with the offensive and defensive power which aircraft provide, within their radius of action, as an effective adjunct of the fleet. It is likewise essential that effective antiaircraft armament be developed.

25. The Joint Board recommends that the provisions of the previous orders of the War and Navy Departments relative to secrecy concerning the results of the aviation and ordnance experiments be rescinded and that this report, if approved by the War and Navy Departments, be issued jointly to the press.

Revenue Bill.

OF

HON. RICHARD WAYNE PARKER,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 18, 1921.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, the Republican platform pledged us to reduce taxation. The House of Representatives have kept the pledge. They have agreed on a revenue bill for that purpose in spite of the great differences of opinion of the various sections of the country—west and east, north and south, town and country. They have passed a measure intended to reduce taxation which is oppressing business and with it the whole people.

The bill has gone to the Senate, from which it may come in some different form, but its substance will be the same. Its purpose is the relief of the people so far as the Government's necessities will allow.

Taxation has become a burning question not only in the Nation but in every State, county, and town. The new work that is being done in improvements of schools, streets, lighting, drainage, policing, and public buildings, and, most of all, in the modern system of roads, fit to carry automobile trucks at railroad speed, and which must be maintained by the public, has increased the cost of local government, and even demanded appropriations from the United States. The amounts of national, State, and local debts were unknown in the past. Local tax rates used to be less than 1 per cent on half value, and now they are 4 and sometimes 5 per cent on the full value. In my own city the tax per capita in 1910 was $19; in 1915, $26; and in 1920, $45 for each man, woman, and child. Prices are falling, and therefore values and profits are falling, and it is a burning question how taxes can be reduced or how the money can be found to pay our obligations and expenses. We can no longer "lead an automobile life on a wheelbarrow income."

The national taxes are almost as difficult to arrange. In 1895, when I first went to Congress, $500,000,000 a year was thought very large, and Democrats attacked us as a billion-dollar Congress. At the present time nearly $2,000,000,000 must be paid in interest every year, beside half or three-fourths of a billion for pensions and disabilities. A recent statute authorizes loans to be made by the United States up to a billion dollars to carry crops and five hundred millions to be paid the railroads for failure to maintain them during the 26 months of Government occupation. Wages and retail prices are still high, and business is often carried on at a loss, while, on the other hand, with falling exchange and bankruptcy in Europe, with our men out of work and farmers often ruined, with banks calling loans and our paper money diminished by cancellation as the loans are paid—with all this, it is essential to public confidence that the Government should have enough revenue, and also that taxes should not be so high as to drive capital out of business, freight off the railroads, and people from their homes.

There is a limit to taxation. In olden days it was said that whole districts in Anatolia were depopulated because of Turkish taxation, which left the farmer too little share of his crop. The people simply moved away.

This revenue bill will do good work if it is passed in its present form. It removes a host of taxes which was simply a nuisance, especially the stamp taxes on small articles and the tax on transportation. It has abolished the surtax over 32 per cent, which, with the 8 per cent income tax, made 40 per cent of the income. That relief should probably have been given in the present calendar year. It has been postponed to 1922. A like relief is given as to the excess profits of corporations. That relief has also been postponed. Possibly, however, this postponement does no great harm, inasmuch as we may make more losses than excess profits during the current year.

The possessors of large incomes are investing very largely in nontaxable bonds, not only of the States, counties, and cities but also nontaxable bonds issued by the farm loan banks, which add to the securities that will be taken in preference to those of the United States.

It is perhaps not advisable at the present time to discuss the details of this bill. It is sure to have many Senate amendments and may be entirely recast. It is essential that the law should be in the best possible shape when it is finally passed, and it is with this view that a recess has been taken which will enable the Finance Committee of the Senate to give careful and quiet consideration to that bill in all its details, without being harassed by calls to debates and votes upon the floor.

It is perhaps worth while, however, to state some general considerations on the subject of taxation. The United States has very often tried an income tax and as often has abolished it after a few years. No man likes to have all his accounts looked into by Government officials. Its complications require a vast force in the Internal-Revenue Office at great cost compared to the returns. It is extremely unfair to tax all forms of incomes so that permanent income from investment bears only the same rates as the temporary wage that a man gets during his few years of work and which he must lay up for his family. Its graded rates, when effective, encourage investments in property that improves in value but that brings no present income, discourage activity in business, penalize the skill and energy which bring in large profits, encourage investments in tax-free securities and decrease the value of Government bonds.

The fundamental objection to an income tax is that it is a tax wholly upon profits, and in bad years when there are no profits there will be little or no tax, although business may be going on a large scale. It is unsafe to run our Government on any such tax. It has been successful in Great Britain because of the vast amount of funded wealth there upon which a certain return should be expected and because Great Britain has been the banker of the world and is paid more rather than less in bad years for the loans that she makes to other countries. But it is unsafe in a country like ours, which has ups and downs and where everyone is in some sort of business, so that the income tax will be large when they make profits in business and amount to little or nothing when they make losses.

The income tax is proving itself futile, when it attempts to get at the incomes of the rich, who are always able to take care of themselves and to invest so that they will not pay an excessive tax. The burden thereupon will fall upon the poor, while at the same time business is hampered and employment is hard to get.

These views are not now shared by the mass of the people of the United States, and it is impossible and would be ridiculous to propose any radical change in this regard in this Congress, but that change may come by necessity, and I feel it a duty to state my views in the hope that the matter may be considered before it becomes a crying necessity.

It is really a question whether the income tax will give sufficient revenue. We may have to come to a tax on production, or perhaps better than that, to a very small sales tax, less than 1 per cent, collected monthly. Production taxes were tried during the Civil War and our manufacturers paid a percentage of their gross sales without difficulty. A small tax on all sales has worked excellently in such countries as Canada and the Philippines. It is free from complications. The manufacturer or dealer simply sends a monthly check for a small percentage of his sales during the month.

It is objected that such a tax pyramids prices and falls upon the consumer; that is, upon the poor. This statement has been repeated by many of our modern professors and so-called political economists, although it was long ago refuted by none other than John Stuart Mill, who insists that any tax on an article of common use and that is uniformly collected falls upon all classes of the community in the end and is distributed automatically. The least reflection will show this to be the case. If houses and lands are overtaxed, the landlord will pay part but the rest of the tax will fall upon the tenant in increased rents. If the workman has to pay more for his food, he will demand more wages so that the employer will share the tax. If business is so taxed that profits are small, less wages can be paid to clerks and workmen.

The real rule is that the supply and demand of capital, labor, and goods will distribute taxes equally among the community, if only these taxes be imposed in such manner that they are readily, conveniently, certainly, and promptly paid. In that case the burden will be equalized by the law of supply and demand and inequalities will only result when the act tries to do what is unequal, and the wily niggard is able to avoid this inequality and the honest and generous man submits to it. Taxation by confiscation has always been a failure.

This revenue bill has increased the amount of United States bonds which can be held free of surtax. This is a step in the right direction. The Government is now borrowing at 5½ per cent because it taxes the income of its own bonds in the hands of the rich man, though only the rich can carry the enormous debt of the United States. If our bonds bore interest at 3 per cent, tax free, the United States would save 2½ per cent in refunding its floating debts of about $8,000,000,000. It is national folly to issue a bond which is not equally good in every man's hand and does not receive an absolute market value from that fact. The United States recognized this when it issued tax-free gold bonds during the Civil War. The same principle was enunciated by Alexander Hamilton in his second report on the public credit, on January 21, 1795. After insisting that no Government can tax its own debt unless this has been specially agreed on, he says:

To tax the funds is manifestly either to take or to keep back a portion of the principal or interest stipulated to be paid.

To do this, on whatever pretext, is not to do what is expressly promised; it is not to pay that precise principal or that precise interest which has been engaged to be paid. It is, therefore, to violate the promise given to the lender.

But is not the stipulation to the lender with a tacit reservation of the general right of the legislature to raise contributions on the property of the State?

This can not be supposed, because it involves two contradictory things—an obligation to do and a right not to do; an obligation to pay a certain sum and a right to retain it in the shape of a tax.

It is against the rules, both of law and reason, to admit by implication, in the construction of a contract, a principle which goes in destruction of it.

The Government by such a construction would be made to say to the lender: "I want a sum of money for a national purpose, which all the citizens ought to contribute proportionately, but it will be more convenient to them and to me to borrow the money of you. If you will lend it, I promise you faithfully to allow you a certain rate of interest while I keep the money and to reimburse the principal within a determinate period, except so much of the one and the other as I may think fit to withhold in the shape of a tax."

Is such a construction either natural or rational? Does it not, in fact, nullify the promise by the reservation of a right not to perform it?

Is it to be presumed, without being expressed, that such can be the understanding of a lender when he parts with his money to a Government?

The contrary is so much the more presumable that nothing short of an express reservation can support the pretension to tax the fund.

It may be replied that the creditor might be willing to rely upon the equity of the Government not to abuse its right by exacting from him excessive contributions.

This, if true, does not obviate the difficulty of supposing the coexistence of an obligation and a right, destructive the one of the other, in interpreting the sense of a contract when nothing of the kind is said.

It is possible that a creditor might be willing so to contract, yet it is still necessary in order to determine that he has done it to find some provisions or expressions in the contract indicating the intention to render what is stipulated compatible with what is reserved. But it is not probable that an individual would be willing to lend upon such terms. He would justly apprehend that in great emergencies a right having no limit but the opinion of the party possessed of the power would be abused, and that the convenience of laying hold of a fund already prepared and at hand, supported by a claim of right, would be a temptation to abuse not easy to be resisted. However well disposed to contribute in common with his fellow citizens on all the ordinary objects of property or income, he would be unwilling to subject himself to a special burden in the peculiar character of creditor of the State. He would prefer to employ his money in other ways, even to lend it to private persons, where it might be more likely to escape the hand of the fiscal power. * * *

But shall the proprietor of money in the funds, then, be exempt from his proportion of the burdens which other citizens bear?

This will not be the consequence of the principle. As a consumer, of which his income is the instrument, he will pay his proportion of the taxes on consumption. As a holder of any other species of property procured by that income or otherwise which is liable to a tax, he must also contribute his proportion.

But without undue refinement the lender of money to the public may be affirmed to have paid his tax when he lends his money.

Relying upon the engagement of the Government, express or implied, that he will receive what is promised him without defalcation, he is content with a less interest than he would take if subject to any such defalcation, and especially if it was to be arbitrary as to its extent. In this lower rate of interest he may be truly said to pay his tax or to purchase an exemption from it.

Here, also, we find what is decisive on the point of expediency.

If the Government had a right to tax its funds, the exercise of that right would cost much more than it was worth. The money lender would exact exorbitant premiums, not only as an indemnification for the use which the Government might probably make of its right, and which, in practice, would be likely to be qualified by some regard to equality of contribution but as an equivalent for insurance against the risk or possibility of a more extensive use. Hence the Government would be likely to pay much more in premiums upon its loans than it would draw back in taxes; and the former being supposed but equal to the latter, there would be no advantage in exercising the right.

But it will be, perhaps, more safe to affirm that there would be no borrowing at all upon such terms. The first precedent of a tax upon the funds might be expected to compel the Government to an express renunciation of the right in every future loan. Solid capitalists would not be much inclined to adventure their money upon so precarious a footing as is implied in a power of taxing their credits.

These reflections lead readily to an estimate of the impressions which would be produced by the example of an imposition on the funds. Regarded either as a positive breach of contract or as a deviation from the sound maxims of credit, the effect upon it would be nearly equally fatal. Whatever might be excused to a time of revolution, to a defect of means, or to some extraordinary peculiarity of situation, no excuse would be admitted for a deliberate departure from principles—at a time, too, of national prosperity, in a flourishing state of the finances—after the foundations of a regular system had been laid. The departure would argue an incorrectness, an instability, or a depravity of views calculated to give a lasting shock to public credit.

The United States must henceforth tread with the most cautious steps.

A renunciation of the right in future might not speedily heal the wound which an example of its exercise had given. Durable suspicions might fasten on the wisdom or the integrity of the Government, which might occasion to it no inconsiderable loss and embarrassment before a course of contrary experience would obliterate them.

The credit of the United States is already suffering. Its bonds are selling below par. The loss has fallen upon the poor man whose income is not subject to tax, but who is unable to sell his bonds because they are subject to tax in the hands of the rich man, who can not afford to buy them.

A change of taxation as to the present issues might unduly benefit the present bondholders and therefore not do justice, but in all future issues the United States should return to its old and well-established policy of not taxing its own bonds.

The country is to be congratulated that we are removing and simplifying taxes. May we hope that these taxes may be made absolutely simple, certain, and easily paid, that the interest of our Government debt may be reduced, and that its nontaxable securities shall hold, as heretofore, an unquestioned credit in the markets of the world.

Tax Revision.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS
OF
HON. THOMAS D. SCHALL,
OF MINNESOTA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 18, 1921.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. Speaker, no one questions the importance of taxation in the economic crisis that faces us as a Nation to-day. Never before has the whole world been called on to face a catastrophe so tremendous as the titanic conflict of the Great War. The equilibrium of the world set in jeopardy, new conditions emerged, balances were upset. International adjustments were ripped asunder and have not yet begun to knit. In an effort to hold an even keel, nations issued quantities of credit, and inflated currency is one of the factors of to-day's dilemma. How to restore the dollar to its normalcy without too great demands upon the currents of industry is the problem uppermost.

Changes which have shaken the world to its foundation have removed the tariff as a constant and determinable factor for revenue. Hard times are upon us. Our bill of expense for years to come will be a stupendous thing, no matter what economies we practice. We must evolve to meet our new difficulty a tax that is adequate, practical, and just; that will produce the necessary revenue with the least possible disturbance. The tax bill before us is adequate, no doubt, but neither practical nor just. It plays favorites. If it does not point the way to prosperity, if it continually sacrifices the interests of the consumer, the man of small income, in favor of the man of large and comfortable wealth—if, regardless, it adds to the already high prices a little more and a little more—it is not such a bill as our President meant when he said:

The country does not expect and will not approve a shifting of burdens.

The people of America are a docile people. They have been cowed, brow-beaten, forced into an attitude of respectful submission to the flats and dictums of self-constituted leaders. The unfortunate schism of disloyalty has been seized upon as a weapon by the hierarchy of tyrants. And these very tyrants, scuttling to cover with their ill-gotten gains, now openly bragging of their tax dodging, and perjuring, and failing to make honest return, were loudest in their hue and cry after the flag. What a spectacle. These artful dodgers scampering along crying "pro-German, pro-German," and they with the loot in their pockets.

To lower surtaxes and to repeal the excess-profits tax in order to "encourage business," is to aid and abet those unpatriotic institutions which evaded their just proportion of burdens by withdrawing their money from investment. If that is the matter with business, tax-exempt securities should be abolished, and we should not in this bill exempt the foreign investor and allow him to employ the cheap labor of Europe and Asia to flood our markets and cause unemployment here. One of the 50 new millionaire Members of this Congress, feeling his class could no longer rely upon ordinary representation, comes here himself and boasts openly before the Ways and Means Committee that the man of large wealth did not pay tax; that he perjured himself about his tax returns; that he was not going to pay, and nobody could make him pay; that as fast as you closed one door he would open another. Is not that pretty near being the Government when crime announces itself thus boldly and says, "What are you going to do about it?"

The wild extravagance of these past years has been largely an effort to get rid of excess money, so as not to have to pay tax. Never has there been such lavish advertising, another avenue of output which can legitimately divert money from Uncle Sam's pocket. That is the reason for the richly colored and gorgeous artistry that blazons forth on fence boards and in the magazines.

The representatives of big business admit that the present depression is due to the fact that the holders of these swollen fortunes are so unwilling to bear their share of war tax that they are withholding their money from circulation, tying it up in nontaxable securities, investing it in enterprises in foreign lands, rather than give it to the currents of trade that must grant a return to Uncle Sam.

This is indeed a reactionary time, when capitalists come forth boldly and insolently and ask relief from the irksome matter of taxes, on the plea that what benefits them benefits the country. But how they yell at what they call "class legislation," namely, an 8-hour day law for the laborer, bonus for the soldiers, or real extension of credit to farmers and stockmen, though they seem to forget that neither the cities nor industry can grow fat while the farmer and ranchman starve. The farmers are the first producers, the real sources of our power.

The capitalist's effect on business is willful and premeditated. When he withholds his money from the business he would normally invest in, while he hardly notices the slight shrinkage of an income impossible for him to expend, the whole business of the country is paralyzed. In a spirit of evil obstinacy they buck the laws, evade, squirm, wiggle out of their obligations. And then they have the effrontery to come out and tell us so, and taunt us with what are we going to do about it? Yet they are the ones who get most benefit from the protection of the money spent on defense in war times.

It is no argument for enacting a new law that people are evading the provisions of a former one, so we are fixing it up to let them off easier, because they will not obey the law.

The test should be, ability to bear the burden. The man who is able should pay. The man who has profited most should hand over in proportion. Spending should not be the basis for tax. Earnings are the only just basis. The present tax bill is fashioned to lay the heaviest burden on the backs of those least able to bear it. Think of the number of new millionaires, those who stayed at home and profiteered. Think of the profits—50, 100, yes, even 1,000 per cent—made at the cost of our necessity, at the price of our boys' blood and agony, and now, forsooth, the surtax, the excess-profits tax, must be cut down.

I shall vote to recommit the bill, with instructions to report it back, minus the repeal of surtaxes.

The tax should be made enforceable. A definite and certain per cent should be laid upon income and excess profits. The bill would then have the simplicity so much demanded. Consumption tax would not then need to be so involved and various. Abolish nontaxable securities. Force the money out of its hiding place. Place the burden of tax where it belongs. This is what should have been done. All chance for fraud and deception should have been removed.

The test of the iniquity of this bill is that the tax on the pay envelope is raised from 26 per cent to over 50 per cent, while the surtax is reduced from 65 per cent to 32 per cent, and the excess-profits tax is abolished altogether. The principle of progressive tax was right, produced goodly revenue, even with the tax dodging. Why yield to political expediency and abolish it? I can not see wherein any such action is defensible. One more argument has been handed to the Democrats on a silver platter. The level of constructive statesmanship is very low when it passes out a bill like this for the relief of the country.

Agricultural Relief Act.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. EDWARD B. ALMON,

OF ALABAMA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921,

On the bill (S. 1915) to amend the War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, to provide relief for producers of and dealers in agricultural products, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Speaker, the bill now under consideration is known as the agricultural relief act. It is a measure of the greatest importance and significance to our farming interests. It is a piece of constructive legislation and can be easily and successfully administered. It recognizes the new and unusual conditions existing in our international and domestic trade and aims to meet these conditions by extending to the War Finance Corporation the authority and power to assist in financing the carrying of agricultural commodities until they can be marketed in an orderly way. Foreign merchants and manufacturers are unable and unwilling to purchase the greater part of their requirements for the year during the period immediately following the harvesting of our crops, as they were accustomed to do in normal times. This, coupled with the failure of our merchants and manufacturers to carry normal stocks, has brought about a condition which makes it necessary for us to market our staple agricultural products over a longer period than usual.

So the thing needed at this time is additional facilities to finance our agricultural products so that they can be marketed more gradually than they have been heretofore.

This bill provides these facilities in a manner that will be helpful to the producers and business generally. It is an emergency measure, designed to meet the unusual and abnormal conditions existing at this time. Its practical working will enable us to determine whether it will be necessary to make it permanent and to what extent in order to take care of the marketing of our staple agricultural products in an orderly way in normal times.

So this measure is to meet a different condition from that intended by the amendment to the War Finance Corporation act in March, 1919, by which the corporation was given power in connection with the financing of foreign credit and trade, for, as I have shown, foreign credit is not the chief trouble at this time.

We must recognize the new conditions in our foreign trade to which I have referred. These conditions have less to do with credits to foreigners and more with credits to Americans. So we in the South must sell our cotton more gradually than we did in former years. Recent investigations have shown that foreign credits are not in great demand. Europe prefers to take our commodities gradually and does not want to buy heavily for future shipment, even if credit is offered. The exchange risks are too great, on account of the fluctuations in exchange rates.

Last fall this country undertook to force upon our European customers a year's supply in a few months. The result was a breakdown in the prices of our commodities and also in foreign exchanges, and this interfered not only with our agricultural exports but also with all our other business.

The War Finance Corporation was created during the war to act as the financial or banking agency of the United States Government in handling our export business. It served a most useful purpose. Less than a year ago, when it became known that the Federal reserve banks failed to extend to the farmers the financial aid they needed and expected in holding and marketing their crops, Congress reestablished the activities of the War Finance Corporation and made provision for an increase of $25,000,000 in its capital stock.

It was originally authorized to make advances only for the purposes of export. This bill authorizes it also to make advances to domestic trade, and as amended provides aid to cooperative societies. The purpose of this bill is to authorize this agency of the National Government to issue bonds to the amount of $1,000,000,000 to provide domestic and foreign markets for our agricultural products.

I believe that the price of cotton and other farm products will rise just as soon as this bill becomes a law. That will be the moral effect of this legislation, for when it is known that if the banks and other private interests will not aid the farmers in securing a market for their surplus crops the Government will so aid them through the War Finance Corporation, then private capital will come to the relief of the farmers and prices will rise even before this agency of the Government can market its bonds. I predict that the price of cotton will advance $25 per bale within 30 days from the passage of this bill.

Another good feature of this bill is that it makes the securities of the War Finance Corporation eligible for discount with the Federal reserve banks.

I am in favor of that provision of the bill authorizing the War Finance Corporation to buy farm loan bonds or make loans on them for two years to the extent of $2,000,000,000. That is one of the best provisions of the bill, and I hope that the amendment of the committee striking it out will be voted down.

I voted for the Knox-Porter peace resolution because I believed that it would hasten the making and ratification of a treaty of peace with Germany and Austria and the opening up of diplomatic and trade relations with those countries. It has had that effect, and the improvement in the price of cotton so far is largely due to this.

I believe that there will be a continued advancement in the prices of agricultural products from now on as a result of this legislation and the opening up of diplomatic and trade relations between the United States and Germany and Austria.

Railroad Funding Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. ROBERT E. EVANS,

OF NEBRASKA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, August 1, 1921.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, this is an act to amend sections 202 and 207 of the transportation act and to add a new section to Title 1 of the War Finance Corporation act. The purpose is to aid in a compromise settlement of the difference between the railroads and the Government growing out of Government control of the railroads.

There is one cause which, more than any other, has to do with the wide spread between the price paid to the producer and the price paid by the consumer for a given product, and that cause is the cost of transportation. It is not alone the cost of transportation for the particular article, but it is the cost of transportation of every necessity entering into the maintainance of life as to every individual that touches the given commodity from the time it leaves nature's warehouse in its elementary form until it reaches the consumer. If the cost of transportation is of such importance in the process of return to normal conditions in our markets, anything which will aid, even indirectly, in reducing the spread between the producer—whether he be on the farm or in the shop—and consumer is to the benefit of all, but of much greater benefit to the farmer than any other individual. It is of greater benefit to him because the increase in cost in any change incident to taking his product from the farm to the consumer or in carrying a product from the factory to the farm is placed upon the farmer. The farmer's selling price is fixed at the large centers of population, and that price less the cost imposed upon the product between the price-fixing point and the farm determines the farmer's compensation for his product. The reverse of this is true when we come to consider a manufactured product. The farmer pays the cost of labor and material entering into the article plus the charges incident to its handling between the factory and the farm, and in both cases this charge includes a profit to each middleman who has touched it in the transfer.

It follows that the farm is bearing and will continue to bear the costs of transportation more largely than any other interest, and will be helped or hurt as the present freight rates are lowered or retained as they are.

Every candid man will acknowledge that at present the railroads are, with few exceptions, in anything but a prosperous condition. Many are in the hands of receivers. Others are crippling along furnishing but poor service to the public. Money to properly finance the roads' operation is a pressing need. While ordinarily the operating income would furnish some help in the improving of the railroad facilities, the general depression in all lines of business endeavor has very materially reduced the traffic and therefore the income of the roads. The roads have no surplus, and credits are tight.

It follows that the roads must look to the sale of securities to secure the needed funds for additions and betterments. That aid must be secured at the lowest possible cost to keep the overhead down, so that every time you increase the charge for overhead or operating expense we must inevitably increase in a greater degree the charge to be made by the railroad for the service it renders. Hence, if we can aid the roads to secure money at a lower rate of interest and if we can at the same time assist in placing the roads where they were before Government control and so assure better service at lower cost to the road, and therefore to the public, it is a result we all desire.

The roads were taken over by the Government regardless of the wishes of their management. They were returned in like manner. In both cases the Government fixed the ultimate terms and conditions of the control. Whatever may be said with reference to the wisdom or necessity of taking over the roads it is, as to the present question, of no moment.

Why will the passage of this bill better existing conditions? All concede in the present state of the money market you can not negotiate the securities presented, or to be presented, by the roads as railroad securities drawing 6 per cent in the open market at par. It is declared by some that even through the War Finance Corporation these securities can not be placed at par. It is likewise recognized that with the advantages and opportunities of the War Finance Corporation securities can be placed much more advantageously and quicker than by any other agency. Hence it will be to the advantage of the roads to have this agency negotiate the securities. Herein lies the aid to the roads and the help to the public in securing a better and a cheaper service.

Not only is a cheaper and better service to result from the enactment into law of the provisions of this bill but it carries with it a distinct advantage to the railroads and to the Government in closing up the unsettled matters hanging over from Government control. There are approximately $1,103,000,000 of claims by the railroads against the Government, $237,000,000 of which have been settled by the Government. The Government has claims against the railroads for additions and betterments furnished during Government control, aggregating $1,144,000,000, upon which there has been paid or covered by securities the sum of about $312,000,000.

These additions and betterments are increases in the value and efficiency of the railroads' property, and hence are not paid out of the operating income but come from a fund created by the sale of railroad securities or a new issue of stock. The debts due from the Government are for compensation or rentals under the contracts by which the Government held or used the roads or claims arising out of that control or use and which would go into the fund out of which the dividends were paid, or charges of like character.

It follows that to make the railroads pay out of their net operating income the cost of additions and betterments is to make the roads pay into the capital of the corporation their earned interest on their investment, and, by reason of the amount, it will cripple many of the roads in their operation.

As I have already pointed out, our present chief need is cheapened transportation facilities, with increased efficiency. To cheapen the cost of transportation is to make available for markets not now reached a large amount of products, and hence an increase in income, with little increase in cost. As the roads now are, most of them, pressed for a fund to meet obligations and the markets are calling for high rates of interest, the provisions of this bill, it is hoped, will have a psychologic effect and will at the same time furnish actual funds for the necessary expenditures.

But as pointed out, the Government, having taken over the roads on practically its own terms and returned them in the same way, the transportation act provided for setting off to such an extent as to the President seemed wise the claims of the roads against the claims of the Government.

It is as if the Government had taken over a piece of your property without your permission, fixed the rental at its figure, put on it such improvements as it thought best without consultation with you, and although the income therefrom was the source of your livelihood, refused to pay the rent because of the improvements it had put upon your property, and then returned the property to you, requiring you to make the property not only pay the usual profit but pay any excess that the improvement cost during the time it operated it and out of the ordinary earnings of the property. That would be a deal between you and the Government. It is a case where the Government concedes it owes the railroads a large sum of money now due, but the exact amount of which has not yet been agreed upon, and where the railroads owe the Government a large amount of money which has been agreed upon, but is not equitably payable at this time. In some cases the balance is in favor of a particular road, and in others the balance is against another road. We wish the roads which in most cases are having difficulty in securing loans for extraordinary or other than operating expenses to function properly and efficiently, which can only be done if funds for the extraordinary expenses or charges are forthcoming. We wish to close the accounts covering Government control. Already by acts of Congress the administration is authorized to set off or fund these debts so far as to the President seems wise, and that means that the President will use his discretion so as to leave the roads financially sound and unembarrassed. The present act authorizes the sale of that portion of the debt that has been or shall be funded through the War Finance Corporation. The result of this will be the closing out of the unsettled claims between the Government and the roads with which settlements are made. The roads by so settling have the immediate advantage of what is due to them, or will have a cancellation of a portion of its liabilities and will have determined certainly its income, its existing debt, and hence its financial status. From such time it can accurately determine the financial basis upon which its operations must rest and upon which its future operations shall be conducted. It will conduce to certainty in the transaction of business, and in cases of necessity furnish needed funds, which is a "consummation devoutly to be wished."

But this bill will do much more for the Government, and hence for the people. It provides that before a road can participate in the cash to be received by a settlement or a settlement under its provisions there must be a waiver of any claim by reason of "inefficiency of labor." This takes out of consideration in these settlements claims aggregating around a billion dollars. It has in it that which appeals to the interest of the road, so as to cause the road to forego doubtful or ill-founded claims, to the end that the road shall have immediate use of what is certainly due to it.

In the settlement of the $237,000,000 of the claims thus far passed upon there has been a settlement at the rate of about 30 per cent of the amount claimed, and it is expected the settlements to be made under the provisions of the act as amended by this bill will be as favorable to the Government or more so. The wisdom of such a course can not be successfully questioned from any standpoint. Where a road's financial condition will permit there will be a set-off of claims. Where a road's financial condition is not strong enough to permit a set-off of all of the Government's claim a part will be funded and a part set-off, and, as to that funded, cash will be realized by the Government as soon as it can be wisely and profitably done.

Thus are the roads properly aided and the Government's right preserved, while a fair settlement of disputed claims are hastened.

There are those who have criticized the provisions of this bill which require the road to forego or waive any claim by reason of the alleged "inefficiency of labor." Conceding for the moment the existence of the fact that at the time labor was inefficient, it has been stated and it, in many instances, can be proved that the managerial employees turned over with the roads to the Government and who were in close touch with and in sympathy with the railroads' officials were directly responsible for very much of this so-called inefficiency. Work crews used in the work of additions and betterments only were kept at work and paid only during the summer, when work of this character could be most economically done, while roads were operated by the owners; when under Government control they were kept on the pay rolls during the entire year, and during the winter months were idle or working at such great disadvantage as to be almost useless. Employees were unduly and unnecessarily increased in all branches of the service. Employees were given to understand haste was not desired. If inefficiency was so brought about, it should be the loss of the road and not the Government.

But the Interstate Commerce Commission has found against this claim. The Director of the Railroad Administration has found against this claim. Upon all probabilities we are justified in the conclusion that these claims have no substance in fact and should not be permitted to become a charge upon the Treasury. Indeed, the good faith of the roads in presenting these claims is seriously questioned.

During the time the form of the contract under which the roads were operated was under consideration by the representatives of the roads and the Government the roads' representatives pressed for the inclusion of this item, "inefficiency of labor" as a part of the damages for which the roads were to be compensated. The representatives of the Government refused to accede to this request and it was omitted. Hence, as the intent of the parties to the contract is so indicated, it was the intention to exclude this item from consideration when fixing the charges against the Government.

The chief complaint made by those who oppose this provision is: (1) That it is violating the contract between the Government and the roads, which has no foundation in fact, and (2) that it is taking away from the roads a legal right which they now have. The language used by some of the speakers in describing the turpitude which it is charged inheres in the provisions of the subdivision of section 19a of the act as it will read if amended in accordance with the provisions of this bill is almost lurid.

We challenge the attention of the committee to the fact that this bill gives to the railroads the advantage of settling disputed claims under conditions more advantageous to the roads than would exist if the bill does not pass. It takes from the roads no right. The right to sue the Government in the Court of Claims is in no way affected. A judgment against the Government's agent appointed in accordance with the provisions of the Cummins-Esch Act or against the Government will be included in the appropriation bill as would any other judgment. The terms of this bill in no way pretend to cut out this right of the roads to sue. The language objected to is as follows:

> In using any fund or moneys available under this or any other act for the purposes described in this subdivision, no payments or allowances shall be made to any carriers on account of the so-called inefficiency of labor during the period of Federal control.

What are the purposes described in the subdivision referred to? The subdivision is section 19a and provides for the sale of railroad securities held or to be held by the Government. The provisions which set forth the purpose material to this discussion are found in the paragraph (d) of the subdivision or section and the portion material is as follows:

> The proceeds of all bonds, notes, or other securities sold by the President to the corporation or by the corporation as selling agent shall be a fund to be used by the President for the purposes described in section 202 of the transportation act of 1920.

The balance not so used goes into the Treasury. Section 202 of the transportation act of 1920, so far as material to an understanding of this discussion, is as follows:

> The President shall, as soon as practicable after termination of Federal control, adjust, settle, liquidate, and wind up all matters, including compensation and all questions and disputes of whatever nature, arising out of or incident to Federal control.

From the provisions quoted it is conclusively established that the only power or duty or right involved is that of settling or compromising the claims of the parties arising out of Federal control. The bill in no way curtails the authority or power to act, settle, or sue except that it refuses to permit any of the funds to be provided under its provisions to be applied in the payment of a claim based on "inefficiency of labor" during the Federal control. Congress had in the Cummins-Esch Act made the President the agent of the Government to negotiate settlements of the differences arising out of Federal control. This bill provides for what is deemed a more advantageous settlement for both parties, but excludes from this benefit any claim based on the so-called "inefficiency of labor," which claim both the President and his agents have heretofore rejected.

To say that this takes any right away from the roads is to say that where a principal authorized an agent to negotiate a compromise with parties with whom he has matters in dispute is deprived from modifying the instructions to and powers of his agent who is conducting the negotiation.

The jurisdiction of the Court of Claims is in no way interfered with by any provision of the bill. No provision of the bill restricts or in any manner impedes the orderly course to be pursued by the roads in enforcing any right they or any one of them may have against the Government by reason of the so-called "inefficiency of labor." The most that can be said is that the bill provides that a compromise can not be made that allows anything because of "inefficiency of labor" during Federal control. It has been urged that to prevent the Government representatives from allowing the roads for the "inefficiency of labor" is monstrous, and many other harsh adjectives have been applied, but no Member has been able to point out a single right of which the roads have been deprived, and it required a badly strained construction to ever secure a foot upon which to stand while hurling lurid projectiles at this provision of the bill, all of which projectiles were "duds."

On the other hand, those who do not seem to understand why the roads should earn operating expenses have been equally active though less vociferous in their castigations of the terms under which the roads may receive aid. May we not safely conclude that midway between these two extremes there is a safe and sane way over which we may travel and that in this bill the committee has found it? Let us at least hope that on it the roads may travel rapidly to reduced rates and by increased traffic a fair return to the roads.

Amendment to the Railroad Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. THOMAS D. SCHALL,

OF MINNESOTA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, August 22, 1921.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. Speaker, the arguments adduced by the friends of this bill remind me of the grocer who was asked by the customer to give him a can of corn. The grocer reached up to the shelf and took down a can of corn, setting it on the counter before the customer. The customer took it up, turned it over, and seemed to ruminate deeply. Finally he asked, "Are those beans the same price as the corn?" The grocer replied that they were. "Then I guess I'll trade you this can of corn for the beans." The grocer handed him the beans; he gave back the corn and started out. "Here," called the grocer, "You haven't paid for those beans." "Why, yes; I did," remonstrated the customer, "I traded you the corn for these beans."

I can not vote for this kind of a customer. I consider the bill unwarranted, ill-timed. We have been more than generous with the railroads; we have treated them more than square. We guaranteed them as compensation under Government control the greatest average they had received, not for poor or ordinary years, but an average for the three best years in their history, besides what the people had paid out in extra freight and passenger rates. We lived up to our contract and left the roads in better shape than when we got them, and waived our just claim of "ordinary wear and tear." The Esch-Cummins bill, which I voted against, guaranteed the railroads 6 per cent net for six months from the time when the roads were turned back to their owners. The railroads professed themselves highly satisfied at the time. This guaranty has cost the Government $600,000,000. In reality, this amount has been based on a valuation fraudulently boosted in many ways, in addition to the watering of stocks and market manipulation of Wall Street for years, to hoist the apparent value of their holdings. Twenty-one billion dollars they claim the railroads are worth. In reality, they are worth less than half that amount.

It was sought to amend the Esch-Cummins bill by limiting any salary of any railroad official to $25,000, but it was promptly voted down, as was $50,000 and $75,000.

This bill has been forced on under a special rule. Senator LODGE says there is no possible chance for the Senate to take it up before October. I can not understand why the insistence that it be brought up at this time, on the eve of recess, except that if Members went home and got the sentiment of the people before voting on this $500,000,000 hornswoggle it would make a difference, as Members of this House are notably more responsive to the will of the people.

I do not believe the Members understand the true import of this bill, and the systematic course that is being pursued to a definite thought-out end. We sit here and listen to the juggling of figures by expert manipulators. We hear the weasel words of this bill, that say one thing and mean another. The railroads owe the Government now $1,075,000,000 for improvements, this after deductions for excess war prices. The railroads claim that we owe them, under their fictitious claims, about $700,000,000. Out of this last the Director General has settled with 70 out of 555 roads, and those not the largest, on a basis of 31 per cent. If their claims had not been boosted unfairly, do you think they would have been willing to settle for a morsel less? Figuring their claims of seven hundred and odd million dollars, of which 31 per cent would be a real claim, it would leave the Government owing the railroads something over $200,000,000. If offset to the amount owed by the railroads to the Government, it would leave the railroads owing the Government about $800,000,000. And this does not take into consideration the $1,600,000,000 which the Government has gratuitously, in one way or another, handed to the railroads.

This bill gives to the railroads $500,000,000, the money to be raised by selling War Finance Corporation bonds, which is practically putting Uncle Sam back of the indebtedness. We are to take in exchange the railroads' securities, because they are not salable on the market. If they had been, the railroads would have sold them. We are to hold these securities for 10 years. Meanwhile, they hope to force the Government to buy, at their inflated figures, the railroads.

Everyone wants the railroads to be going concerns, capable of efficient, reasonable, economic handling of freight and passengers. It does not constitute being an enemy to the roads to want them to go it alone, be strong and vital and self-supporting as they used to be under far more adverse conditions. Their honesty is atrophied, with the removal of competition and the realization that the Government is an easier mark to exploit just now than the investing public. It is the old tale of the tiger that licked the man's hand till he drew blood. They have had a taste of blood and they intend to drain the last drop, even if they wreck the country by their unscrupulous avarice.

No need to refer back to the past actions of the roads for texts. The present is reeking. Their future is unpromising.

You can not consider the roads apart from the character of the men who control their destinies, and it is futile to aver that because the railroads are essential to the well-being of the country this bill must pass. Of course, they are arterial necessities. Everybody knows that. It is elementary. But because we need and must have railroad service is no reason they must put a pistol at our heads. They take the attitude that the railroads must function, even if it becomes necessary for the railroads to take over the Government. I do not see why they should complain of the irksomeness of Government control and their inability to declare rates when every rate fixed was declared by them to be satisfactory. They dictated every condition in the Cummins bill. Yet they were not minded to be satisfied, even then.

The railroads are consumed with a desire for loot, corrupted with an intent to wantonly misrepresent their intakings and their expenditures. They have deliberately created, in their management under Government control, that inefficiency of labor which their canny foresight prompted them to erect as a felonious offset to their just debts to the Government, and which they now intend to magnify to include this pretended loan of $500,000,000 and others, which no doubt they will soon ask in their line of looting, until the people, exasperated and discouraged at the dizzy whirl of frenzied finance, will be driven to wash their hands of the lot by taking them over at thrice their value.

The clause in this bill pertaining to the fictitious claim of the railroads, known as "inefficiency of labor," is the best thing in it. But the railroads know that it will be knocked out as unconstitutional when it reaches the court. Meanwhile, they will have had their $500,000,000 and the clause will have served as a bait to get votes and quiet the outraged conscience of the people.

They hire out their work to outside firms—work that could have been done more cheaply and efficiently in their own shops; buy their equipment from stall concerns, while the return underground revenue is unmentioned. This serves two purposes—to run up the cost of maintenance and to furnish them the opportunity to evade the regulations of the law pertaining to so many employees. These concerns with which they connive, not being railroads, do not come under the operations of the Esch-Cummins law. Thus, by deceit and fraud, they evade the regulations that have been imposed upon them, by reason of which regulations they lay a ground upon which the Interstate Commerce Commission have granted them the extortionate freight and passenger rates now prevailing. Money that should be spent on upkeep they pocket, through honorary officials' exorbitant salaries and other padded and mythical accounts, and allow their equipment to deteriorate.

This railroad bill fits into the $500,000,000 margin left over in the Kellogg substitute for the Norris bill. One dollar out of every ten may, if the farmer is lucky, find its way into his indirect aid. He will get the drips; the rest will stick to the pockets of the big financier. The Norris bill was well conceived and would have been a good bill in the interest of the farmer. But it was changed. It is just one more subterfuge, a ruse, a wolf in sheep's clothing, masking as a bill for the interest of the farmer when it is intended primarily to benefit the banker and big business. This bill permits the War Finance Corporation to bond itself for $1,500,000,000. The $500,000,000 is to take care of the railroad bill. The other billion is supposedly to take care of agriculture. The railroads have insisted that this bill, too, be passed now. They have baited you by calling it "farmer relief." They want it passed to boost the stock of the railroads.

The farmer and the soldier knock at the door of their Uncle Sam's Treasury in vain. The farmer can go bankrupt for the lack of just a little credit to carry him over, credit to which he is honestly entitled, and to furnish which Congress, at the will of the people, instituted a new banking system. But those banks were so manipulated that they worked to the detriment of the farmer rather than to his advantage. He can not get credits, and his plea for credit is termed "special legislation."

Who does this Government belong to, anyway? Who can get a hearing and credits when they want it? Who has only to indicate a desire and it is fulfilled and more than fulfilled? High finance seems to have no difficulty in getting results from the Treasury, commissioners, and courts.

The Interstate Commerce Commission recently voted 6 to 5 to uphold the outrageous "formula of inefficiency." The courts are very technical in the interests of the railroads and the Constitution. Not satisfied with having been kept from ruin all during the war, when they had run themselves out and through their dishonest and illegal exploitation were tottering on the verge of bankruptcy, with their greed unquenched by a sop of over a billion dollars already, they are planning now, through their fiendishly ingenious "formula of inefficiency," to sweep the floor of the Treasury. The only question is how to square it publicly.

I am against this bill, because it is simply another reach of the long, bony fingers of financial interests into Uncle Sam's pocket. We are too poor to give a bonus to the defenders of our country, and yet we are rich enough to take off half of the income tax, which if left on would have more than taken care of the soldiers. And we are rich enough to give the railroads another half billion when they already owe the United States something over eight hundred million.

SOLDIER BONUS LEGISLATION.

Ingratitude is the ugliest sin. When America needed men, she drafted them. She did not consult inclination or convenience, and often disregarded necessity. Technically, necessity could claim exemption, but actually there were numbers of cases where public scorn and popular, whipped-up, and inflated patriotism forced a man to waive his exemption in spite of necessity.

So they went across the sea, 2,000,000 of them. Others remained this side in training camps. In either event they were taken out of the march of their careers, their business life. They lost step. The sweep of industry went on without them. Their places were filled up by those who stayed at home. Labor was not drafted. Wage scales advanced. The man on the job obtained the promotions and all the advantages. Twenty-three thousand new millionaires were added to the glittering galaxy in this country. That means $23,000,000,000 of war profits, yet it is not from these swollen fortunes that the Secretary of the Treasury expects to garner for his depleted Treasury. No. It is the soldier, and equally with him the farmer, who must pay, must bear this burden of war debt.

The Nation went wild over the first wounded soldiers who came back; idolized them; put them on pinnacles; but, unfortunately, seemed to expend all its capacity for enthusiasm on these few. As soon as the war was over they would not even suffer war films. The men who were first to go and last to come back, the men who suffered and sacrificed most, returned to a country exhausted of patriotic thrills, tired of war stories, fed up on war heroes, who watched the rationless parades of returned soldiers with slight enthusiasm. And when it came to the much-touted plan of giving the service man the preference the thing did not pan out. The man on the job, who did not enlist and did not happen to be drafted, or who got excused and stayed home and tended to business, would not give up his job. As a result there are thousands of soldiers out of work to-day, walking the streets looking for a job. The Nation has forgotten. It has grown suddenly parsimonious.

The Treasury must be protected. The tax nerve must not be tweaked, so the Secretary of the Treasury assumes. He banks on the quick and sure forgetfulness of the American people. The Nation made lavish, free-handed response to all requests for this drive and that during the war. The scandal of the rivers of money that flowed into the coffers of the Red Cross, a great part of which was only to be wasted and squandered, and the various other tales of profiteering by trusted agents, have turned the generosity of the American people to disgust.

But this reversion of impulse must not be directed against the very men who were cheated by the profiteers, gouged by the agencies that the people at home supported because of the hope that into the hard and bitter life of the trenches it was their honest purpose to put a little cheer and comfort.

It is enough that the doughboy paid three prices for gift cigarettes, had his sugar disposed of to French and Danish merchants, and the very drug and Red Cross supplies needed for relief work unloaded, to say nothing of sweaters knitted by fingers of loving mothers, sisters, and sweethearts and given in bales sold, and money donated for the soldiers' comfort used to buy wines and soft living and choice lodgings for civilians.

The soldier boy is expected to wait, wait, wait, and say nothing. He is treated like a mendicant and eyed with cold unfriendliness when his rights are pressed for consideration. He is a rank outsider. It is all bosh to say the United States will be ruined by taking care of the soldiers at this time. If France and Great Britain are not bankrupt we are not. What they can pay we can pay. They have not shirked adjusting the compensation of their soldiers, and their war debt was greater than ours.

Let the Allies pay even the interest on their just debts, which they should do, so that we may also make provision for our boys, and this money would more than take care of the bonus. Keep the long fingers of the railroads out of the Treasury heap and there will be plenty for the soldier boys.

If the war had gone on the flow of money into purchases would not have stopped. The debt for them would have been met. So must this war obligation, of deep import. A just war debt, to be met along with other war debts, not dodged or evaded.

There is no controversy anywhere about the wounded and disabled. Everyone agrees that they must be cared for; should have been long ere this. But the men have no visible or objective symptoms; they were disorganized, thrown out of gear physically and mentally, and put at a disadvantage economically. It will take a long time for them to recover. Oliver Wendell Holmes says somewhere that you can measure the blood from a physical wound, but who can measure nerve force flowing away from a tapped nerve?

It is not right to delay this question till the last wounded and disabled soldier is cared for. One enterprise will not hinder the other. Both obligations are going on at the same time and compounding interest by the delay and should be cared for at the same time. The soldiers, sailors, and marines who served their country without stint when need arose, who took danger and trial unflinchingly, who filled their cup of duty to the brim, deserve at the hands of that country honor and consideration in full measure.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. CHARLES F. CURRY,

OF CALIFORNIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, August 23, 1921.

Mr. CURRY. Mr. Speaker, all right-thinking men desire international peace. They hate war as they hate sickness and sin, but the health laws of Moses and the efforts of scientists have not eliminated sickness or lessened the per capita number of physicians, and sin exists regardless of the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount.

It is to be profoundly hoped the conference for the limitation of armaments to be held at Washington in November will devise some means and arrive at some understanding which may minimize the causes and likelihood of war, and that an agreement may be reached that will make war, when waged, less frightful. We pray to the Lord and hope that a means may be found that will make impossible in the future a recurrence of a great international war such as the world has just passed through with its attendant awful sacrifices of human life and property; another such war would bankrupt the nations and would shake to its foundations if not destroy our Christian civilization.

The desire for international peace is as old as the aspirations of the human heart for higher and better condition of civilization. It is a problem that has had the best thought and the best efforts of the noblest minds of the ages, yet the world to-day is steeped in bloody wars and revolutions, regardless of the consequences of the late frightful conflict and recklessly heedless of its lessons.

The most that can be hoped for in the conceivable future is that great world-involving conflicts may be prevented. Wars between individual nations we will have with us as long as greed and hate, envy and jealousy exist on the face of the earth, poisoning the hearts and corrupting the souls of men; as long as insuperable ambition leads unscrupulous rulers to lust for more power. A free nation is no better than its people; a monarchy is no better than its rulers.

Government deals with actualities, not with beautiful abstract philosophical theories. It is well to strive for the most perfect state of international amity and cordial and open-hearted friendship, but sound-minded men know the best we can do is to obtain a compromise on an ideal. We are dealing with flesh and blood, human nature, economic conditions, and national and international problems as they are; that is very different from sitting in the cloistered chair of philosophy in a university dreaming dreams, evolving theories, and in imagination governing a world of our own making and by all-compelling reason molding the peoples to conform to our hypothesis and the nations to our conclusions.

The duty of statesmanship is to establish an ideal, and failing to attain that ideal to secure the best compromise possible for the advancement and happiness of humankind. The ideal has been outlined for us; it is the ultimate aim of civilization, the ages old dream of the sages, to establish world-wide and lasting international peace and amity between all of the nations of the earth. A prerequisite to this idealistic state is the minimizing and limitation of the armaments of the nations.

Failing to attain the ideal state, the duty of statesmanship requires the establishment of the bonds of mutual respect, friendship, and peace as far and wide as possible.

Pending the realization of the ideal, hidden far in the mists that shroud the future, the compelling necessity is that we provide a sure and strong defense for our Nation.

We have conclusively demonstrated to the world that we are a patient people and will only resort to war as a last recourse. That has always been our policy. We have never engaged in war but in the defense of liberty, human rights, national honor, and integrity. When necessary we will always fight in defense or in offense for any of them.

In ancient times it used to be said that Carthage would fight to its last dollar, but Rome would fight to its last man. The United States will fight for the right to its last man and its last dollar.

Frightful as is war, there are things far worse. The abject and groveling surrender of our lofty principles, the sacrifice of the liberty we enjoy, would be worse, to my mind, than the most devastating war.

No people ever attained liberty but by the sword, and no people ever retained liberty any longer than they possessed the power, the courage, and the patriotism to defend it with the sword. Our country was born of blood, baptized in blood, and was saved and cemented by the shedding of blood.

While the desire for liberty is as old as the aspirations of the human heart for higher and better conditions, the liberty we enjoy is a new thing in government and dates practically from the Revolutionary War. It is the result of the best thought and the best efforts of the best minds that have inhabited and benefited the earth by right living and exalted thinking. It cost unnumbered precious lives and untold treasure. It is our obligation to transmit it to posterity as pure as we received it from the founders and preservers of the Republic, who suffered so much and who mutually pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor that they and we might be free.

Freedom is not the natural state of man. It can not be conferred on a people by a constitution, by statute, or by a declaration of independence. A republic is the highest expression of the evolution of government. It took our branch of the human race thousands of years to develop to the government by the people stage of civilization. Such a government can only be maintained by a moral and intelligent and a courageous people, who are willing, when necessary, to fight and to die in defense of the nation's rights, honor, and independence, and in the defense of human liberty.

The Athenians, and after them the Romans, knew, as was stated first by Themistocles and later by Pompey, "That the people who were masters of the sea would be masters of the world." When first propounded this epigram was scoffed at, but its truth was firmly established and proven. So now, to-day, I say to you in all sincerity that the people who are masters of the air will be masters of the world. It is an inexorable fact. There will be scoffers to-day at truth as there were then. Men of small vision have always pestered the earth with their presence, blatantly proclaiming the petty thoughts evolving from their circumscribed minds.

Let us hope the truth will impress the American people and the Members of the American Congress so that we may at all times be in position to defend the honor and the integrity of the Nation. Ours is a solemn responsibility. We have in our keeping the welfare of the most advanced people, the most perfect Government, and the greatest Nation that has ever blessed the earth. It is our constitutional and our sacred duty to "provide for the national defense." If we fail in this we lay our Nation liable to destruction at the hands of any super-ambitious, arrogant, and aggressive military power that perceives and covets the wealth of our resources and the beauty of our land.

The United States is the only Nation that ever existed whose people have proven themselves capable of effective self-government and at the same time enjoy both personal and political liberty. Most monarchical governments are jealous of her success and prosperity. Should our Government fail or be destroyed, liberty will perish from the earth.

It is our duty to consider the national defense most seriously and to provide for the most efficient, effective, and economical defense the art of war can devise.

We must have a Navy, and sea craft capable of carrying airplanes, to push an offensive across the seas—not for conquest, but for self-protection. We require a Navy to protect our merchant marine on the high seas in time of peace and to insure the sovereignty of the Nation. Story, in his Commentaries on the Constitution, says:

> No nation was ever deprived of its liberty by its Navy. * * * And a commercial nation would be utterly without its due share of sovereignty upon the ocean, its means of self-protection at home, and its power of efficient action abroad without the possession of a navy. Yet this power until a comparatively recent period found little favor with some of our statesmen of no mean ability.

And we must have an Army; the best Navy and the best Army our resources will permit and the national defense demands. But without an air force both are helpless.

I introduced in the last Congress and I reintroduced in this Congress a bill providing for a department of aeronautics in the Government.

Before introducing my bill to coordinate aviation activities I carefully studied the organization of the air arm of each of the foreign Governments and our own and other nations' experiences during the World War and since. I submitted my bill as drafted to the leading experts on aviation, both military and commercial, in the country and asked for suggestions for improvement. The bill in its present form has the unqualified indorsement of every aviation expert in the country.

Exhaustive hearings were held in the Senate and House committees. Result—no action.

If we create a department of national defense in the Government with the Army and Navy as separate arms of that department we must also create the air force a separate and independent arm of the department. If we do not create such a department we must create an independent department of aeronautics. Any less drastic action will prove fatal to our system of defense.

I hold to the opinion that the most efficient and effective method is to create a department of national defense, combining the Navy Department and the War Department, and establishing within the department of national defense three independent arms, under the control of undersecretaries—Army, Navy, and Aeronautics. This will compel the closest cooperation in organization and operation.

Aviation is an arm of the national defense in itself; it is not merely a service, a part of an arm. It has numerous branches, such as pursuit aviation, which is the fast single-seater machines used to clear the air of the enemy; bombardment aviation, which carries the great bombs, the torpedoes, and the poison gas; and attack aviation, which has armored airplanes equipped with cannon, machine guns, and small missiles, and acts close to the ground or water. They are operated in great numbers and directed by wireless telegraphy. They have their own system of maneuvers, their tactics, and their strategy, entirely different from either Army or Navy maneuvers, tactics, and strategy. Gradually they are developing their own means of supply through the air—that is, large airplanes and airships, or dirigibles, can be utilized to distribute supplies. Soon they will be practically independent of any means of communication on the ground. This military development has come so fast that not only the officers, and particularly the older officers, in the Army and Navy do not realize it, but few in civil life know anything about it. They are not to be too severely criticized for their failure to grasp the full significance of the present and future military value of aircraft. Genius or developed ability is usually specialized. Very few men have been great in more than one line of endeavor; there are some brilliant exceptions to this rule, but on the whole a very limited number exceed mediocrity in even one line of endeavor. No great general has ever been a great naval officer and no great admiral has ever been a great general. Likewise no soldier or sailor is competent to serve in charge of an air force; it takes an airman. The vast number of even competent soldiers and sailors have added nothing to the art of war; to improve the art of war requires great military ability plus genius. There are few geniuses.

War as it is to-day has developed from the individual encounter to the mass attack, and through the various phases of the mass attack from hand-to-hand engagement with crude weapons of stone and wood and bone on to the present intensely specialized warfare, where the weapons are the products of the sciences and numerous highly specialized branches are operated together as a harmonious whole through perfected details of organization which extend from the flaming battle front to the farm, factory, and fireside.

Every advance in the art of war has been accepted reluctantly and only after its superiority over old and worn-out methods has been proven on the field of battle, frequently at the cost of empire, often to the retardment of civilization.

Gustavus Adolphus attained striking success on the field of battle and changed the whole complexion of war as it is waged by segregating the unwieldy masses of the army into small battalions, dispensing with their armor, providing them with lighter weapons, and carefully arranging the several units of cavalry, pikemen, artillery, and musketeers so as to mutually support one another in battle. Thus, the "Snow King," who the military authorities of the day predicted would "melt under the southern sun," laid siege to and conquered 80 towns and fortresses and became the Lion of the North. He accomplished this by ignoring precedent and creating precedent. Cæsar and Napoleon refused to be bound by the iron rule of military precedent. They accepted, created, and used new methods. They changed and reorganized the art of war.

To-day the fighting force of the air is handicapped by the usual opposition to new methods of warfare, and instead of being assigned its proper place as an equal and independent arm of the national defense it is being subordinated to the Army and Navy and its development hindered.

The bombing tests recently carried on off the Virginia Capes demonstrated conclusively the value of aircraft against any sort of sea craft. Their full value, however, was not shown, because they were permitted to use only one kind of weapon, the bomb. They were prohibited from using torpedoes, gas, gunfire, mines, or incendiary projectiles, as these were expressly prohibited by the Navy.

The tests were made as difficult as it was possible to make them. The ships were anchored at both ends, usually across the wind, which not only presented a smaller target, but is the most difficult position to attack. They had no ammunition in their magazines and no steam in their boilers, and they were lying still instead of moving. A moving object is an easier target for a bombardier than is one lying still in a smooth sea. The tests were called off by the Navy every time the visibility was a little bad or the sea rough, because they could not act sufficiently well with their surface seacraft.

The airplanes and airships were ready and eager to operate at any time, day or night. Landing lights and flares were on hand at Langley Field in case an opportunity was given for night attack. In no case did it require more than 20 minutes to sink the biggest ship turned out by the Navy for these tests, under conditions entirely prescribed by the Navy and which they deemed would make it impossible for aircraft to act decisively against such targets. It is improbable that gunfire could have sunk the battleship Ostfriedland at a battle range until after several days of firing. During the war the capital ships that were sunk were sent to the bottom not by gunfire but by the explosions in their magazines and boilers caused by gunfire. During the bombing tests gunfire was used from torpedo craft and battleships against the ex-German torpedo boat destroyers, and the Navy shot at them all day long, beginning in the morning, and the destroyer targets sank only in the evening.

Our Army Air Service has studied for a long time, and carefully, the effect of the various weapons of the air on seacraft. They were never given target ships or means of developing their armament until called upon to carry out these operations and prove their contentions, 100 miles from their airdrome, out at sea, and with aircraft of a comparatively old model.

After two years of hard work the Army Air Service was permitted to have some large bombs constructed. A 2,000-pound bomb was constructed in about two months which can sink any capital ship now in existence. In September of this year a 4,000-pound bomb will be ready for use, twice as powerful as the 2,000-pound bomb.

The total cost of the aircraft operating from Langley Field in these experiments was less than the cost of one torpedo boat destroyer, which is merely an auxiliary vessel of the fleet.

In spite of the impression some seem to have gained that it took longer than it actually did for aerial bombs to sink the surface craft, every target was rapidly sunk when attacked with the purpose to sink the ship. The initial attacks with small bombs were made to determine their effect. The use of small bombs in actual warfare would be to destroy the superstructure and the crew; gas would also be utilized for the latter purpose. In night attack powerful flares would be used to illuminate the target and to blind those on deck. The flares are of such intensity—1,000,000 candlepower—that it blinds those beneath temporarily.

It is possible to put a ship out of commission and kill the crew by the use of the smaller bombs and poison gas without sinking the ship.

In the attack on the G-102—the destroyer—the SE-5 planes attacked with 25-pound Cooper bombs at 9.29 a. m., with the sole object of proving the usefulness of these small bombs against personnel on the decks of seacraft. The SE-5 attack was completed at 9.42 a. m.—13 minutes—during which it is estimated that some 40 bombs were dropped, of which 20 were direct hits, at least 2 of these bombs having gone down the funnels of the destroyer. At 10.23 a. m. an attack was begun with Martin bombers, using 300-pound bombs, each plane dropping two bombs during passage over the target. At 10.28 a. m. it was noticed that the destroyer was sinking rapidly. At 10.40 a. m. she sank completely out of sight, just 17 minutes after the Martin bombers began the attack, using the size bombs which the Army had calculated were sufficient to use against this particular type of ship. Approximately forty 300-pound bombs were dropped by this formation.

In the operations against the ex-German cruiser Frankfurt the Navy attacked first, the first échelon being composed of three F5L flying boats. The attack was begun at 9.52 a. m. from an altitude of about 1,000 feet. No direct hits were made, although bombs ranging from 165 to 300 pounds landed within 10 yards of the side, both to port and starboard, in a very good position for underwater effect, which did considerable damage to the bottom. An inspection of the target at this time from the air showed that no damage had apparently been done on the deck by this attack. The Navy F5L attack was completed at 10.07 a. m. Army Martin bomber attack with 300-pound bombs was begun at 10.18 a. m. It might be noted at this point that the 300-pound bombs were not calculated as of sufficient explosive power to immediately put this type of ship out of commission. However, after 10.40 a. m., which time marked the completion of the Martin bomber attack of 23 minutes, an inspection of the target from close range showed the port side amidship to be slightly dished and cruiser taking a slight list to port. In the neighborhood of 11.30 a. m. three Navy Martins, carrying three 560-pound naval bombs, attacked the Frankfurt and were successful in making several direct hits, which upon inspection showed to have landed amidship and to have done considerable damage to the waist. It is impossible to estimate the total damage done by these bombs. Three naval NC boats began attack at 4.19 p. m. The weight of bombs carried by these planes is not known. Their salvo fell short and to the left approximately 50 feet.

The Army Martin bombardment attack, consisting of six planes carrying three 600-pound bombs—each bomb, incidentally, was considered by explosive experts as being of sufficient size to immediately put out of commission a ship of the Frankfurt class—was started at 4.22 p. m., the first two bombs falling over 100 feet from the target. At 4.25 p. m. two 600-pound bombs made a direct hit forward of amidships, and fragments were thrown to the south of the target for almost a mile. When the smoke cleared it was seen that the cruiser had taken a sharp list to port and had begun to settle by the bow. Two more direct hits were made, and fell close to the hull in the water on both port and starboard sides. At 4.30 p. m. the attack of 8 minutes was completed, the airplanes having dropped eighteen 600-pound bombs. As Navy seaplanes were about to attack, the signal to cease bombing was given by the Shawmut, in order to land, if possible, a boarding party to estimate the damage done; but on coming close to the side of the cruiser it was seen that it was impossible to land a boarding party because of the rapid sinking of the Frankfurt. She sank from sight at 4.51 p. m.—23 minutes after attack had begun with 600-pound bombs.

In the case of the Ostfriesland, after three attacks with 600-pound bombs, from an altitude of approximately 2,000 feet, from Navy F5L and NC boats, Army Martin bombardment attacked with 600-pound bombs at an altitude of 2,000 feet at 3.41 p. m. The attack continued for 10 minutes, until 3.51 p. m., during which time about 20 bombs were dropped, one of which landed on one of the forward starboard turrets and set it on fire. An inspection of the target from the air after this bombardment showed that comparatively no damage had been done on deck, although the ship had listed a few points to port. On July 21 the Navy had been carrying out operations against the Ostfriesland with 600-pound bombs, which, up to the time of the arrival of the Martin formation with 1,100-pound projectiles, had seemed to have done little damage. The Army Air Service attack with Martins was started at 8.32 a. m. from an altitude of 2,000 feet. At 8.38 a. m. the attack was called off by smoke signal after only five bombs had fallen, three of which were direct hits—one having fallen on the port side forward deck and two having fallen forward of the forward funnel and one near the rear funnel. An inspection of the target before attack began at 12.18 p. m. showed that the stern of the Ostfriesland was settling and a slight list to port was noticed. At 12.33 p. m. the target began to list at a dangerous angle to port, and at 12.37½ p. m. the ship had rolled completely over and disappeared from the surface of the water. Approximately six 2,000-pound bombs had been dropped, all of which fell close to the sides of the ship, two falling within 20 or 30 feet of each other not more than 5 to 10 feet from the port quarter. In the opinion of experts these bombs were the explosives which caused the final sinking. The duration of the attack with 2,000-pound bombs was approximately 19½ minutes. In fact, the last bomb fell just as the bow of the Ostfriesland disappeared beneath the water, and was entirely superfluous. The 2,000-pound bombs were considered by ordnance experts to have been of sufficient explosive power to have completely disabled or sunk a ship of the type of the Ostfriesland.

The airplane is not only valuable against seacraft but it is the only force capable of defending the country against hostile air attack. In the event of war, if an enemy launches planes from airplane carriers, and if we have not sufficiently developed a trained and equipped air power to counteract him, our interior as well as our coast cities, our factories, forests, and farms will be destroyed by explosive and incendiary bombs and poison gas. This is no bugaboo, but has been demonstrated and can be demonstrated at any time. With a well organized and equipped air force our coasts can be made absolutely secure from attack; without it we are entirely in the hands of the enemy.

In the last 10 years we have spent about $1,897,000,000 on so-called "coast defense," which consists of cannon placed up and down the coast in strategic positions. Cannon have been developed for 500 years, but they can not hit a military object as well as a bomber can at battle range. Cannon can shoot effectively no more than 10 or 15 miles. They are fixed in position, and the enemy must come to them in order that they may be able to act. It takes as long to get a battery firing properly—that is, about one hour—as it takes an airplane to fly over 100 miles. These great coast artillery emplacements, made of masonry and steel, which cost millions of dollars, are, in fact, no defense at all. No enemy would consider attacking us with cannon fire or land soldiers until he had gained unquestioned control of the air. The first objective, of course, would be the destruction of our costly coast defense emplacements, and they would fall before the aerial bombs, then our cities in which are located our factories, and our military stores would be attacked and destroyed by bombs, and next would come our systems of communication. All nations recognize these salient military facts except our own.

An air force alone and unaided can defend our coasts against all comers.

It is a matter of national concern that the older services, the Army and the Navy, have failed to develop aviation. Without ever having investigated the possibilities, they boldly announced that the things that have been done could not be done. Prominent officers of both the Army and Navy are on record before congressional committees as saying that the things that have been actually accomplished were absurd impossibilities.

It is very evident that an air force such as we must have can not be developed under an Army and a Navy. It must be created an arm of the national defense under the full and complete control of airmen who know their business. To intrust such a development to services that are at heart against its expansion is to court disaster in the next war, because any enemy coming against us will come with an air force united and developed to the highest degree. Every great power on the face of the earth with the sole exception of the United States has recognized the air force as an arm of the national defense.

To-day we are seeking to economize in all of our Government departments. We are seeking efficiency and economy through coordination and through the checking of useless expense. We hope to do this by dispensing with useless governmental agencies and equipment and by cutting off the resultant overhead. At present there are 21 different bureaus of the Government handling air matters, namely: War Department; Navy Department and Marine Corps; Coast Guard; Aeronautical Board, Washington; Army Air Service Experimental Laboratory, Dayton; Bureau of Entomology, Washington; Bureau of Fisheries, Washington; Bureau of Mines, Washington; Bureau of Standards, Washington; Forest Products Laboratory, Madison, Wis.; Forest Service, Washington; International Aircraft Standards Board; Joint Board, Washington; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Washington; National Research Council, Washington; Navy Aerodynamic Laboratory, Washington; Weather Bureau, Washington and principal cities.

Each has an overhead, its own organization for development or lack of development, and its own little bureau for handling it.

Not only is aviation a vital military asset to the Nation, but its civil and commercial use is unlimted.

The mapping of the whole country can be made in a period of three or four years at a cost of from one-fourth to one-tenth as great as the cost by any other means. Our forests can be patrolled by airplanes and protected from fire better than in any other way. Farm surveys can be made from the air and help to increase our agricultural production; they will show what crops should be raised, what the forestation should be, where water should be encountered and distributed. Aerial surveys can show where power and electric lines, railroads, and roads should be run. Hydrographic work along our coasts, reconnoissance of mine areas and unexplored territories can be successfully carried out. A short time ago it was demonstrated that orchards can be sprayed from planes with fluid for killing insects in the minimum time with great success and at minimum cost. In Europe the carrying of passengers, express, and mail by airplanes and airships is on an economic basis. In this country our Air Mail Service is one of the few revenue-producing enterprises of the Government. Soon private industry will develop air lines for the carrying of passengers and express. It is the fastest means of transportation, and that fact alone in this day and age makes certain its development. Recently the air line from Paris to London cut their passenger rates almost one-half, making it much cheaper than to travel by boat and train, and in about two hours and a half. Passengers, express, and mail at present constitute 30 per cent of the business of the railroads. In the not far distant future the air lines will be serious competitors.

The everyday uses of the airplane have been stated as follows:

1. CIVIC.

A. Architectural studies of individual buildings or groups of buildings.
   1. Progressive photographs showing development at various stages.
   2. Studies to get influence of surrounding buildings.
   3. Bird's-eye view of existing groups—for modification or development.
B. City planning and improvement.
   1. Studies of river and harbor terminal problems.
   2. Observation of river flows to determine location of breakwater channels, etc.
   3. Street layouts, parks, etc.
   4. Building problems—congestion, fire regulations, etc.
C. Ambulance service.
   1. Transfer of patients from vessel to hospital.
   2. Physicians for emergency cases.
   3. Transportation of surgical instruments and supplies.
D. Police patrol.
E. Fire patrol.
   1. Fire location and district surveys.
   2. Smoke nuisance investigations.

2. NATIONAL.

A. Forestry.
   1. Mapping of forests.
   2. Location and reporting of fires.
   3. Photographs of forests for isolating infected areas.
   4. Patrol against raids and depredations of any character.
   5. Location of desired timber.

B. Boundry patrol.
1. Customs and revenue service.
2. Coast guard.
3. Location of wrecks, derelicts, and other menaces to navigation.
4. Location of vessels in distress, particularly where radio communication has failed.
5. Prevention and suppression of aerial smuggling.
6. Search of areas in western rivers, in flood times, for refugees and speedy acquisition of information concerning condition of settlements out of communication with outside world.
7. Establishment of communication by line between vessels aground off shore and the beach when vessel is beyond the range of line guns.
8. Occasional uses, where practicable, in actual rescue from the water of persons in danger of drowning.

C. Mail service.
1. Catching outgoing steamers with important mail or other messages.
2. Delivering mail to and from dirigibles and large airplanes.
3. Receiving mail from incoming steamer while long distance at sea.
4. Transoceanic and transcontinental mail, express, and passenger carrying.

D. Military and naval.
1. Attack of all enemy elements in the air.
2. Liaison with infantry.
3. Messenger service at high altitudes.
4. Prevention of enemy air attacks on friendly ground troops.
5. Artillery adjustments.
6. Visual reconnaissance.
7. Bombardment raids.
8. Artillery surveillance.
9. Coast patrol.
10. Communication between fleet commander and cooperating forces on shore.
11. Assisting in naval blockades.
12. Offensive against submarines and torpedo boats.
13. Location of mines.
14. Adjustment of shore batteries.
15. Photography of results of bombardment.
16. Photography of friendly works to improve camouflage.
17. Dropping maps, locations, orders, and information to friendly troops.
18. Dropping propaganda.
19. Guide to advancing troops.
20. Landing raiding parties back of lines.
21. Photographic reconnaissance.
22. Attacks on ground troops.
23. Incendiary bombardment.
24. Supplying food and ammunition to isolated posts.
25. Destruction of battleships.
26. Raids on hostile batteries that can not be reached by artillery.
27. Adjustment of fire from ships.
28. Location and destruction of enemy submarines.

E. Official Government service.
1. Personal service to officials.
2. Dispatch service between officials.

F. Map making and national survey.
1. City mosaics for Government improvement of rivers and harbors.
2. County mosaics for determination of landing fields.
3. Meteorological surveys.

2. COMMERCIAL.

A. Landscape gardening.
1. Preliminary study of grounds for preparing development plans.
2. Progressive study and development.

B. Engineering studies.
1. Factories, buildings, and massive construction work.
2. Observations from all angles for inspection purposes.
3. Studies of the local ground and adjacent territory for dam work.
4. Repair work service department for telephone and telegraph companies carrying crews.
5. Inspection power, telegraph, and telephone lines.

C. Shore lines.
1. Studies on the movement of tides and currents for shore breakwater defects.
2. Taking of soundings in shallow or swampy country not open to navigation.

D. River, harbor, and dock improvement.
1. Studies of river traffic, river flow, and location of docks and terminals.
2. Dredging studies, from observation of flow of streams.

E. City planning.
1. Topographic studies of ground layout for planning streets, water systems, etc.
2. Photographic studies as basis of development.

F. Mine communications.
1. Carrying precious ore and stones to outlet and rapidly bringing in supplies to regions which can not readily be reached by other transportation facilities.
2. Pay-roll transportation.
3. Transportation of officials on inspection tours.

G. Exploration and reconnoissance of new routes—railroads, trails, and roads.
1. Aerial surveys of new vehicle roads, railroads, etc.
2. Topographical—photographic surveys.
3. New regional exploration.

H. Delivery routes: Department stores, newspapers, etc.
1. Regular merchandise delivery.
2. News service—distribution of matrices and illustrations to rural or other newspapers and journals.
3. Delivery of fish, milk, and perishable produce to distant markets.
4. Delivery of spare parts—small pieces of machinery or mechanical apparatus.
5. Pelt and fur delivery to markets.
6. Delivery of clearance papers to vessels outbound.
7. Supplying rations or materials at inaccessible places while on exploring expeditions or in case of injury by storm.

I. Publicity stunts and advertising.
1. Department stores.
2. Conventions.
3. Recruiting campaigns.
4. Newspapers.
5. Theaters.
6. Real estate sales.

J. Forest survey.
1. Location of special service stock.
2. Fire areas.
3. Swamp areas.
4. Condition of growth.
5. Planning of logging routes.

K. Ranch service.
1. Herding cattle, locating lost or strayed droves of animals.
2. Inspection of ground and rapid location of good grazing territory.
3. Herding of stampeding cattle on ranges.
4. Communication on large scattered farms and ranges.

L. Chamber of commerce reports—progressive studies.
1. Photographs of important buildings and works in cities.
2. Noting development of sections of cities.
3. Furnishing evidence for necessary betterment legislation.

M. News files and motion-picture films.
1. Reporting races, giving progressive views.
2. Bringing reporters quickly to scene of news.
3. Motion picture of big events.
4. Carrying pictures quickly to theaters.
5. Special copy service.

N. Service—special dispatch.
1. Passenger carrying.
2. Sight-seeing over cities.
3. Regular air taxi service.
4. Commercial routes between cities.
5. Hotel service, carrying guests to golf links, etc.

O. Agricultural.
1. Farm surveys showing physical conditions, crops, fences, etc.
2. Sheep and cattle herding, locating lost or strayed stock.

P. Fisheries.
1. Scouting for whales or schools of fish.

Q. Commercial financial transactions.
1. Pay roll delivery over dangerous territory.
2. Fire underwriters' examination of districts from the air, noting congestion, natural fire barriers, etc.

R. Aviation schools.
1. Training of pilots.
2. Passenger service.
3. Exhibition flying for industrial expositions, fairs, carnivals, etc.

4. PERSONAL.

A. Commuting.
   1. Overland travel to business.
   2. From summer home to city.
   3. Missionary societies operating in localities that are far out of regular paths of travel.
B. Personal service.
   1. Service vehicle for doctors and other professional men.
C. Pleasure.
   1. Vacation trips, week-end trips, etc.
   2. Fishing.
   3. Flying to and from hunting trips.
D. Sports.
   1. Racing.
   2. Cross-country touring.
   3. Establishing of new record.
   4. Photography.
   5. Hunting.
E. Scientific.
   1. Observation of celestial bodies above earth's dust layer.
   2. Geographic studies.

In addition to the above, the Army Air Service has recently cooperated with the Agricultural Experimental Station of Ohio in spraying trees to kill insects which were destroying them.

The airplane can also be used in smuggling and in many other criminal enterprises that will readily suggest themselves to the mind, and this can only be prevented by establishing a responsible national control. Without such control it is not without the range of possibility that a few unscrupulous and vicious men on an anarchistic mission of destruction could destroy with bombs and gas any one of our great cities. Such horrible and criminal use of the airplane can only be prevented by the national control of the sale of planes and the Federal supervision of the training and licensing of pilots. Aviation is something that can not be just "picked up" like driving an automobile.

Every pilot and every airplane used in a civil or commercial way is a distinct military asset to the Government, because they can be used as training planes or converted into fighting planes in time of war, while their pilots will be, after a short and intensified training in the art of aerial warfare, immediately available for military service.

We have reached the point in aviation where we must consolidate our efforts, cut down overhead, and place our airmen in charge.

We can go no further without a policy. We must adopt a positive policy under which all aeronautical activities will be placed under one head and the officers in charge must be airmen. Then we must proceed to develop an air force strong enough to cope with any that may be brought against us, with part deployed behind each national boundary and enough in the Middle States to reinforce the outposts in case of attack, strong enough to gain and maintain the mastery of the air.

Every great world power, with the sole exception of the United States, has recognized the importance of the airplane in war. After careful study each of these powers has recognized aviation as an arm of the national defense. We can lag behind with hope of national security no longer.

When the first planes passed over the front in the World War their pilots waved friendly greeting to the pilots of enemy planes. Their mission was merely observation. They carried no weapons. Later pilots carried revolvers, automatic pistols, or rifles, and occasionally exchanged shots, but this was more humorous than serious, for it was far from effective. From that position in the game of war the airplane has developed during and since the war to be the most vitally important element in our national defense. The cost of developing and maintaining an adequate and effective air force for the national defense is less than the cost of maintaining an adequate and effective Navy or Army. And, unlike an Army or Navy, it can be made to practically support itself in time of peace, because we can use it to patrol our forests, spray our orchards, carry mail, and perform numerous of the above-mentioned important duties to the benefit of the Nation and the people.

We have a splendid nucleus of trained aviation experts in this country. There is no better airman than the American. Yet we do not avail ourselves of our best talent; we scatter our efforts and place control in the hands of well-meaning men, talented in their own work and in their own work national assets, but who know nothing of aeronautics except the little they pick up after they are in control, and usually they are too old to learn. They have been trained all of their lives to believe other arms of the national defense are the most vital, and you can not change the convictions of a lifetime in a moment. Nor can mere theorizing and reading bring understanding. One might read about boats all of his life, but would still be incompetent to command a navy, or read of war and be incompetent to command an army. He must have personal instruction, training, and actual experience to qualify; so must a man to command an air force.

The officers of the American Army and Navy are excelled by the officers of no army or navy in the world in ability, courage, or high professional ethics, but the training of the ground officers of the Army and the deck officers of the Navy does not qualify them to command an air force. It is as ridiculous to place a soldier or sailor in charge of an air force as it would be to place an admiral in charge of an army or a general in charge of a navy. It requires an airman to command an air force efficiently and effectively.

The outstanding and compelling fact is that the air force to-day is the most vital arm of the national defense, and it is the most scientific and the most highly specialized, requiring long and hard study and training and personal experience to command. There is infinitely more difference between the air force and the Army or Navy in proper organization, tactics, and strategy and in training and operation than there is between the Army and the Navy.

These facts are important and must have our immediate attention. It is the constitutional duty of the Congress that we are sworn to perform to "provide for the national defense," and we are not doing it. A defense that is faulty is chargeable to the Congress in the event of its failure, and our defense will continue to be faulty until we provide an adequate and unified air force.

The report of the First Provisional Air Brigade on the bombing tests is now in the hands of the Secretary of War and being considered by him. When available every Member of the Congress should obtain a copy and study it carefully. It is the report submitted by the officers who actually conducted the tests.

The labors of the Republican majority to lay a foundation for economic reconstruction and to reduce taxation deserve the utmost appreciation of the country.

It is gratifying to be able to say, therefore, that probably no other government in the world has during a similar period so drastically reduced expenditures as has the Government of the United States during the past two years on the insistence of the Republican Congress.

In short, half the present total expenditures of the Government arises from wars of the past. Similar burdens are imposed upon the taxpayers of other countries, and a well-nigh universal protest against a possible repetition of gigantic conflict gives rise to the common hope that the conference in November may lighten the burdens of both armament and taxation, not only for this but for other lands. * * *

We have made much progress toward retrenchment and greatly increased efficiency. (President Harding.)

We are laboring to achieve realizable ideals.

Millions of your countrymen confidently hope that through your initiative and under your guidance there may be fixed a limitation of armament.

I sincerely hope the plans which you now have in mind to meet the problems of unemployment and of heavy railroad rates may be solved. (Senator McCormick.)

OF

HON. EDWARD J. KING,

OF ILLINOIS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to leave heretofore granted, I hereby extend my remarks by printing in the RECORD certain late, valuable, and important correspondence between his excellency the Hon. Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, and the Hon. MEDILL MCCORMICK, Senator from Illinois, as follows, to wit:

AUGUST 27, 1921.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I can not go to my farm without sending you a line of heartfelt congratulation upon the success which has attended the development of your foreign policy. The treaties with the former enemy States have been negotiated with great skill, good sense, and good will. Peace at last has been established in fact and form, so that we may hope for the early resumption of full diplomatic and commercial relations with Hungary, Austria, and Germany. The wisdom which guided the administration in the negotiation of these treaties is not less manifest in the summoning of the conference to be held here in November and the general definition of its scope. We are laboring to achieve realizable ideals. Men must be careful not to be too sanguine to place too much faith in the coming of an international Utopia, but millions of your countrymen confidently hope that through your initiative and under your guidance there may be fixed by agreement a limitation of armament which may lighten the burdens of the people and through candid conference a liquidation of the differences among the powers, and especially the great maritime powers, which will lead to a true concord of purpose, not only in the Pacific between the British Empire, the Empire of Japan, and ourselves, but among the other peoples in whose peaceful development and whose economic restoration we want to help in every way consistent with our traditions.

Will you let me say that I think that Congress has done not a little to lay the foundation for the economic reconstruction of the country? It has done a great deal more than people who have not followed its labors carefully appear to realize. Looking back two years, we have drastically reduced the public expenditures; we are making an end of the fearful cost and waste entailed in the administration of the railroads and the merchant fleet by public agencies. We are about to free business from the shackles of unsound and onerous taxation, and we have done more than any Congress has done in the same compass of time for the relief and development of agriculture.

Let me add that I sincerely hope the plans which you have in mind to meet the problems of unemployment and of heavy railroad rates may be solved with the cordial cooperation of the men most interested and who may help you and thus help the country most.

Sincerely, yours,

MEDILL MCCORMICK.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 29, 1921.

MY DEAR SENATOR MCCORMICK: Thank you for your letter of congratulation on the accomplishment of the administration down to date. You have been good enough to speak kindly of the work which the executive departments have accomplished, as well as of that which has been done by the Congress. For myself I feel disposed to emphasize what seem to me the remarkable achievements of the extraordinary session of the Congress.

In view of the fact that during the war practically no consideration was given to preparation for the new conditions which would come with the return of peace, and that in the two years after the armistice there was hardly any more administrative attention to these problems, I can not but account it a monumental accomplishment which has marked the work of the extraordinary session down to the time of its recess. For two years before the inauguration of the present administration a Republican Congress patiently and assiduously labored to reduce expenditures. These efforts, despite that the administration was not at that time in political accord with the Congress, produced results which we can summarize in the statement that the appropriations for the current fiscal year will aggregate about four and a quarter billion dollars, and that this is—

Three-quarters of a billion less than the expenditures for the previous fiscal year.

A billion and a half less than the last administration asked of Congress.

Three billions less than were appropriated for the second preceding fiscal year.

The labors of the Republican majority to lay a foundation for economic reconstruction and to reduce taxation deserve the utmost appreciation of the country. The habit of vast expenditure without proper consideration for results is the inevitable fruit of war. Our Government, for example, expended between five and six billion dollars for the manufacture of aircraft, artillery, and artillery ammunition.

To show for this expenditure, it has been officially testified that less than 200 American-made airplanes or 200 American-made cannon ever went into action on the fighting front of the war, while not more than 1 per cent of the ammunition expended by American artillery was, according to the same testimony, of American manufacture.

Approximately $3,500,000,000 have been poured out under the direction of the Shipping Board; yet I have from the War Department the curious bit of information that only one vessel built by the Shipping Board ever carried any American troops to fight in Europe. This was a cargo boat, the Liberty, which, according to the War Department records, in October, 1917, carried approximately 50 soldiers to Europe. These were the only soldiers, according to the record, that were transported to Europe before the armistice in a vessel built by the Shipping Board.

According to the most conservative estimate which has come to me, the Railroad Administration has cost the Government between one and a quarter and one and a half billion dollars, and the end is not yet.

Such is the summary of some of the extravagances incident to war. It is gratifying to be able to say, therefore, that probably no other Government in the world has during a similar period so drastically reduced expenditures as has the Government of the United States during the past two years on the insistence of the Republican Congress. Moreover, I am happy to assure you that the administrative departments are now in full sympathy with the program of rigorous and unremitting economy, through which, I believe, we will be able during the next year to cover back into the Treasury so large a sum that the aggregate of taxation may be reduced to $3,500,000,000 a year. It should be remembered that the service of the national debt demands a billion and a quarter of dollars annually; that nearly a half billion dollars a year was appropriated for war risk insurance, vocational training, the maintenance of hospitals—in short, for the care of those suffering the disabilities arising from the war; and that approximately a quarter of a billion dollars more is appropriated for pension on account of earlier wars.

In short, half the present total expenditures of the Government arises from wars of the past. Similar burdens are imposed upon the taxpayers of other countries, and a well-nigh universal protest against a possible repetition of gigantic conflict gives rise to the common hope that the conference in November may lighten the burdens of both armament and taxation, not only for this but for other lands.

Almost without exception, the governments of other countries are faced with great deficits. Their people not only suffer from the general business depression, unemployment, chaotic exchanges, and disorder in agricultural prices, but they carry very heavy burdens of taxation, which nevertheless is insufficient to meet the current expenditures of their government. We must not overestimate our good fortune and the prudence of our Congress, which permits us to balance revenue and expenditure at a time when deficits are the rule throughout the world. We shall be greatly aided in a policy of progressively reducing expenditure, by the budget law, Republican in origin, design, enactment, and execution. It was the first of a series of measures placed on the statute books at the present extra session of Congress, but I do not hesitate to say that in ordinary times it alone would have been considered a highly creditable chief product of a year's legislative program. Yet in a time of such legislative activity as the present it is only one among many measures of the first importance to be enacted. It was quickly followed by the enactment of the immigration law, calculated both to limit the inflow of population during a period of depression and to hasten the day when we may effect the true Americanization of all newcomers to our shores.

The series of measures looking to the amelioration of conditions in the great agricultural industries would, in other times, have constituted a striking legislative product of a year's session. These include the law for the control of the packing industry, the act for the regulation of grain exchanges, and the law for the extension of credits to farmers through the War Finance Corporation, to enable them to carry their crops until the markets will absorb them. The establishment of a Veterans' Bureau insures a consummation of those reforms in caring for our disabled men which were inaugurated by Executive order. We have established peace and are seeking to establish the generous production and profitable exchange of foodstuffs and commodities under the conditions of peace and corollary assurance of good wages and general employment.

In order that the Senate Finance Committee may devote its uninterrupted attention to the permanent tariff and revenue measures, Congress wisely determined upon a 30-day recess. We may confidently hope, I am sure, that after the recess and before the end of the extraordinary session Congress will adopt both the tariff and taxation measures and that along with these it will pass the bill to permit funding the debt owed us by foreign Governments. This, I hope, will shortly be followed by arrangements under which the debtor countries will begin paying interest on their obligations.

Likewise I am confident that the bill facilitating the funding of the debt of the railways to the United States will become law during the extraordinary session, thus insuring a large and immediate demand for employment of men now idle.

Surveying the national situation as a whole, it is plain that we are working our way out of a welter of waste and prodigal spending at a most impressive rate. We have made much progress toward retrenchment and greatly increased efficiency.

I have all assurance that thoughtful men and women throughout the country will appreciate what has been accomplished and sincerely support our efforts for yet more of achievement along the same lines.

Most sincerely, yours.

WARREN G. HARDING.

The Revenue Bill.

OF
HON. ISAAC SIEGEL,
OF NEW YORK,
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 18, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. SIEGEL. Mr. Speaker, no revenue or tariff bill will ever meet the approval of all of our citizens. It has been truly said that no one desires to pay taxes if he can avoid it. Every legislator knows that every time either a tariff or revenue bill is up for consideration the individual who desires to have some one else pay the tax or duty immediately gets his friends to start up a letter and telegram campaign. The result is that Members of Congress are flooded with numerous letters and telegrams protesting against certain proposed rates which appear in such bills. The bill which is passing the House is not perfect, but in view of the fact that it is lessening the income taxes which the ordinary man has to pay, I am voting for it. In addition it encourages business men by showing that Congress is prepared to assist them as much as possible by reducing taxation.

We must, however, recognize the fact that the great reduction in direct taxation can only be effected after we shall have reduced our appropriations. In order to do so it becomes necessary to appeal to the patriotic instincts of every employee of the Government to economize in the use of materials and to render service just as efficient as he can.

There is a growing demand, and properly so, that the European Governments which borrowed from us ten billions of dollars should be required to pay the interest if they are not in a position to commence to pay part of the principal. It is to be exceedingly regretted that these Governments do not realize the sentiment of the American people. If this interest was to be paid, it would help considerably to reduce the amount to be raised by direct taxation. It is true that many bankers are taking the view that the payment of such interest would hurt us economically, because they claim that we would be unable to increase our export.

The answer is that our foreign trade was only one-seventh of our total trade in 1919. In that year we had a net income of sixty-eight billions, of which five billions at the most was from foreign trade; in other words, if we were to get the interest, we would be in a far better position and lead us to look after the far eastern market with greater energy if we still labor under the impression that this country can not be prosperous without a large foreign trade. Many economic authorities are commencing to take the contrary view, basing their views on the comparatively small foreign business we are doing compared with our domestic consumption and trade. There are certain kinds of food which we use in large quantities and which we would continue to import anyway, so that our business abroad would be running into quite a figure. We must commence to concern ourselves with the big problem of finding work for the unemployed in our midst. If we would commence to use domestic articles exclusively, we would be helping them and ourselves.

American business men, including manufacturers and contractors, must display some enthusiasm and confidence in our future. We have successfully passed through a great war. We demonstrated to the world then that we possessed a potential strength that startled all mankind. Are we then to stand idly by and say that the sentiment which moved us in the time of war can not be awakened in us in time of peace? That would be an unjust and unfair criticism of our citizens. Now is the time to make those necessary additions and repairs which nearly every community was unable to make, though necessary, when the conflict was on. Faith has moved men and women many times to achieve what temporarily seemed impossible. If we will all pull together and strive as hard as we can, we can get this country back into a state of prosperity in six months' time. We must drop all this pessimistic talk and act.

Mr. Speaker, there appeared an article in the New York Times in reference to revenue and taxation which requires a prompt answer. It is as follows:

[By H. T. Newcomb, New York Times, Aug. 23, 1921.]

UNEQUAL TAX DISTRIBUTION.

DO SENATORS AND MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE FAIRLY REPRESENT THE COMMUNITIES WHICH SUFFER UNDER THE PRESENT SYSTEM?

During the three years from July 1, 1917, to June 30, 1920, the United States collected from internal-revenue taxes the immense aggregate of $12,952,349,969. The principal items in this total are:

	Amount.	Per cent of total.
Income, individual incomes	$3,088,844,893	23.85
Income and excess profits, corporations	6,307,853,740	48.70
Estates	233,118,425	1.80
Capital stock	146,792,375	1.13
Public utilities	597,924,210	4.62
Excise, manufacturers, importers, etc	371,979,452	2.87
Excise, dealers and consumers	85,365,955	.66
Distilled spirits and alcoholic beverages	1,066,761,549	8.24
Tobacco and its manufactures	658,001,107	5.08
Legal and business transactions and documents	132,349,791	1.02
Occupations, admissions, etc	184,969,511	1.43
Other	78,388,960	.60
Total	12,952,349,969	100.00

The foregoing shows that nearly three-fourths (72.55 per cent) of the total receipts from internal revenue were collected from income taxes, individual incomes contributing about one-third of this three-fourths and nearly one-quarter (28.85 per cent) of the whole.

Collections made within the State of New York, in the three years' period, amounted to $3,183,843,075. Much more than half the total was raised in four States, as follows:

State.	Amount.	Per cent of grand total.
New York	$3,183,843,075	24.58
Pennsylvania	1,584,089,432	12.23
Illinois	1,129,186,644	8.72
Massachusetts	789,567,701	6.10
Total	6,686,686,852	51.63
All other regions	6,265,663,117	48.37
Grand total	12,952,349,969	100.00

A comparison between the 4 States above and 17 other States having about the same total population throws vivid light upon the distribution of tax burdens. Such a comparison follows:

	Population.		Internal revenue taxes.
	Number.	Per cent of United States.	Amount.	Per cent of United States.	Per capita.
New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts	29,442,880	27.77	$6,686,686,852	51.63	$227.11
Alabama, Arkansas, New Mexico, North Dakota, Utah, Georgia, Idaho, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Montana, Indiana	29,556,908	27.88	1,731,643,916	13.37	58.59

It appears, therefore, that for every dollar paid in internal-revenue taxes during the last three years by the average citizen of the 17 States named in the last column of the foregoing table the average citizen of New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Illinois has paid $3.88. Whatever may be the technical meaning of the provision, appearing twice in the Federal Constitution, which requires the apportionment of direct taxes in correspondence with population, there can be no doubt that such inequality of burden is inconsistent with and an evasion of its spirit. The rule of apportionment was adopted, as stated by Chief Justice Fuller in the Pollock case, "to prevent an attack upon accumulated property by mere force of numbers" (157 U. S., 429, 583).

Another and broader comparison may suggest that such extreme inequality of burdens has resulted from political inertia (not to use a less complimentary term) on the part of those who suffer most. The 25 States of New York, Delaware, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, California, Connecticut, Oregon, Ohio, Washington, Colorado, Wyoming, Louisiana, Texas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, and Vermont elect to Congress 50 Senators (more than a majority of the Senate) and 289 Representatives (almost two-thirds of the House of Representatives). Compared with all the rest of the United States—23 States, 3 Territories, and the District of Columbia—these 25 States have paid in three years as follows:

	Twenty-five States, including New York.	All other States and Territories and the District of Columbia.
Population:
Number	71,162,284	34,859,147
Per cent	67.12	32.88
Internal-revenue taxes:
Amount	$10,913,381,609	$2,038,968,360
Per cent	84.26	15.74
Per capita	$153.36	$58.49

Thus the citizens of 25 States, having two-thirds of the Nation's population, pay almost six-sevenths of the internal-revenue taxes; and, having political power to effect a more equal distribution of burdens, have paid $153.36 per capita, as compared with $58.49 per capita by all other citizens, or, on the average, $2.62 for each $1 paid by other citizens.

Similar comparisons, based on income taxes paid in 1920 (one year only), show even greater inequalities. The States compared in the following table are the same as those used in the one last above shown:

	Twenty-five States, including New York.	All other States and Territories and the District of Columbia.
Income reported in individual tax returns:
Amount	$16,150,146,282	$3,709,345,166
Per cent	81.32	18.68
Taxes on above:
Amount	$1,133,979,326	$135,650,778
Per cent	89.32	10.68
Per capita	$15.94	$3.89

The results of the Federal estate tax are very similar. A comparison, based upon the entire collections, from the effective date of the statute to the end of the fiscal year 1920, a period of about three years and four months, follows:

	25 States, including New York.	All other States and Territories and the District of Columbia.
Estate tax:
Amount	$207,454,321	$31,740,478
Per cent	86.73	13.27
Per capita	$2.92	$0.91

It may be noted, parenthetically, that the estate tax is often greater than can be met out of income and is, in terms, laid directly upon (or in respect of) the assets of every taxable estate. It is, therefore, in the most exact sense, a capital levy, rather than a tax, in the accepted meaning of the word, which is that of an appropriation out of the national income to meet national expenses.

Referring again to the fact that the States whose citizens suffer under these extreme burdens of inequality elect more than half of the Senate and nearly two-thirds of the House of Representatives—that is to say, a greatly preponderating portion of the branch of the national legislature in which all measures of taxation must originate and more than a majority of the body which must consent to the enactment—it seems pertinent to inquire:

Whom do the 289 Representatives and the 50 Senators elected from these 25 States represent?

If they do not represent the taxpayers it might be well for the taxpayers to consider whether they can not be represented. If they are elected by nontaxpayers who consider that they do not share in these burdens, some measure of public education in the fundamentals of public economy may be desirable. At any rate, the figures are deemed to be worthy of earnest consideration.

The author of the article has forgotten that the income-tax amendment to the Constitution authorizes that tax and therefore the rule of apportionment of taxes amongst the States is abolished. The greatest number of earners of large moneys reside in the larger States and therefore those States pay a greater sum in taxes. The people of the State of New York do not object to paying fair taxes as long as expenditures are economically administered. They gave 496,000 men in the late war and they are just as willing to pay their share of the running expenses of the Government, but they ask for and should receive fair consideration in Congress when matters affecting them vitally are up for action.

OF

HON. ALICE M. ROBERTSON,

OF OKLAHOMA.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921.

Miss ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, as the only woman in either branch of Congress, at once upon assuming duty I began efforts to inform myself upon pending legislation especially affecting women and children. The maternity bill being especially stressed through certain lines of advertising and publicity as of most vital importance to women, I have given it unceasing study.

The Children's Bureau was apparently the crux. The scope of this bureau I found from the act creating it to be as follows:

The said bureau shall investigate and report to said department upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life among all classes of our people and shall especially investigate the questions of infant mortality, the birth rate, orphanage, juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupations, accidents, and diseases of children, employment and legislation affecting children in the several States and Territories.

For more than nine years this bureau has been functioning. The first work thus assigned it was investigation of "infant mortality and the birth rate," and obviously the first step to be taken was to secure dependable data upon which to base investigation. Because of the inexplicable failure of the majority of the States to keep an official record of infant birth and mortality necessary data for the required work could not be obtained. Registration gives the new born a National and a State entity at its birth, with either an established legitimate parentage or a possible claim that the State stand to it in loco parentis. The General Government can not take upon itself this work of registration without a meddling usurpation of State powers not to be tolerated. Surely there could have been no "legislation affecting children in the several States and Territories" of greater importance than this right of the new born. Because of lack of registration the United States can only infer and conjecture without facts.

For nine years the ever-increasing demands of the Children's Bureau for money and employees have been met by appropriations. Why no greater success?

For convenience in its consideration the bill S. 1039, as passed by the Senate July 22, 1921, is printed as a part of my remarks upon it:

An act (S. 1039) for the public protection of maternity and infancy and providing a method of cooperation between the Government of the United States and the several States.

Be it enacted, etc., That there are hereby authorized to be appropriated annually, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sums specified in section 2 of this act, to be paid to the several States for the purpose of cooperating with them in promoting the care of maternity and infancy as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. That for the purpose of aiding in paying the expenses of said cooperative work in providing the services and facilities specified in this act, and the necessary printing and distribution of information in connection with the same, there is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $480,000 for each year, $10,000 of which shall be paid annually to each State, in the manner hereinafter provided: Provided, That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the use of the States, subject to the provisions of this act, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, an additional sum of $1,000,000, and annually thereafter a sum not to exceed $1,000,000: Provided further, That the additional appropriations herein authorized shall be apportioned among the States in the proportion which their population bears to the total population of the United States, not including outlying possessions, according to the last preceding United States census: And provided further, That no payment out of the additional appropriation herein authorized shall be made in any year to any State until an equal sum has been appropriated for that year by the legislature of such State for the maintenance of the services and facilities provided for in this act.

So much of the amount appropriated apportioned to any State for any fiscal year as remains unexpended at the close thereof shall be available for expenditures in that State until the close of the succeeding fiscal year. Any amount apportioned under the provisions of this act unexpended at the end of the period during which it is available for expenditure under the provisions of this section shall be reapportioned, within 60 days thereafter, to all the States in the same manner and on the same basis, and certified to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the State agencies described in section 4 in the same way as if it were being apportioned under this act for the first time.

SEC. 3. The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor shall be charged with the carrying out of the provisions of this act, as herein provided, and the Chief of the Children's Bureau shall be the executive officer. The Chief of the Children's Bureau, as executive officer, is hereby directed to form an advisory committee to consult with the Chief of the Children's Bureau and to advise concerning any problems which may arise in connection with the carrying out of the provisions of this act, such advisory committee to consist of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, and the United States Commissioner of Education. The Children's Bureau shall have charge of all matters concerning the administration of this act, as herein provided, and shall have power to cooperate with the State agencies authorized to carry out the provisions of this act. It shall be the duty of the Children's Bureau to make or cause to be made such studies, investigations, and reports as will promote the efficient administration of this act.

SEC. 4. That in order to secure the benefits of the appropriations authorized in section 2 of this act, any State shall, through the legislative authority thereof, accept the provisions of this act and designate or authorize the creation of a State agency with which the Children's Bureau shall have all necessary powers to cooperate as herein provided in the administration of the provisions of this act: Provided, That in any State having a child welfare or child hygiene division in its State agency of health, the said State agency of health shall administer the provisions of this act through such divisions. The Children's Bureau shall recommend to the State agencies cooperating under this act the appointment of advisory committees, both State and local, to assist in carrying out the purposes of this act; the members of such advisory committee shall be selected by the State agencies, and at least half of such members shall be women, all of the members of which advisory committee shall serve without compensation. If in any State, the legislature of which has not made provision for acceptance of this act or which does not meet in 1922, the governor of that State, so far as he is authorized to do so, may, under the provisions of law, accept the provisions of this act and designate or create a State agency to act in cooperation with the Children's Bureau, the said Children's Bureau shall then recognize such State agency for the purposes of this act until the legislature of such State meets in due course and has been in session 60 days.

SEC. 5. That so much, not to exceed 3 per cent, of the additional appropriations authorized for any fiscal year under section 2 of this act, as the Children's Bureau may estimate to be necessary for administering the provisions of this act, as herein provided, shall be deducted for that purpose, to be available until expended. Within 60 days after the close of each fiscal year the said Children's Bureau shall determine what part, if any, of the sums theretofore deducted for administering the provisions of this act will not be needed for that purpose, and apportion such part, if any, for the fiscal year then current in the same manner and on the same basis, and certify it to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the several State agencies described in section 4, in the same way as other amounts authorized by this act to be apportioned among the several States for such current fiscal year.

SEC. 6. That out of the amounts authorized under section 5 of this act the Children's Bureau is authorized to employ, to be taken from the eligible lists of the Civil Service Commission, such assistants, clerks, and other persons in the city of Washington and elsewhere, to purchase such supplies, material, equipment, office fixtures, and apparatus, and to incur such travel and other expense as it may deem necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act.

SEC. 7. That within 60 days after the approval of this act the Children's Bureau shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury and to each State agency described in section 4 the sum which the Children's Bureau has estimated to be deducted for administering the provisions of this act, and the sum which it has apportioned to each State for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and on or before January 20 next preceding the commencement of each succeeding fiscal year it shall make similar certifications for such fiscal year.

SEC. 8. That any State desiring to avail itself of the benefits of this act shall, by its agency described in section 4, submit to the Children's Bureau for its approval detailed plans for carrying out the provisions of this act. These plans shall provide solely for the administration of the act in the State; and provision for instruction in the hygiene of maternity and infancy through public health nurses, consultation centers, and other suitable methods: Provided, That no plans or laws of the States under this act shall provide for any official, or agent, or representative entering any home or taking charge of any child over the objection of the parents, or either of them, or the person standing in loco parentis, nor shall any employees of the Children's Bureau by virtue of this act have any right to enter any home or take charge of any child over the objection of the parents, or either of them, or the person standing in loco parentis. If these plans and laws shall be in conformity with the provisions of this act and reasonably appropriate and adequate to carry out its purposes, due notice of approval shall be sent to the State agency by the Chief of the Children's Bureau.

SEC. 9. That in order to provide instruction to the residents of the various States on the hygiene of infancy and maternity the State agency described in section 4 is authorized to arrange with any educational institution approved for these purposes by the United States Commissioner of Education for the provision of extension courses by qualified lecturers: Provided, That not more than 25 per cent of the sums granted by the United States to a State under this act may be used for this purpose.

SEC. 10. That the facilities provided by any State agencies cooperating under the provisions of this act shall be available for all residents of the State.

SEC. 11. That the Children's Bureau shall every three months ascertain the amounts expended by the several State agencies described in section 4 in the preceding quarter year. On or before the 1st day of January and quarterly thereafter the Children's Bureau shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount to which each State is entitled under the provisions of this act. Upon such certification the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the State treasurer as custodian the amounts so certified.

SEC. 12. That each State agency cooperating under this act shall make such reports concerning its operation and expenditures as shall be prescribed by the Children's Bureau. The Children's Bureau may withhold the allotment of moneys to any State whenever it shall be determined that such moneys are not being expended for the purposes and under the conditions of this act.

If any allotment is withheld from any State, the State agency of such State may appeal to the President of the United States, and if the President shall not direct such sum to be paid it shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 13. No portion of any moneys apportioned under this act for the benefit of the States shall be applied, directly or indirectly, to the purchase, erection, preservation, or repair of any building or buildings or equipment, or for the purchase or rental of any buildings or lands.

SEC. 14. That the Children's Bureau shall perform the duties assigned to it by this act under the supervision and direction of the Secretary of Labor, and he shall include in his annual report to Congress a full account of the administration of this act and expenditures of the moneys herein authorized.

Passed the Senate July 22, 1921.

My first objection to this bill came from its indefiniteness.

I therefore submitted it to a lawyer in my home town, whose opinion is as follows:

As the bill stands, its only purpose is to build up more of a Federal machine and to loot the Treasury under the guise of a worthy object.

The bill does nothing other than appropriate money. No restrictions are thrown around its expenditure and no scheme or skeleton of procedure devised for its operation. If the caption were left off, one would be at a loss to ascertain its purpose. Its entire plan is left to conjecture. In a law court it would be thrown out for indefiniteness and uncertainty.

But even otherwise, the Federal Government is going into too many projects, and I do not believe the American people will much longer stand its continual invasion of the home and of personal rights and privileges. In other words, they do not sanction the German system of paternalistic government.

A mere glance at this bill shows that "maternity and infancy" are mentioned only four times. In the first section "the public protection of maternity and infancy" and "the care of maternity and infancy." Sections 8 and 9, "hygiene of maternity and infancy."

One Senator characterized the bill which he voted for because the women wanted it, though he told them he disapproved it as "a very large harness on a very little horse"—in other words, "all appropriation and administration and negligible help."

When the 1920 campaign began to grow active a certain magazine published declarations from the chairman of the two great political parties each laying clearly before the newly enfranchised woman voter the claims of his party upon her as a loyal American citizen. I bought many copies of the magazine, placing them in the hands of women of both parties, believing them an authoritative and acceptable presentation for the new voter of both sides of the case. The magazine which thus received the sanction of both great parties has since for many months conducted a wholly biased system of propaganda. This has been the more insidious because of the illustrations of baby life in all its most attractive and fascinating phases, colored pictures which challenged by their compelling beauty the passerby to stop at the news stand in irresistible tribute to the sweetest thing God ever sent to gladden the earth—American beauty babies, and is not every American baby a beauty? After delighted appreciation of the wonderful baby pictures in an issue of this magazine I found the following editorial introduction to an article which I have not space to reproduce:

EDITOR'S NOTE: Have you a square deal conference in your city? If not, fall in line! Nineteen cities have already joined the intercity conference on illegitimacy. The country is waking up in response to the "Plea for the nameless child," published by Pictorial Review. Uniform laws are in prospect.

WHAT IS A CITY CONFERENCE ON ILLEGITIMACY?

It is an association of all those interested in the problem—doctors, judges, social workers, ministers, successful mothers of happy families, representatives from all the public and private agencies in the city—Jews and Catholics and Protestants.

WHY IS IT NEEDED?

To get a square deal for the fatherless child.

To lend a hand to the unmarried mother, and to help her solve her problem.

To look for the man in the case and make him shoulder his share of the responsibility.

HOW CAN IT BE DONE?

Through the uniform State laws proposed by the Children's Bureau providing for: Prenatal care for every expectant mother. Public control, through licensing, of private lying-in hospitals. Registration of the birth of every child. Adjudication of paternity and obliging the father to support his child. Individual, sympathetic care and advice for every unmarried mother. A home and mother for every baby. The infant asylum must go! Adoption only after investigation of the adoptive parents' standing. Support for every child until the age of at least 14, with protection and education to fit him for a useful place in society.

WHEN? NOW. WRITE TO-DAY.

If you request it, the Children's Bureau will send an expert investigator to help you make a survey of your town or county to see where you stand. The intercity conference on illegitimacy will help you with the accumulated experience of 19 cities as to the best ways of organizing public opinion and getting new laws. Pictorial Review will put you in touch with the right people and agencies to get you started in the best way.

I read it and reread it, one clause over and over, "The Children's Bureau will send an expert investigator to help you make a survey of your town or county to see where you stand." The bureau that in nine years, with such a corps of "expert investigators," has not been able to concentrate efforts toward bringing the entire country into the registration area where the birth and death records make possible a basis for helpful work for mothers and children without class distinction or meddlesome interference with individuals—this bureau is confidently announced to come in and immediately straighten out complications that have baffled men and women in adjusting a problem of all ages and all races.

In August, 1920, the following was printed:

A WOMAN'S PROPHECY.

The little girls inside the schoolhouse with their dolls have finally won the right to the playground. Here the boys give them balls and bats, and the play begins. But the girls are not satisfied; they do not know the game nor the rules, and they are not happy in the play. I predict that it is only a matter of time until the girls go and get their dolls and play as they please in the new freedom. I prophesy that when we find ourselves, as we surely will, instead of, or in addition to, party planks on such matters as tariffs, merchant marine, and Monroe doctrine there will be planks on birth control, on larger appropriations for the Children's Bureau, and for educational aid, with special regard for domestic science; planks on new divorce laws, more stringent drug regulation, child-labor legislation—new issues, human issues, which have never been of paramount concern to our Government before. This woman vote may mean concentration on human issues and neglect of business measures, some good social legislation, and much that may prove impractical—it will be hard for women to see the connection between a merchant marine and the price of baby's shoes. But when women leaders see the possibilities for betterment—national, community, individual betterment—the organized woman vote will carry them almost anywhere.

With such power almost within their grasp, can anyone imagine the average woman of this country balking at the little research and study necessary to fit them for handling that power?

Rather it is the sort of task in which average women will glory.

"Average" American women see the servant problem, individual or national, differently. They know that an efficient housewife commands the respect of her handmaiden, that the ignorant, inefficient mistress secures no results from help. That is why they are studying national, State, and community housekeeping through civics and politics. They purpose to demand experience, references, and efficiency from public servants.

And that is why civics and politics can be mastered by them, why the Woman's Home Companion course in citizenship as taught in Good Citizenship Made Easy will make Mrs. Average Woman a political power.

It will be seen that "birth control" was the first suggestion as to legislation by the organized woman vote. The attitude of America toward it caused a prudent suppression till power should come through a loosely drawn "S. 1039" to include its unspeakable danger in the "instruction" by "qualified lecturers."

New Zealand is so often mentioned as the country of the most satisfactory conditions of maternity and infant welfare, I give a mere outline of a few of the interesting things which have come to my attention in connection therewith.

In "Who's Who" we learn that Miss Jeanette Rankin was born on a ranch near Missoula, Mont.; that she received a degree of bachelor of science from Montana University; that she was a student at the New York School of Philanthropy; that from 1909 to 1914 she was engaged in social or suffrage work in Washington, California, and Montana. In 1915 she went to New Zealand, working there as a seamstress to get personal knowledge of social conditions.

In 1916 Miss Rankin was elected to Congress from Montana. In the printed report of the hearing held on December 22, 1920, by the House committee which had under consideration the Sheppard-Towner bill, we find that Miss Rankin stated that while she was in Congress, after discussion with Miss Lathrop, of the Children's Bureau, "This bill was drawn, not from any casual study, but from careful and painstaking research. There were conferences of women from all over the United States who were interested and informed on the problem of maternity and infancy. The bill was drawn with the hope of meeting the conditions as they existed and of using the facilities that we have."

The bill, by inference, is the work of Misses Rankin and Lathrop.

A few lines below she says:

One of the most needed things in these maternal cases is education. I have four sisters who have young children. They are all college graduates, and for all they knew about maternity when they came out of college the stork might still be bringing babies.

It would be interesting to know where a college of such early Victorian simplicity may be found.

I was a trained social worker and did not know how to handle our problem in Montana, and I do not think many States are equipped to handle it alone. It was only when the Children's Bureau had collected from all over the world information as to what might be done and the things that failed to be helpful that we were able to devise a plan for the work.

I may remark in parenthesis that this work as proposed by the bill is to be done principally by "trained social workers," "using the facilities that we have." Why were those sisters neglected?

A mere glance at New Zealand eliminates statistics furnished as only the white citizenry is included, making them incomplete. This at once removes New Zealand from comparison with America. We find that financially the annual per capita debt of New Zealand is $35.28 compared to $16 for Australia, $15.43 for Canada, and $8.05 for the United States.

In New Zealand "birth control" is openly taught and is sanctioned by law. Evidently relief from the care of "unwanted babies" has not brought the financial prosperity its American advocates claim for it. Recent public prints have stated that New Zealand is planning new methods of necessary revenue raising.

The "Voluntary Parenthood League" gives as its objects:

To render available for the people's need the best scientific knowledge as to how parenthood may be voluntary instead of accidental * * *
The education of parents so that the birth of children may occur with due regard to health, heredity, income, choice, environment, and the well-being of the community.

The name of "Hon. Jeannette Rankin" appears as a member of the National Council of the Voluntary Parenthood League. The same publications which have been openly urging the passage of the Sheppard-Towner bill have, so far as they could without violating the laws of the United States, been suggesting birth control. (See "Keeping the Stork in His Place," Pictorial Review, February, 1920.)

It is indignantly denied by proponents of the Sheppard-Towner bill that birth control is anywhere suggested. True, but nowhere in the bill is there any limitation to what may be orally taught by its social workers, and it is not impossible that publications of the Children's Bureau might be considered privileged and allowed to pass through the mails, not open now to desired "instruction" on birth control.

It is not necessarily unjust or harsh to judge bills, like people, by the company they keep, and the inference of unwholesome propaganda seems to me undeniable.

Let us see what the beneficent results have been in Montana:

[From the Woman Patriot, August 1, 1921.]

As the Baltimore Sun observes, the advocates of the Sheppard-Towner bill have insisted so vigorously that that measure would "save the lives of mothers and babies" that the opponents have been placed in the difficult position of infanticides. Let us see.

The Children's Bureau, with this bill, is going to "save lives," say the proponents. But where have the operations of the Children's Bureau in the past done so?

Montana is the birthplace of agitation for the Sheppard-Towner bill, which was first introduced by Miss Jeannette Rankin, of Montana, who says:

"When I came down here (1915) I met Miss Lathrop and discussed this matter. That summer Miss Lathrop made a study of Montana and found these conditions were actually as bad as I had feared," etc. (House Maternity Hearing, Dec. 20, 1920, p. 87.)

The Children's Bureau sent one of its physicians and five "field workers" to Montana. "Children's health conferences were held at several convenient centers." A 100-page illustrated book, "Maternity Care and the Welfare of Young Children—Montana," was issued. The governor, the legislature, and the other Montana authorities cooperated, always "boosting" the work, especially in telegrams and memorials to Washington urging passage of the Sheppard-Towner bill.

Now for the results!

In 1915, when Miss Rankin came to Congress, the maternal mortality rate in Montana was 19.4 per 100,000 population. In 1916, when the agitation over the subject in Montana increased, the maternal mortality also increased to 22.2. In 1917, when the Children's Bureau sent in its "field workers" to hold conferences and make "surveys," the rate jumped to 28.4—9 points above the 1915 rate. In 1918, which was "influenza year," and should be counted out for that reason, the rate was 35.9. In 1919, although partly also a "flu year," the Children's Bureau "field workers" not having funds to continue their field work in Montana, the maternal mortality rate went down to 26.2, but was still 6 points higher than when Miss Jeannette Rankin and Miss Julia Lathrop first started in "saving lives" in Montana.

The infant-mortality rate for Montana is not available, as Montana is not in the "birth-registration area." Of course, the "frightfulness" campaign waged by the Children's Bureau on this subject would reveal itself, in any case, more particularly among mothers. The maternal mortality rates are taken from page 95 of "Mortality Statistics for 1919," issued by the United States Census Bureau, and include all puerperal deaths. For puerperal septicemia, the particular affliction most influenced by "frightfulness" propaganda among expectant mothers, the Montana rate rose from 7.9 in 1915 to 10.4 in 1919, the highest rate being in 1917 (14.1), while the Children's Bureau "field workers" were on the job!

"Agents of the Children's Bureau interviewed every mother in the area who had a baby during the five years preceding the study. * * * A few were not at home at the time the mothers were so visited. * * * It is estimated that possibly 10 or 12 mothers were thus missed," says the Children's Bureau report.

It would appear that the best and quickest way on earth to increase maternal mortality is to turn loose a lot of spinster "field workers" to investigate, "advise," and frighten expectant mothers with political propaganda designed to increase the number and authority of such Federal agents.

It is represented that this bill has the indorsement of all the great women's organizations, representing a membership of 10,000,000. I happen to hold membership in four of these organizations as named to the committees of Congress. In my judgment the membership of these clubs is twice counted, at least 50 per cent. Out of many letters telling me how indorsements of clubs was secured without any real understanding of the legislation involved, I select one at random:

Hon. ——— ———, member of the legislature, received an urgent telegram to work for this bill from the ——— Woman's Club, 1,400 strong, emphatically for it. Accordingly he "got busy" with wire and mail to Washington. When he returned to ——— he called together the local ladies and asked for pointers. He was astounded to find that they knew nothing about the bill. "Then why did you send me such a telegram?" "Because Mrs. ——— ——— asked us to do so." A very wealthy lady's name was mentioned. As she was known to the local ladies as a good woman they assumed that everything was all right and did as they were bid.

The club women of America after all represent but a small percentage of its 51,000,000 women. All the arguments given by the proponents of this bill are based on estimates, there being no actual dependable figures in the absence of universal registration. But if they were reliable and the need so great there is danger that the passage of the bill would be obnoxious beyond endurance as handled by professional reformers of family life. The mortality among mothers and babies of the so-called "idle rich" is greater than among the poverty-stricken toilers. The welfare worker of the Children's Bureau is in duty bound to carry her inquisition alike to palace or hovel. She is more likely to be admitted to the hovel because of the greater simplicity of receiving guests. The bill does not allow her to demand entrance.

The worst possible lie is of the sort that Ananias and Sapphira told—truth, but not the whole truth. Statistics presented by the proponents of the maternity bill might find difficulty in passing the Ananias test. Without complete statistics, which are not to be had, the "sob-stuff" claim that 680 babies die every day from the failure in enacting this bill—statement of Mrs. Florence Kelley, page 27, Public Protection of Maternity and Infancy, Government Printing Office, 1921—is absurd on the face of it and quite in keeping with her comparison of Congressmen to Herod. A bill that does not provide medical or nursing attendance, or milk or baby clothes, or anything that would give immediate aid is not tangible help of the kind that the general public infer would be given, but the establishment of an autocratic, undefined, practically uncontrolled yet Federally authorized center of propaganda.

Senator SHEPPARD, who carried this bill to an almost unanimous vote in the Senate, has for 19 years represented the great Commonwealth of Texas at the National Capital, first in the House and then in the Senate. It is, perhaps, not an unfair inference that a like persistent and insistent interest and zeal in behalf of the mothers and babies of Texas on his part would have secured for them the right of registration.

Texas stands rated in the United States census with a farm-property valuation of $4,461,579,497—third highest in the whole sisterhood of States. With a population of 4,663,228, she has 155,220 more men than women. Raising chickens is usually a side line with the farm woman who is vocationally cook, laundress, gardener, seamstress, dairymaid, and incidentally wife and mother. The census says that Texas raised 26,552,113 chickens and produced 77,845,047 dozen eggs. We can not find out how many babies were produced, because Texas does not record them, nor can we, for the same reason, do more than surmise the mortality of mothers and babies in Texas. We do know that in States that recognize the rights of the new born and keep a record of them the mortality among Negro mothers and babies is appalling, and that the highest death rate for white mothers is that of native-born Americans. Without exact percentage worked out, it is probable that 20 per cent of the population of Texas is Negro and that about 75 per cent of its white population is native born. I believe that Texas only needs to know about this to act, quickly and decisively, to protect its helpless new born, for whether happily or unhappily born they have rights. There are questions of registration peculiar to certain States, of which Texas is one, to which I do no more than hint. This one query I make: "Chickens or babies—which, Mr. Senator?"

The chairman, Mr. KENYON, of the Senate Committee, which favorably reported S. 1039, like Mr. TOWNER, leader of its proponents in the House, is from Iowa, the State that leads all America with farm property valuation of $8,525,270,956, and in Iowa, also, the United States census furnishes us the chicken and egg figures—31,076,091 chickens and 120,697,319 dozen eggs. From the census figures we learn that Iowa has 54,673 more men than women; that the Negro population is practically negligible; and that the native-born white population is about 85 per cent of the whole. We can only conjecture that the mortality of mothers and infants in this nonregistration State is probably much greater than is dreamed by its splendid citizenry and it might not be presumptious to suggest that the women of Iowa, led and enthused by corresponding efforts of Messrs. KENYON and TOWNER, would demand and secure, through State action, this right of the newborn.

Chickens or babies? Which? Mr. KENYON and Mr. TOWNER!

In the meantime, throughout the land, wherever at the supreme hour there is need, the good Samaritan neighbor woman is ready to help as best she may, though her willingness may be unskilled. In due time, the Children's Bureau, purveyor of "instruction," will possibly arrive and give "instruction" to the effect that medical attention should be secured and proper food, bedding, baby clothes, and a trained nurse be provided for none of which appropriations are authorized by the maternity bill. But what more could be asked than the "instruction" of the Children's Bureau?

There was once a very sick man, who, desiring the consolation of religion, called on a sympathetic visitor to read the Bible to him. Opening the unfamiliar book at random, he stumbled on through the first chapter of First Chronicles:

Adam, Sheth, Enosh, Kenan, Mahalaleel, Jered, Henoch, Methuselah, Lamech, Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. The sons of Japheth: Gomer and Magog and Madai and Javan and Tubal and Meshech and Tiras.

Page after page there was of it, undoubtedly Bible and historically valuable but not the consolation to the sick man he would have found in the twenty-third Psalm or the fourteenth chapter of John's Gospel. It was Bible "instruction," though.

I wrote of myself as "one of those millions of conservative, home-loving women who never asked to vote, who dreaded new and heavy responsibilities, but God, in infinite wisdom, placed upon us the burden of suffrage." One of the ardent proponents of the maternity bill, in the columns of a Virginia daily paper, exclaims:

Can this be possible? That after centuries of treatment as a chattel or a slave any woman should now discuss her enfranchisement as "a burden of suffrage."

"Chattel"! "Slave"! The words bring thoughts of the aftermath of another war, when, in the late sixties, an unready people, suddenly enfranchised, looked with pathetic expectance for marvelous things which the Freedman's Bureau was to do for them, one of which was to be "40 acres and a mule" to each Negro household. The rosy light the Negro hailed as the coming of the sunrise through the Freedman's Bureau proved an aurora borealis. The "40 acres and a mule," of course, never materialized, though I have always understood there was plenty of "instruction" from the Freedman's Bureau and from other sources. It is tritely remarked that "history repeats itself."

Were the pitiless light of real publicity turned upon the methods which have brought the "maternity bill" thus far toward enactment, its most ardent proponents, in my belief, would in all fairness be compelled to allow time for the as yet unheard majority of women, who know nothing of its proposed legislation, to learn the facts and to speak for themselves.

From Ida Clyde Clarke, in an article recently published entitled "For the woman voter—A test of intelligent citizenship," I quote:

When women refuse to work under a demoralized and a demoralizing system the world will know it. Publicity works miracles.

She also says:

Men have been unable to bring about reform because one man, or a small group of men, is powerless against the system. Daring to oppose it, they are ridiculed, persecuted, and usually eliminated.

I refuse to work under the demoralizing compulsion that has been used in this instance. I accordingly face being "ridiculed, persecuted, and eliminated," but I face it fearlessly.

It is my duty.

Former Gov. James E. Ferguson, of Texas, says in his Forum, published at Temple, Tex.:

Let us analyze Mr. Harding's action in opposing the soldier bonus. He could not have been moved by any thought of personal popularity. On the other hand, he took the chance of being misunderstood by 4,000,000 soldiers.

He is bound to have known that this one act might cost him the honor of reelection and the defeat of his party.

Mr. Harding could have avoided responsibility by letting Congress pass the four and a half billion appropriation and could have shirked further blame by letting the law become effective without his signature.

There were many devious ways that a political President could have side-stepped the whole affair.

But to a patriotic, to a courageous President, to an able President there was no escape.

When he saw Congress was wavering, when he saw that no one would have the courage to speak, when he saw that a burden was about to be placed upon the American people which they could not bear, this courageous patriot threw himself in the breach. Independent of a seeming irresistible tide of popular demand, in the face of the cry of the politicians, Warren G. Harding marched down the halls of the American Congress and boldly proclaimed the right of the American people as God had given him power and wisdom to see it, and for which he will in time receive the thanks of the American soldier as well as the thanks of the Nation.

Our President may make mistakes, but from this time on no one will ever doubt his ability, his courage, or his sincerity of purpose.

I close with words from the President's address at Plymouth:

We stand to-day before the unknown, but we look to the future with confidence unshaken. There is no retracing; we must forever go on. We welcome the theories wrought out in new hope, but we cling to the assurance founded on experiences. All that is is not bad; all that is to be will not be ideal. We can not lift the veil to the future, but we can analyze and understand what has gone before. It is good to keep our feet firmly on the earth though we gaze in high hope for human brotherhood and high attainments.

Just as the Pilgrims had a practical mind for material things amid effective pursuit of their higher ideals, so must we with our inheritance. God never intended an achievement without great effort; there is no reward without great labor; freedom is the field of endeavor, not the fancied abode of idleness.

Just as these fathers drew together toward ample community authority to make the Nation and still preserve the freedom of those who compose it, so must we guard against the supreme centralization of power at home, and the superstate for the world. More, we must combat the menace in the growing assumption that the State must support the people, for just government is merely the guaranty to the people of the right and opportunity of that people to support themselves. The one outstanding danger of to-day is the tendency to turn to Washington for the things which are the tasks or the duties of the 48 Commonwealths which constitute the Nation. Having wrought the Nation as the central power of preservation and defense, let us preserve it so.

The Revenue Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. WILLIAM B. BOWLING,

OF ALABAMA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 18, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 8245) to reduce and equalize taxation, to amend and simplify the revenue act of 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. BOWLING. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, the matter of levying taxes upon the people should not be made a partisan question. Taking money from a citizen is too serious an act to be made the football of party politics. Upon the very inception of this bill, misnamed a bill to equalize taxation, partisan politics arose. The Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee, equally charged with the Republicans by their duty as Members of Congress and members of the committee to assist in the framing of a bill, were shut out of the committee and refused participation in the deliberations.

In effect they were told by the Republican majority that their advice and assistance were unwelcome. This action of the majority was in marked contrast to the treatment accorded the Republican Members when the Democratic majority of the Sixty-fifth Congress framed the present law. At that time party lines were not drawn, and the Republicans participated in all the work of drawing the bill. The result was that it received the unanimous support of the committee and the House. And although it laid a heavy burden of taxation, it was evenly distributed. Three years have elapsed since the enactment of the existing law. The Great War is more than two years behind us. The time has come to lift the load of taxation from the backs of the people, and the present bill sponsored by the Republican majority is the answer to the insistent demand for lower taxes.

Another feature of the consideration of this bill is the gag rule under which we are now operating.

It would seem that the majority is in fear of a fair and free consideration of the bill. If not, why the brutality of a special rule, blindly voted by the two-thirds majority at the behest of the party lash, which absolutely prevents the offering of amendments? For be it known that under this special rule no Member of the House is permitted to offer an amendment, however wise and meritorious.

One would think that the Republicans are so sure of themselves that they think they have a perfect bill and any change would be a mutilation. Yet so patent are its defects that we may reasonably expect an avalanche of amendments to be offered by the majority of the committee.

It seems to be the almost universal opinion of the House that after all this bill, like the late little lamented tariff bill, will be little more than an enacting clause after the Senate considers it. So it is really hardly necessary to get greatly heated over the debate on this bill, bad as it is. Its authors will never recognize it when it gets back to us.

The bill starts out with a fraudulent declaration, for in the title it is called "A bill to reduce and equalize taxation." The debate on the bill has proceeded far enough to develop one fact clearly—it will not raise the revenue necessary to support the Government. Hence its boasted reduction is a sham.

There would be one certain result if this bill were to become law—the Government would be run on credit. The people would pay not only taxes, but interest on taxes.

When the Secretary of the Treasury came before the Ways and Means Committee he stated that it would be necessary to raise $4,625,000,000 from internal taxes. The proponents of the bill declare that it is designed to raise three and a half billions. If the estimate of the head of the Treasury is correct, this bill will create a deficiency of more than half a billion dollars. This money will be needed, must be borrowed, and the people will pay the interest charge.

The Republican Party calls this reducing taxation. The thoughtful man will call it running head and ears in debt, avoiding so long as possible settling day.

The simple truth is this bill is the attempt of the Republican Party to redeem its promise in the last campaign to lower taxes. One year ago the whole United States was ringing with denunciations of President Wilson, Democratic extravagance, and Democratic taxation. The presidential election was won and the House and Senate were won on a platform promise to give everybody everything.

The people heard the promise and by an unprecedented majority intrusted the Republican Party with the conduct of government. This tax bill is a species of camouflage to cause the people to believe that the promise of last year is being kept. To reduce taxation—how can taxes be reduced without appropriations being reduced? Already more money has been appropriated by the Sixty-sixth and Sixty-seventh Congresses than this bill could possibly produce.

Yet we even to-day hear a subsidized press and the voice of party leadership declaring that taxes have been reduced.

The plain, bald truth has already been stated by a prominent Republican, Senator SMOOT. Recently he stated that taxes will not be reduced—they will be increased.

Another incorrect statement in the title of this bill is that it equalizes taxation.

Never in the history of legislation was there a balder, bolder statement than that. Equalizing taxation, indeed! Let us see. The Democratic doctrine is to levy tax in proportion to ability to pay. Let the strong, the rich, bear the heavier end of the burden. Lighten the load on the weak and the poor. Does this bill do that? It does not. On the other hand, it lightens the load on the very rich incomes, for it contains a provision for the repeal of the present excess-profits tax on corporations and an increase in the normal tax from 10 to 12½ per cent. The effect of this proposed law on those corporations whose invested capital is from $5,000 to $10,000,000, and who are earning from 5 to 50 per cent thereon, is shown in the following table. Those corporations whose capital and income are shown between the heavy black lines will pay more under the proposed law, while those to the right and below the second black line will pay less tax.

The accuracy of these figures is beyond question. There is not an expert in the Treasury Department who will dispute them, and they show beyond doubt that the repeal of the excess-profits tax as now proposed will shift the burden of taxation from the big corporations to the people at large. It violates the principle that taxes should be levied on those best able to pay.

Two arguments are advanced for the repeal of the excess-profits tax: First, that it retards business; second, that it is added and passed on to the consumer, thereby contributing to the high cost of living. These arguments are inconsistent. If these taxes are passed on to the consumer they could not possibly retard business, and if they are not passed on to the consumer they do not contribute to the high cost of living.

My opinion is that the widespread propaganda organized and paid for by those who pay the excess-profits tax has its origin in the fact that it is a tax that can not be passed on to the consumer. For if the consumer finally paid it, the corporation would not care how high it is. The plain truth is that it can not be passed on, and hence the cry for its repeal.

An analysis of the report as to income and excess-profits taxes during the years 1917 and 1918 reveals some interesting facts. This report shows that 180 corporations, making annual profits from $5,000,000 up to $300,000,000 and over, had a net income of $2,554,000,000, and while these 180 corporations paid $203,000,000 income tax, they paid $848,000,000 excess-profits tax. Three hundred thousand corporations, making up to $100,000 net income, paid only $285,000,000 excess-profits taxes. One thousand and twenty-six big corporations, with a net income of more than four and one-fourth billion dollars, paid more than one-half, or nearly two-thirds, of the excess-profits tax—more than was paid by the remaining 316,000 corporations.

It will now be clearly seen that the proposed legislation will relieve a few hundred of the largest corporations, shifting the burden to the small corporations and the people generally.

The effect on the Government will be to deprive it of hundreds of millions of dollars of revenue—in fact, more than $600,000,000 annually—while the small corporations will derive little or no benefit from the repeal of the excess-profits tax.

From January 1, 1916, corporations made net profits of $47,000,000,000. If we deduct all war taxes, including income and excess-profits taxes paid by them since January 1, 1916, they have a clear profit of $38,000,000,000, more than four-fifths of which was made by 10,000 corporations, and more than one-half of which was made by 1,026 big profiteering corporations, including the Steel Trust, Standard Oil, the Du Pont companies, the Woolen Trust, the meat packers, and others.

And let us not forget that these same corporations were piling up their billions in safety while our boys were spilling their blood in France for the protection and defense of their country.

This bill is a vicious, monstrous program which no Democrat can indorse. Our Government should be one which protects all, the humble as well as the strong; which should grant special favors to none, but which should dispense its favors and blessings on all alike.

I have discussed but one feature of the bill. Other provisions are equally open to attack, but desiring to fix attention upon what I consider the chief vice of the bill, I do not discuss them now.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. MARTIN C. ANSORGE,

OF NEW YORK,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921.

Mr. ANSORGE. Mr. Speaker, under the leave granted me to extend my remarks, I desire to insert in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a stenographic report of the ceremonies attending the filming and the signing by President Harding of the Edge-Ansorge port of New York resolution at the White House yesterday afternoon.

The following report was filed and ordered to be printed:

SIGNING OF PORT OF NEW YORK RESOLUTION, WHITE HOUSE, AUGUST 23, 1921.

Present: Senators CALDER, WADSWORTH, and FRELINGHUYSEN; Representatives ANSORGE, MOTT, DEMPSEY, and APPLEBY; William R. Willcox, Eugenius H. Outerbridge, De Witt Van Buskirk, J. Spencer Smith, Lewis H. Pounds, Julius Henry Cohen, William Leary, B. F. Cresson, jr., Assistant Secretary of War Wainwright, and others.

Mr. ANSORGE. President Harding, I do not intend to delay this historic event by any extended remarks. On behalf of those present I wish to say that the signing of this joint resolution by your excellency, giving Federal authority to the development of New York Harbor as outlined in the resolution, marks the culmination of the most forward step ever taken for the intelligent and comprehensive development of the greatest natural port in the world.

President HARDING. I am indeed happy to place my signature upon this joint resolution which has passed both Houses of Congress, and which looks to the improvement and development of the port of New York. I congratulate the two States upon the spirit of cooperation for the future development of the port under unified joint control. It is always a pleasure to add my name to constructive legislation of this kind. I hope that under the authority granted by this resolution the port of New York will become an ever-increasing asset of the Nation.

President Harding then signed the joint resolution, using three pens, and presented one to William R. Willcox, chairman of the New York-New Jersey Port and Harbor Development Commission, one to Senator EDGE, of New Jersey (by proxy), and the third to Representative ANSORGE, of New York.

[Applause.]

Comparison of Rates of Taxation Between the Existing Revenue Law and the Pending Tax Bill.

OF

HON. GEORGE M. YOUNG,

OF NORTH DAKOTA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, we have just completed the consideration in the House of H. R. 8245, to amend the revenue act of 1918. Believing that there will be many throughout the country who will be anxious to know just what changes have been made to the existing law, I have prepared a comparative statement showing the old rates and the proposed new rates. To those who do not have these, and therefore can not make the comparison, or having them are too busy to do so, I hope the following table will be found useful. It includes all amendments made during the consideration of the revenue bill in the House.

The statement is as follows:

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. ROYAL C. JOHNSON,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, September 5, 1921.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with permission granted by unanimous consent of the House to extend my remarks in the RECORD and print the so-called "slacker lists," I desire to call attention to a letter of The Adjutant General, P C. Harris, dated August 29, 1921.

It is my intention to insert these lists on the 5th day of each month until all of the names are printed. No good soldier will be injured by the publication of his name in these lists, but, on the contrary, if his military record is one to be proud of, the publication will only serve to call attention to that record. If by mistake the names of good soldiers have not been eliminated from the record it will be my pleasure and duty to insert in the RECORD the facts in each individual case and to see that the facts are brought to the attention of the Secretary of War, who is as anxious as any soldier of the late war with Germany to have the records correct. Mistakes ought to be corrected while the men are living and while there is evidence to substantiate any valid claim as to service.

The letter is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, August 29, 1921.

Hon. ROYAL C. JOHNSON,
House of Representatives.

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of August 30, lists of alleged draft deserters, which lists were released by the War Department for publication between July 5 and August 4, 1921, both dates inclusive. A copy of the statement to be printed at the head of the lists is also herewith.

There is also transmitted herewith for insertion in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a list of the names of registrants which have been removed from the lists of alleged draft deserters heretofore published in the RECORD, the reasons for such removals being set forth in the second paragraph of the statement which is to precede the lists in the RECORD.

Very respectfully,

P. C. HARRIS,
The Adjutant General.

The men whose names appear below, and who were under the jurisdiction of the local boards named, were, according to the public draft records, classified and reported by the draft authorities as deserters from the military service of the United States. The lists in which these names were originally included have been given at least one month's publicity.

The name of any man who, since the publication of the lists, has been found to have actually rendered service in either our own forces or in those of the Allies during the period between May 18, 1917, and November 11, 1918, is not included; nor is that of any man who, though he rendered no service during the period mentioned, has, since the publication of his name, been found to have been erroneously inducted or to have been erroneously certified as a deserter, nor that of any man who is known to be no longer living.

Every reasonable effort has been made by the War Department to eliminate from these lists names which, for any of the aforementioned reasons, should not appear thereon. Should it develop, however, that certain of the names listed below should, for any of these reasons, likewise be removed, notice to that effect will be published in each such case in a later issue of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. ANDREW J. VOLSTEAD,

OF MINNESOTA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, August 16, 1921.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, we have had under consideration this afternoon a bill to add some provisions to the national prohibition act, and though we have had four hours of discussion, very little has been said in regard to that bill. An entirely different subject has engaged the attention of the House, that of prohibition and its enforcement. During the pendency of this legislation those who oppose prohibition have in the press and otherwise indulged in their favorite sport of denouncing their opponents as narrow-minded, hypocritical, fanatical, and the like; while at the same time they have praised themselves as eminently sane and liberal. Arguments of that kind do not interest me. I have not even had the curiosity to read the newspaper attacks made upon me to which friends have called my attention.

There is only one way in which the sale of intoxicating beverages can be legally restored, and that is by repealing the prohibition amendment to the Constitution, and still there are various organizations actively engaged in demanding of Congress that it authorize the sale of wine and beer. That demand is made, though they know that to comply with it would be a plain violation of the Constitution, which each Member of Congress must swear to support before he can take his seat as a Member. Such a demand is an insult. Clearly, the reason why they have the effrontery to make such a demand is that they realize that they are hopelessly in the minority and can not expect to get what they want except by violating the Constitution.

A few words in answer to the excuses offered for this attitude may not be out of place. They are excuses, however, that do not excuse.

It is claimed that the majority of the people did not favor this law and that it was surreptitiously put through Congress while some 2,000,000 American soldiers were in France. Those who make that claim show their utter ignorance of the facts. The fight for prohibition gained slowly but steadily for more than half a century. Gradually State after State banished the saloon, so that before we entered the World War, and before there was an American soldier in France, 25 States had statewide prohibition and 60 per cent of the people of the country were living in dry territory, while other sections would have voted dry had they had the chance to do so. The legislatures of 45 out of the 48 States ratified the prohibition amendment, and in Congress more than two-thirds of the Members of both Houses voted for the present law. If there was any class of people who when the amendment was ratified knew the sentiment of the country on this subject, and who was sincerely and selfishly interested in deciding that question correctly, it was the members of the various legislatures and of Congress, for if they guessed wrong they would be likely to fail of reelection.

That this law takes away some personal liberty may be granted. Laws usually take away liberty of some kind. The law against larceny takes away the liberty to steal; that against murder, the liberty to kill. We intended to take away the kind of liberty that this law takes away. We are in favor of abolishing a business that is a curse. Since the passage of the national prohibition act not one has defended the saloon in this House, and I do not believe that there is one who has the courage to do so now. The absence of a plea for the restoration of the saloon is a confession that it can not be defended, even in the wettest districts in this country. A person is almost a curiosity at this time who is willing to defend whisky and the saloon.

The men who favor prohibition are charged with being fanatics. Those who make that charge do not realize that in every State where prohibition has had a fair trial it has steadily grown in popular favor, and that the hard-headed business men, from the corner grocer to the managers of the railways, the mills, the mines, and the factories are almost solidly behind it. They do not realize that the policy is one of slow evolution, not revolution; that it has come despite the reluctance of our people to give up an ancient and cherished means of diversion, and only after the most careful study and repeated trials. They do not realize that millions of those who voted dry in the prohibition States did not claim that they were total abstainers. They did not consider it wrong to drink in moderation, but were glad to get rid of the saloon not only on their own account but on account of those near and dear to them, and because of social and economic advantages.

The contention that men can not be reformed by passing a statute needs no comment. The excessive use of liquor becomes a habit. If a person can be prevented from getting liquor, the habit will be cured, and it is immaterial whether you call that reform or not. "A rose by any other name will smell as sweet."

Every effort is being made to break down the enforcement of prohibition. The cry in the wet localities is that the law can not be enforced, and those opposed to prohibition are giving every possible encouragement to the lawbreaker. This is an old trick. Do not be deceived. It can be enforced. Prohibition not only can be enforced but is being enforced. Of course, the law is being violated; so is every law upon the statute books, from that regulating the automobile traffic to that against murder. Here are a few official figures that are more eloquent than any rhetoric. In 1917, the last year before war prohibition, our people consumed almost 168,000,000 gallons of spirituous liquor, and there were more than 600 distilleries running. Last year, the first year under constitutional prohibition, we consumed 28,000,000 gallons, and there were only three small distilleries running. Of the 28,000,000 gallons of spirituous liquor consumed last year, at least half of it was used for nonbeverage purposes. We consumed annually more than 10,000,000 gallons for nonbeverage use before we had prohibition. In 1917 we consumed more than 1,885,000,000 gallons of beer, which was supplied by more than 1,300 breweries. Last year alcoholic beer almost disappeared, and nearly all of the breweries ceased to operate, except those making near beer.

This makes a very good showing for the first year under the present prohibition law. Yes; but some one will say there has been a great deal of " moonshine." It is true that considerable of that has been made, but it is so poor in quality and so dangerous that few outside of the chronic toper care for it or dare to drink it. The bootlegger is always in evidence for some time after any prohibition law has been passed; his presence is only the usual phenomena, but he quietly folds his tent and steals away with the growth of prohibition sentiment. The average man on the street respects the law and is glad the saloon is gone, and the saloon is practically a thing of the past, except in a few places, and those will disappear if we can have honest enforcement officers. I do not claim that a time will ever come when the law will not be violated. It took several years to secure effective enforcement in the prohibition States, and it will take time to secure like results in the sections that had saloons when the prohibition law was enacted.

I am not going to eulogize prohibition. The saloon man never cares to contrast the advantage of being wet with that of being dry. He never claims that the man who frequents his place gets "healthy, wealthy, or wise" from anything he sells him. He knows that the saloon has so thoroughly discredited and disgraced itself that he does not dare, even in the wettest spots, openly to ask for its return. Still he has not given up hope.

The Supreme Court spoiled his claim that Congress could shift its responsibility for enforcement to the States under the clause of the Constitution giving Congress and the States concurrent power to enforce. He knows that he can not repeal the amendment, so he is trying to find some excuse for violating it, and in the meantime he is posing as virtuously indignant against whisky and the saloon. Not at a loss for a shift, he has already invented an excuse for restoring the traffic in beer. Here it is: He has made the astounding discovery that beer was not intoxicating. That discovery is more marvelous than Einstein's theory of relativity.

Courts and legislators have uniformly treated and considered beer as intoxicating, and it has been known to be such for ages. Until prohibition came no one ever suspected that beer was a temperance drink, and I do not believe that anyone can repeat that absurdity long enough and often enough to make himself believe it. The saloons were often called beer saloons. And they were properly so called, because the sale of whisky was only an incidental part of the business. The brewers owned the saloons; they furnished the license money and did the real business. Beer was the principal drink sold in every saloon. It gave character to the institution and was the chief thing upon which it lived and throve. Beer has killed more men than whisky and has the curse of Cain upon it. Bring it back and you will have the saloon back, and the one who sells the beer will see to it that when his customers have drank beer until its alcoholic strength is not sufficient to satisfy the craving created by it for stronger drink, stronger drink will be furnished. That has always been the experience where it has been tried, and always will be.

Yes, the wet is a good citizen now. He does not want whisky or the saloon. But he does want his wine and beer. He does not say much about wine, perhaps because he has not been able to invent an excuse for demanding wine, but his beer he must have. He does not explain how he can have either beer or wine without having the saloon, too. He can have near beer—beer that is so near to what he calls beer that if you can persuade him that it has a kick in it, as he terms it, he will continue to drink glass after glass until he finds that he is full without being glorious. Then he knows that he has been cheated; what it lacks is the drunk and the headache.

A shrewd brewer up in my country worked this trick in a rather neat fashion. He printed on the labels of his near beer the statement that it contained 0.275 per cent alcohol, but he put a somewhat indistinct period before the numeral 2, so what the label actually stated was that it contained about one-fourth of 1 per cent instead of 2¾ per cent, as his customers were led to believe. This brewer did a thriving business until some Federal pure-food inspector threatened to prosecute him for misrepresenting his wares. I saw several people who bought that beer who were sure it was the real stuff.

The refusal to obey the prohibition law naturally tends to discredit all law. That is one of the sinister and unfortunate phases of law enforcement. I have no patience with any person who claims the protection of his Government and at the same time insists upon the right to refuse obedience to any law that he does not like. Whoever encourages disregard of or resistance to law legally enacted attacks the very foundation upon which our liberties rest.

No law can be passed under our form of government unless a majority of the people have in some form given their assent to it, either by a direct vote or through their representatives. If there ever was a law that had the deliberate sanction of a large majority of our people, it is the prohibition amendment to the Constitution. The will of a majority is the rule that must govern every free country, and whoever refuses to abide by that rule is not a good citizen or a good sport.

The people of this country have had the good sense to know that only by obeying law could they hope to secure the protection of law and the liberty and security that the law is designed to protect. They have been willing to submit to the will of the majority and to work out their salvation under that rule. Mexico and some of the South American Republics have seen the effect of a failure to abide by majority rule. Nearly every election held there has been followed by a revolution, and those countries have been constantly oscillating between tyranny and treason. They have not been willing to play the game in a fair way, and they have had to suffer the consequences. The liquor interests never obeyed the law, they never played the game fairly, and they should be made to take the consequences like good sports. The time has come for those who believe in law and order to stand by their convictions.

Theodore Roosevelt once said that aggressive fighting for the right is the greatest sport the world knows. I do not believe that he ever enjoyed with half as much zest his famous hunting trips as he did his fights against what he considered unjust and unfair to society. He loved such a contest, and plunged with his whole soul into it. He has gone, but the spirit that animated him still lives, and the land he loved will not allow lawlessness and greed to defeat the Nation's will.

Great Britain spent last year $2,000,000,000 for intoxicating liquor. If we did not have prohibition, national and local, we should spend for liquor at least $5,000,000,000 annually. That is money that ought to go to the home, to the wife and children for the necessaries, comforts, and conveniences of life. Numerous letters have come to me written in agony and fear lest the prohibition policy might be abandoned, pleading for its retention and invoking the blessings of Heaven on all those who have striven to sustain it. I am proud that America is leading in this great movement. The eyes of the world are upon us, and from innumerable homes, here and beyond the seas, prayers go up for the success of the cause. The men and women who wrote the prohibition amendment into the National Constitution will, I am sure, sustain it. A nation that was brave enough and generous enough to give millions of its men and billions of its money in the World War will turn aside with contempt from the sneers and taunts of those who selfishly and petulantly insist that their right to indulge in intoxicating drinks is superior to all law and more important than the public good.

I can not believe that those who argue that Congress has no power to limit or control the use of alcoholic liquors for medicinal or industrial purposes have given any serious consideration to the subject. So far as I am aware no attorney attacking the national prohibition act has so far had the temerity to argue to any court a doctrine quite so untenable. Not only has the Supreme Court, but every other court that has dealt with the subject, held the contrary. If you allow the doctor or the person who uses liquor for any other nonbeverage purpose to determine for himself how much he may obtain, you might as well quit trying to enforce prohibition. Somebody must have the power to see that he only gets a sufficient quantity for nonbeverage use.

No valid reason supports the contention that the doctor has the absolute right to determine the kind and quantity of liquor that he needs in his business. Thirty-eight States have found and determined that beer is not necessary as a medicinal agent or suitable for such use. Many States have found and determined that no alcoholic liquor is necessary or suitable for use as a medicine. There is nothing in the Constitution that delegates to the doctor any special right to determine that fact. Congress has as much right to pass on that question as have the doctors, and if Congress finds that beer has no proper place as a medical agent it may say so and prohibit beer from being prescribed. The great majority of the medical profession has long since abandoned its use as a medicinal remedy.

Congress may likewise determine that other intoxicating liquors have but slight value, if any, and that the evil from their use is much greater than any advantage gained by such use. If Congress so determines, and such determination would be abundantly supported by medical authority of the highest order, it may not only limit but it may absolutely prohibit the use of any intoxicating liquor for medicinal purposes if it deems necessary to do so for the purpose of enforcing the eighteenth amendment. Only 22 per cent of the physicians hold permits to prescribe liquor, though such permits can be had for the asking.

That it is necessary to place limitations upon the use of intoxicants by the medical profession no one that has had any experience in the enforcement of prohibitory law doubts for a moment. Testimony before the Judiciary Committee of Prohibition Commissioner Kramer is emphatic on that point. The tendency of medical opinion is toward the entire elimination of alcohol as a remedy, as will appear from the following citations:

MEDICAL OPINION ON THE USE OF ALCOHOL IN MEDICINE.

Some 50 years ago arising from the teaching of Liebig that alcohol was a food, it was not uncommon to give from 30 to 45 ounces of brandy a day to fever and pneumonia patients. This practice is happily gone forever. Sir William Tennant Gairdner, of Glasgow, was the first to raise his voice against such overdosing with alcohol. In his book, "The physician as naturalist," he dealt a crushing blow to such men as Todd and his school. In 1862 W. T. Gairdner began to discontinue the use of stimulants in fever cases. During that year he treated 189 fever patients under 16 with only one death, that of a girl who was moribund when brought to the hospital. The excessive alcohol treatment under Todd, of Kings Hospital, gave a death rate thirty times as high. * * *

If alcohol could be of any use at all as a cardiac stimulant one would expect good results from its administration in the late stage of fever with dicrotic pulse and low blood pressure. But clinical experience shows that it fails to raise the blood pressure in such cases. This is true equally whether given by the mouth or by the hypodermic method. Large quantities of alcohol produce this very condition of the pulse met with in the last stage of severe fever. We may take it that alcohol can not raise the blood pressure, whether it be normal or subnormal to begin with. * * *

Mr. Pearce Gould, in speaking of "Alcohol in surgery," says: "For many years I have dispensed almost entirely with alcohol as an aid in surgical treatment. As soon as I made trial for myself of the effect of withholding alcohol, I found how entirely overrated its value was, and how gravely mistaken had been the teaching. It is commonly held, I believe, that alcoholic stimulants are of special value in all forms of septic inflammation, such as pyemia, erysipelas, septicaemia and hectic fever. I believe that this is founded solely upon tradition unsupported by any trustworthy evidence, and untested by experiment or experience." And again: "I think that of all the bad uses to which alcohol is often put as a therapeutic agent, none is worse than its employment in any form of infective disease. Even in cases of uncontrollable suppuration. I have found nothing but good in withholding alcohol." (Editorial in the Canada Lancet, May, 1905.)

Those who have had the desire, the courage, and the opportunity to put the nonalcoholic treatment of disease to a sufficient test have, without known exception, been astonished at the success they have experienced. The results at the London hospital, showing a mortality lower than that of most other general hospitals, would be impossible if alcohol were so necessary as the manifesto of the 16 physicians in the Lancet, March 30, 1907, seems to imply. We maintain that whatever benefit can be derived from alcohol can be obtained by other methods and other drugs without the disadvantages that often accompany its use. (Dr. J. J. Ridge, in the London Lancet, Apr. 1907.)

The London Temperance Hospital opened its doors on October 6, 1873. * * * It was founded with the object of testing the treatment of medical and surgical cases without the use of alcohol as ordinarily prescribed. The founders were convinced that abstinence from alcohol is conducive to sound health; they believed that its value in the treatment of disease is doubtful, and they had the courage to put their convictions to the test of practical experience. But these early medical temperance pioneers possessed another and a rarer virtue—that of wisdom—for they did not ordain that the medical officers of the hospital should be necessarily abstainers, nor did they interfere with that liberty of action in the treatment of disease which every medical man must reserve for himself. The members of the visiting staff have and always have had full liberty to prescribe alcohol when they consider it desirable in the interest of the patients, a discretion which, up to the end of 1908—a period of over 35 years—has been utilized in only 81 cases. These cases are specially reported each year in the annual report of the hospital, under the heading of "Exceptional cases."

Since the opening of the hospital up to the close of last year (1908), 28,538 in-patients have been treated, so that the proportion of cases in which alcohol has been prescribed is 1 in 352, or 0.28 per cent, and it is interesting to note that of the 81 patients to whom alcohol was administered 50 died and 31 recovered. Of these 81 patients 25 were surgical and 56 medical, and of the 25 surgical patients only 5 recovered. * * *

Alcohol is never given to convalescent patients; the cases in which alcohol has been ordered have always been ones of desperate illness.

During the past five years, over 200 abdominal sections—excluding accident and emergency operations—have been performed, with a mortality of under 5 per cent, and in none of these cases has it been deemed advisable or necessary to administer alcohol. Of the 28,358 patients who have been treated in the hospital 2,181 died, a mortality of 7.6 per cent for the whole period of the hospital's work. Too much importance may be attached to statistics, but this, at least, may be said, that the results obtained at the London Temperance Hospital compare favorably with those of any general hospital in London. * * *

The experience of the hospital shows that disease can be treated as well without as with the routine use of alcohol. (Editorial in the Medical Temperance Review. May, 1909.)

A report of the hospital's operations in the Alliance News, May, 1917, gave the total number of in-patients up to that year as 39,158, of whom 109 had received alcohol, about the same percentage as before. The annual number of in-patients received at this hospital is upward of 1,200 in reports for the years 1913, 1917, and 1918. The number of out-patients treated in 1913 was reported as 65,821; in 1918 it was 81,537.

DATES ARE OF IMPORTANCE IN DISCUSSING THE MEDICINAL VALUE OF ALCOHOL.

A change of opinion concerning the medicinal value of alcohol, amounting almost to a reversal, has taken place among medical teachers since Robert Bently Todd, the great apostle of alcohol therapy, taught (Clinical Lectures, 1859) that alcohol should be given for "all those diseases in which a tendency to depression of the vital powers exists; and there are no acute diseases in which this lowering tendency is not present;" that the physician "must give enough to keep up animal heat without embarrassing the stomach and without allowing the fumes of alcohol to be perceived in the breath." He recommended quantities of from 2 to 12 or 16 drams of brandy (2 ounces) at brief intervals, and considered that it was "far more dangerous to life to diminish or withhold alcohol than to give too much."

A revolt against the teaching of Todd found expression in England in 1871, when over 190 physicians, among them Edmund A. Parkes, author of the noted Manual of Hygiene and professor of military science, following the lead of the president of the Royal College of Physicians and the president of the Royal College of Surgeons, signed a declaration registering their belief that—"the inconsiderate prescription of large quantities of alcoholic liquids by medical men for their patients has given rise in many instances to the formation of intemperate habits."

They declared themselves also of the opinion that "many people immensely exaggerate the value of alcohol as an article of diet."

Consideration of the effect of the medical use of alcohol in promoting intemperance was, however, of much less weight in changing the practice of prescribing alcohol than was the overturning of opinion concerning its action, produced by the results of scientific experimentation.

The belief that alcohol acted as a food and as a stimulant was the chief basis of its prescription for the sick.

This basis began to be undermined when Dr. Richardson—1869—published the results of his experiments—1863, 1866—showing that alcohol acted as an anæsthetic instead of as a stimulant. The progress of the scientific investigation of this point was traced by Prof. J. J. Abel for the committee of 50—"Physiological Aspects of the Liquor Problem," volume 2, 1903—who states, page 51:

In respect to the action of alcohol on the mammalian heart, we have thus far found no evidence that it acts as a stimulant for this organ. * * *

Alcohol once incorporated in the blood is not a cardiac stimulant (p. 55).

Final, conclusive evidence was furnished by the report of the elaborate experiments carried out at the Carnegie Nutrition Laboratory by Dodge and Benedict and published in 1915. On page 249 of their report, "Physiological Effects of Alcohol," they say:

For human subjects our data seem to show rather conclusively that in the several neuro-muscular processes which we have investigated depression overbalances all other effects of alcohol.

And on page 253:

Whatever may be the effect on isolated tissue, our data give clear and consistent indications that the apparent alcoholic depression of neuro-muscular processes is a genuine phenomenon that can not be reduced to excitation of inhibitory processes.

Belief in the action of alcohol as a food has gone through a similar transformation since Dr. Todd recommended it—1859—to keep up animal heat. Recent experimental evidence on this point—Mellanby, 1919, "Alcohol; its absorption and disappearance from the blood under different conditions"—led to this conclusion:

Whatever may be the real explanation of the specific dynamic action of foodstuffs, the stimulating action of proteins, fats, and carbohydrates on the general metabolism is undoubted. Alcohol as a foodstuff, on the other hand, simply replaces certain quantities of carbohydrates and fat, and has no stimulating effect on the metabolic processes of the body, and, indeed, does not add to the brightness of the flame. In contrast to the fact that alcohol, in its food effect, does not increase the total heat produced in the body, it is certain that it does increase the heat loss by causing vaso-dilatation of the skin vessels. The result must, therefore, be a fall in body temperature, which may not be large or important if the animal is receiving a sufficiency of proteins, fats, and carbohydrates as food, but may be serious when owing to the lack of food the level of combustion is low.

The "indications" mentioned by the older writers for the administration of alcohol as a food in sickness have frequently been those in which the body was unable to assimilate other foods, states that would constitute temporary starvation. But it is in such cases—starvation—Mellanby points out, that—alcohol does not increase the amount of energy available for immediate use, while it increases the heat loss by causing vaso-dilatation of the skin vessels.

His conclusion is:

The benefits which it produces are probably more than balanced by its baneful effects.

It will be seen from the foregoing that dates are important in weighing the words of a scientific "authority."

TREATING DIABETES WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

A popular explanation of diabetes and the new treatment for it is given by Dr. Woods Hutchinson in the Saturday Evening

Post, December 11, 1920. His description of the treatment is as follows:

The latest modification of the treatment in patients who show signs of considerable amounts of the fatty acids in their blood is to begin the reduction of their diet by cutting out first fats, so as to cut out the source of these acids, then proteins, or meats, and starches, and sugar last of all.

Whatever method is pursued, as soon as the urine has been made free from sugar the rebuilding of the diet is begun. The first food allowed is small and carefully measured amounts of green vegetables containing from 3 to 5 per cent of starch, such as spinach, string beans, cabbage, celery, asparagus, tomatoes, and so on. These are usually boiled and in some cases twice or thrice boiled in order thoroughly to cook and remove as much as possible of their starch, and may be served with a small amount of butter.

A sample first-day diet would be: For breakfast 2 heaping tablespoonfuls of boiled spinach, 1½ tablespoonfuls of boiled asparagus, cup of coffee. For lunch, 2 tablespoonfuls of string beans, 1½ tablespoonfuls of spinach, coffee. For dinner, 2½ tablespoonfuls of asparagus, 1½ tablespoonfuls of string beans, pat of butter, coffee.

After two or three days of this lenten fare an egg is allowed at breakfast, a richer vegetable, such as peas or onions, at lunch, and a small helping of chicken or mutton chop at dinner. By the end of the first week bacon is allowed for breakfast, cream may be added to the coffee, and a little fruit permitted. Gradually the amounts of vegetables are increased, potatoes and rice included; meat, eggs, bacon, and cream are given in larger portions; and finally one or two slices of diabetic bread or a bran muffin or two added to the menu.

So that in from two to four weeks the patient is living upon a still slender but fairly appetizing and varied diet of salads of all sorts, vegetables, both raw and cooked, eggs, bacon, fish, meat, and small amounts of rice, potatoes, and bread.

It will be noticed that in this precisely detailed dietary no mention is made of any alcoholic liquor. The only place which alcohol has or may have in this treatment is during the starvation ordeal at the beginning, when—

He is brought to the hospital and kept for two days on ordinary diet, while he is thoroughly tested and sized up to determine the degree of his inability to burn starch. Then all food is cut off and he is placed on an absolutely starvation diet, in Hibernian phrases, the only "nuthriment" permitted being a small cup of black coffee every two or three hours during the day, with a tablespoonful or two of alcohol added if he complains of goneness in the stomach or faintness. Not that either of these fluids have the slightest curative effect on the disease, but merely to keep the patient comfortable while he is being starved without throwing any strain on the pancreas.

The result of this treatment has been a drop in the mortality from diabetes from 27 per cent during the 90 years preceding 1913—during the use of alcohol as food—to 12 per cent in 1915, 6 per cent in 1917, and 4 per cent in 1919.

TESTIMONY OF DR. EVANS.

The following, cited from Dr. Williams A. Evans, appears in the International Good Templar, January, 1917, without mention of the original source:

Ninety-nine per cent of the medical profession feel that there is no medical necessity for the use of alcohol in any form as a curative agent. * * *. When I became health commissioner I found that the city ambulances were in the habit of carrying brandy. Soon after I saw to it that they gave up that practice. Aromatic spirits of ammonia was found to be better.

Another statement credited to Dr. Evans in the Chicago Tribune appearing in the Union Signal of August 4, 1921, would indicates that he includes himself in the 99 per cent.

He is reported as saying—

Far be it from me to say that it was more than coincidence, but do you remember how the sheets were decked with advertisements of whisky as a remedy for flu and pneumonia in 1919 and how the death list from flu and pneumonia grew—and how in January, 1920, when the flu came back, there were no advertisements calling on people to drink whisky for the flu, and how the death rate came down?

In the Health column of the Boston Herald, January 26, 1921, Dr. Evans referred to the use of champagne to allay nausea in desperate illness. Its "virtue" he wrote, is supposed to lie in the carbonic acid gas, and there are physicians who say that iced carbonated water sipped in the same way would have the same effect and if given instead of champagne the system would be spared the harmful effects of the alcohol.

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

The interpretation placed by opponents of prohibition on the action of the American Medical Association at Boston this year is not borne out by what took place. Efforts were made to secure from the American Medical Association a resolution protesting against the passage by Congress of the pending bill prohibiting the manufacture of beer for medicine and placing limitations upon the prescription of other liquors by physicians. The house of delegates, which is the most representative medical body in the United States, refused to entertain the resolution, showing thus very conclusively that there was no great desire in the medical profession to secure the use of beer for medicine and that they did not feel any alarm over the proposed restrictions on the prescription of other liquors.

It has been claimed that the hesitancy of the association to reaffirm may be due to the fact that in the interval of time the country has suffered from two tremendous influenza epidemics, when it is said every physician, or nearly every physician, found himself compelled to prescribe whisky.

ALCOHOL IN INFLUENZA CASES.

How nearly every physician did prescribe whisky during those epidemics it would of course be difficult to ascertain. The opinions, however, of a large number of representative physicians on the subject of using whisky as either a preventive or for the treatment of influenza was secured for publication through correspondence, and their answers appear in the number of the Scientific Temperance Journal, February, 1920, pages 1 to 14.

The tenor of the replies, generally speaking, is adverse to the use of alcohol as a preventive of influenza, or as a remedial agent in its treatment. The following replies are typical of the great majority quoted.

From Commissioner Copeland, New York:

* * * All through the epidemic of 1918 and up to the present moment, I have never recommended whisky as a preventive of influenza. Personally I do not consider it of any value in the prevention and treatment of influenza. There are certain stages of pneumonia where stimulation is necessary, and many reputable physicians look upon whisky or brandy as the best drug for this purpose * * * and for this reason I have urged drug stores to keep whisky in stock exactly as they keep other drugs in stock. * * *

ROYAL S. COPELAND,
Commissioner Department of Health, New York.

FEBRUARY 4, 1920.

From Commissioner Woodward, of Boston. He refers to the influenza program, developed at the meeting of the American Public Health Association, Chicago, 1918, which was published in the American Journal of Public Hygiene, January, 1919, and adds:

The consensus of opinion at that meeting was that alcohol was without virtue as a preventive of influenza. I fully concur in that opinion, and I know of no health officer, and no sanitarium of any kind, of any repute, who is of any different mind. * * *

Health Commissioner.

VARIOUS CASES CITED.

A case has been quoted from Dr. Jacobi, a life-long adherent of the alcohol therapy of Todd, but this occurred over 40 years ago.

The fourteenth edition of Dr. Horacio C. Wood's Therapeutics, which has been quoted in favor of administering alcohol as a stimulant and temporary imparter of power, was published in 1908, and the passage quoted appears in precisely the same words in the tenth edition, 1897. But in a work on Pharmacology and Therapeutics, by H. C. Wood, jr., published in 1917, the action of alcohol as a stimulant receives important modification (p. 202):

As a stimulant to the circulation alcohol is serviceable in cases of temporary heart failure. When there is marked widening of the blood vessels, alcohol is only of secondary value, because with marked relaxation of the blood vessels no degree of heart stimulation is capable of elevating the blood pressure. It is essential in conditions of vaso-motor weakness that tone be restored to the dilated blood vessels through the use of vaso-motor stimulants, and therefore in this type of circulatory depression alcohol, while sometimes of service as an adjuvant, can not be relied upon by itself to maintain the circulation.

On page 204 Dr. H. C. Wood, jr., says:

As a circulatory stimulant, alcohol has enjoyed an extraordinary popularity in the treatment of various poisonings, especially snake bite. While it is possible that reasonable amounts of alcohol may be of some value in snake bite, there is little doubt but that more persons bitten by venomous serpents have been killed by the inconsiderate use of the remedy than by the poison of the snake. There are many circulatory stimulants which are vastly superior to alcohol, and the old superstitution that a man would invariably recover from snake bite if it were possible to intoxicate him with alcohol is a foolish error which has been the cause of many deaths.

In this work published in 1917 Dr. Woods includes an important modification in his consideration of alcohol as a foodstuff. He says (p. 203):

It must be remembered, however, that it can in no way replace the nitrogenous elements in the food, and, in the second place, the quantity that can be taken is limited by what we might speak of as the drug action, and at best it can only replace a portion of the carbonaceous element.

In fevers:

A question of great importance in this connection, but one which can not yet be considered to be finally settled, is the influence of alcohol upon the resistance of the body to bacterial invasions. It seems established with a fair degree of certainty that large doses of alcohol increase the susceptibility of the body to infection, but the evidence concerning the influence of therapeutic doses is insufficient to be conclusive.

"The Whole Truth about Alcohol," by George Elliot Flint (1919), which has a preface by Dr. Jacobi, one of the few medical men who objected to the resolution discouraging the use of alcohol in medicine passed by the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association in 1917, has been quoted extensively.

A review of Dr. Flint's book appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association, December 27, 1919, with this preface, which bears directly on the prescription of alcohol as a stimulant.

Until comparatively recently—

Says the Journal of the American Medical Association—

alcohol was regarded as a respiratory and cardiac stimulant. Whisky was probably the most popular domestic remedy for such occasional upsets as fainting, in which stimulation was presumably required. The popular idea that alcohol is a tone stimulant has so often proved to be untenable on the basis of scientific evidence that it seems almost superfluous to refute the mistaken notion anew. No one will deny that a feeling of relief often follows the use of alcohol in conditions in which stimulation seems to be indicated. In such cases, however, it has been shown to act merely as an irritant to the mucous membranes of the mouth and throat, promoting thus a beneficent local reaction before the alcohol has had time to be absorbed and stimulate in any way the depressed function.

There would be little occasion to refer again to the subject at this time had not * * * Mr. G. E. Flint, recently, in a fiery volume, vigorously defended alcohol as a stimulant. Any tyro in physiology can find contradictions in Flint's book which, as a recent reviewer remarked in the Journal, "sometimes quotes confidently as fact what is absolutely not true." * * *

* * * * * * *

In animal experimentation the use of anæsthetics, which are commonly employed to insure painless effects in such studies, may interfere with the interpretation of the observations in which alcohol, itself a narcotic, is concerned. Lately satisfactory methods of investigation without the use of the anæsthetic when alcohol is being tested have been devised. Hyatt, who has given the most recent report, found that when alcohol is given by mouth there is a rapid rise in blood pressure followed by an immediate return to normal. This is a purely local effect due to irritation of the gustatory nerves and swallowing movements. The same result can be obtained with dilute acids. When the alcohol was introduced directly into the circulation without preliminary contact with mucous membranes, there was either no effect or a fall in pressure. An anæsthetic dose may actually be given by introduction in this manner into the circulation to which it must find its way in any mode of administration without any stimulation of the heart or respiration. Even when moderate doses of 40 per cent alcohol are introduced into the stomach slowly by the use of a gastric sound no change in pressure is produced.

These experiments confirm the earlier studies of the same sort which Brooks has described in the Journal. Why need the subject receive further argument? In refuting the claim that alcohol is in any sense a direct stimulant of the heart a distinguished British committee reporting to the Central Control Board thus formulated the status of the controversy:

"The fact that the beneficial effect appears almost immediately and long before any significant amount of alcohol can have been absorbed and carried to the heart is evidence for this local and indirect nature of the action. Its use in these circumstances is, therefore, comparable with that of smelling salts or the irritating fumes of burned feathers, traditionally employed for the same purpose. When, in conditions of more protracted conditions of the heart, the administration of alcohol has a beneficial effect this must be attributed mainly to its mildly narcotic and sedative action, relieving the centers which modify the action of the heart from the disturbing influence of pain and anxiety. The promotion of a patient's comfort, the relief of mental strain, may be an essential element in the treatment of the disease and an important factor in recovery. It does not, however, justify the prescription of alcohol as a stimulant of the heart."

ALCOHOL IN LOBAR-PNEUMONIA CASES.

The following extracts are from an article on the use of alcohol in lobar pneumonia, published in the Medical Temperance Review, London, May, 1910. The author, Dr. A. A. Hill, is of no special note, but he shows himself not behind but in advance in applying the results of experimental findings to the use of alcohol in pneumonia.

After 25 years of experience in general practice I have come to the serious but definite conclusion that the prescription of alcohol in various forms is one of the principal causes of the mortality in lobar pneumonia.

In making this statement I know I am running against not only prejudice but the considered and honest judgment of many eminent members of our profession. I can only state the bare fact that where I have had a few fatal cases of lobular pneumonia where complicated with measles, I have not up to the present given a certificate of death for lobar pneumonia.

I claim no skill beyond that of the everyday practitioner, but I absolutely refuse when the engorged lungs are not doing a quarter of their normal work and the heart, with its right chamber choked with blood, has the utmost difficulty in keeping up even a partial blood current, when, as a matter of common knowledge, that usual "secondary cause" on the death certificate, cardiac failure, seems inevitable after each labored inspiration—at this critical point I refuse to give the final blow by exhibiting a paralyzing drug that in scores of cases evidently closes the scene and arrests the heart in systole.

* * * * * * *

In the course of one of the most desperate cases I have had—respirations 70, pulse 130, temperature 104.8 F.—a young man with both lungs involved to a large extent, the mother piteously asked when she saw her son apparently in extremis, "May I give him a little brandy before he dies?" I replied, and it took courage to speak thus, "Give him brandy and he will die; give him none and he will get better." The result was obedience to my order and a splendid recovery.

If the young practitioner will only hold firmly to his scientific knowledge of the true effect of alcohol on the cardiac centers and controlling nerves, I can promise him such a success in these cases as will make him more determined than ever in his repudiation of the preposterous claims of the alcohol school.

PNEUMONIA AND TYPHOID.

In 1907, when the International Union of Abstaining Physicians was organized in Stockholm, Dr. Holitscher, the secretary of the Germah Speaking Union, proposed to make a strictly scientific investigation of the merits of the alcohol treatment and the nonalcohol treatment of pneumonia and typhoid fever by getting a number of hospital physicians in different countries to alternate these treatments with their patients and compare results. He was met at once with the objection that such a course would be unethical, that physicians would treat according to their convictions, and though he argued that the question was not settled, and that this would be a way of settling it, he secured very little cooperation. He did receive, however, considerable correspondence, particularly from the Scandinavian physicians, setting forth the reasons why they were unwilling to adopt his plan.

In making his final report to the organization he included a number of these letters, which are published in the Medical Temperance Review, August, 1909. The following are a few extracts:

I have long rejected any idea of alcohol treatment in typhoid fever, because in this disease the time during which stimulating action is necessary can not be reckoned at all, and in severe cases—and in these only is a stimulant generally of value—this time is generally a very long one, frequently protracted over some weeks. To stimulate the heart for so long by means of alcohol is, in my opinion, a very questionable procedure. For this reason I give my typhoid patients no alcohol. * * *

I have come to the conclusion that even in pneumonia camphor is to be preferred to alcohol as a stimulant, and I think that with the former it is possible to keep that stimulating action going for a longer time than with alcohol. For some time I have, as a rule, not used alcohol even in the treatment of pneumonia. (Excepts alcoholics.) (Prof. Karl Petrén, of Upsala.)

For many years in my scheme of therapeutics (in pneumonia, etc.) alcohol is practically excluded. Only in exceptional cases of pronounced alcoholism, and that only during a very short time, is it given; otherwise, never. (Dr. G. Ekehorn, Sundsvall.)

In typhoid no alcohol; in pneumonia small quantities (20 to 30 c. c. a day) if the patient is a drinker. (Sigurd Sjovall, Lyungley.)

For many years I have hardly ever given spirituous liquors in treatment; only very seldom, in exceptional cases, do I give any. (H. Wetterdal, chief physician to the Hospital Sabbatsberg, Stockholm.)

On principle I never use alcohol in practice. (A. Wachenfeld, Ystad.)

As a rule, I give my patients no alcohol. (W. Fosselt, Hudiksvall.)

Alcohol is given here only to such patients as are so accustomed to it that a sudden withdrawal of it would not be advisable. (Erich Lindstrom, Gefle.)

Alcohol is often necessary for drunkards, but for other people mostly not. (Emil Hedlund.)

Two only of the Scandinavian correspondents—Dr. O. E. Olsson and Dr. Fritz Kaijser, of Hernosand—gave alcohol in pneumonia. But—

No voice was raised to speak a word for the administration of alcohol in typhoid fever.

A number of similar replies were received from German and Austrian physicians. Examples:

For a great many years I have never given alcohol in typhoid, and in pneumonia only on extremely rare occasions merely as a restorative to people who are accustomed to wine. We certainly do live in a wine country, but I no longer make the free and energetic therapeutic use of wine and brandy which formerly I used to do. We get through entirely without alcohol, and now that I have got to this I do not want to make another change for many reasons. (Prof. Heidenheim, Worms.)

In the hospitals visited by me, all typhoid and pneumonia patients are treated without alcohol. On this account I do not feel ready to take part in the experiment as proposed; it would be a retrograde movement. (Dr. von Ingersleben, Aschersleben.)

For seventeen years I have treated all cases of inflammation of the lungs and typhoid without alcohol, with the exception of those typhoid patients who can take no nourishment, and these receive a beaten egg, and to modify the taste of the egg, a little brandy is added. Delirium cases, also, do not receive a drop of alcohol. (Dr. Poelchen, Zeitz.)

As I consider treatment with alcohol harmful, though there are exceptions, I can not reconcile an alternating treatment with my knowledge.—(Prof. Eichhorst, Zurich.)

We have for years treated all our in-patients, even the typhoid and pneumonia cases, without the use of alcohol, and we are much pleased with the results. On this account, therefore, we do not wish, for the sake of your statistics to go back from this advance, which we for our part have gained with some trouble. Very occasionally we have given a beaten egg with an insignificant amount of alcohol in it.—(Dr. Harald, Burgdorf.)

Under my direction in the first medical department, no patient receives alcohol in any form whatsoever except: (1) delirium tremens cases during attacks of delirium; (2) dying phthisical cases and decrepid old people who have been accustomed to the use of alcohol; (3) certain cases in the last stages of collapse. I can not, therefore, decide to undertake a method of treatment of typhoid and pneumonia which at one time I did use, but which I have given up after much reflection, and which is harmful in some cases and useless and costly in all.—(Prof. Maximilian Sternberg, Vienna.)

I would like very much to carry out your wishes, but I can not do so, because for years the typhoid cases I have treated have received no alcohol, and the published statistics show that we have obtained certainly as good, if not better results, than those obtained during the period when typhoid cases received alcohol. As I am now convinced that the administration of alcohol to typhoid patients, except in isolated rare cases, in which there is delirium, is absolutely unnecessary, I can not reconcile it with my medical knowledge again to adopt alcohol therapeutics. The same holds good in pneumonia, although I do not always put aside the use of alcohol in such cases on account of the frequent delirium.—(Hofrat v. Jaksch, Prague.)

Not all hospital physicians refused to take part in the experiment, however. Statistics were received from 47 hospital departments. From Sweden 13, Norway 6, Hungary 7, Denmark, Germany, Austria, and Switzerland 20. Two only filled out the cards; 18 tried the alternating treatment.

The doses given ranged from 10 to 35 c. c. daily with one case at 50 c. c. a day. The form varied; table wine, heavy southern wine, Canary wine, brandy, and alcohol solutions.

RESULTS.

Of the 486 pneumonia cases there were 238 cases treated with alcohol, 165 were discharged cured; 15 discharged not well; 58 died.

Of the 248 treated without alcohol, 176 were discharged well; 19 were not cured or transferred and 53 died.

The percentage of deaths was, therefore, 24.3 with alcohol; 21.3 without.

The statistics of the cases of alcoholics were interesting. In 47 of the patients there was a history of inebriety. Twenty were treated with alcohol; 8 recovered, 12 died. Twenty-seven were treated without alcohol; 16 recovered, 11 died.

The cases with delirium tremens also numbered 47; 21 were treated with alcohol; 6 recovered and 15 died; 26 cases were treated without alcohol; 17 recovered and only 9 died.

Physicians who did not consent to the alternating treatment reported the number of patients treated with and without alcohol. There were 882 cases so reported. Of these, 211 had alcohol and 82 died; 671 had no alcohol and 108 died.

Dr. Holitscher does not, however, attribute this much greater mortality of the patients who were given alcohol entirely to the effects of the alcohol, assuming that they were more seriously ill or it would not have been given them.

A series of 100 cases was reported from one Swedish hospital. No alcohol was given; the mortality was 8 per cent.

Sir Malcolm Morris, president of the Institute of Hygiene, at a conference called by the institute on February 28, 1919, to consider "Influenza and its prevention," said:

Alcohol is not essential for the prevention or the treatment of influenza.

Dr. E. B. Turner, a leading London practitioner * * * has kept a record of an unbroken series of 2,300 cases of influenza which he has treated, ending in complete recovery with no complication and without a single death. He described, in the British Medical Journal for March 8, 1919, how in the epidemic raging in London since October, 1918, he had treated 335 cases of virulent type; all recovered without pneumonia or other complications. Dr. Turner says in a letter: "I have not ordered any alcohol whatever in influenza, either in this epidemic or in any of the earlier ones. They do not require it as far as I can see." (From the Alliance News, May, 1919.)

Rarely ever in the case of drunkards do I allow alcohol, surely not in the doses we are taught to give it. If the failing heart, in drunkards or others, is due to loss of functional power in either muscle or nerve, it seems to me that with alcohol, digitalis, and similar stimulants given in free doses there is imminent danger that the contributory stimulation may prove more than the heart can bear and cause it to cease to beat from sheer exhaustion. I think I have seen such unfortunate endings. Then, again, the loss of functional power of the heart may be due to the direct action of the poison of a nondepurated blood, whether from want of adequate oxygenation, retention of urea compounds, or other products of waste, and if so, on what reasonable grounds should stimulants be applied here to the maximum? Would it not be better to do away with the offending cause of the depressed heart? Stimulants forced may postpone the patient's suffering until death, but that will not prolong his life. (Stephen Harnsberger, in New York Medical Record, Nov. 30, 1907, p. 892.)

AN ENGLISH MANIFESTO REFUTED.

An expression of opinion of a number of prominent English physicians, which appeared in the London Lancet in 1907, March 30 (p. 894), and called out at once strong letters of opposition (pp. 1038–1039, 1110–1112, 1186–1187), with a few of approbation. The opposition was based mainly on the sanction given in the statement to the beverage use of alcohol, and the writers demanded the scientific basis for such opinions, which did not appear.

In the numerous press comments on this statement it was charged that it did not originate with the medical profession, but was prepared and presented to the doctors by the liquor interests. One doctor withdrew his signature, another complained that a modification which he had made a condition of signing had not been included.

One of the opponents asked: "How, in the face of the natural proclivity to immoderation can medical men presume to recommend what they know to be productive of more harm than good?"

The following comments upon the manifesto by British medical men are illuminating:

THE PROALCOHOL MANIFESTO.

It transpired that the manifesto was not the work of any medical man, but the compilation of a proliquor barrister, and issued, not in the interests of frail humanity, but for the purpose of bolstering up a tottering traffic. The strange thing is that any doctor should have lent the weight of his name and authority to any such document. Several signed it under the belief that it was the work of a brother doctor, and were rather chagrined at being caught. At least three of them are brewery shareholders. One of the signatories has withdrawn his name, and no fewer than 10 of the 16 signed the manifesto which received the indorsement of nearly 15,000 medical men (in 1903–4), urging that temperance and hygiene should be taught in all our schools. That manifesto declared that much of the degeneracy, disease, and accident with which medical men are called upon to deal is directly or indirectly due to the use of alcohol, and a widespread ignorance prevails concerning not only the nature and properties of the substance, but also as to its effects on the body and mind. The 10 who signed that document are Drs. Anderson, Barrs, Crichton-Browne, Dixon, Fraser, Gowers, Hutchinson, Owen, Roberts, and Venning.

The declarations and statements which the manifesto evoked are well worth preserving:

REPLY BY THE BRITISH MEDICAL TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION.

1. That alcohol is sometimes valuable as a drug. This is a matter much discussed in medical circles, and is not to be settled by ipse dixits, however eminent. A similar declaration would have been made 70 or 80 years ago in favor of bloodletting, now almost abandoned. To say that alcohol can sometime be life preserving is not to say that it is necessary, since other drugs or measures may be even more effectual, or as effectual, without the drawbacks of alcohol.

In large hospitals the amount used has diminished from 20 to 70 per cent during the last 20 or 30 years, and finality has not been reached on this subject. The experience of the London Temperance Hospital, in which alcohol has only been given 75 times in 33 years, and in most cases without saving the life, is conclusive that its value is, to say the least, negligible, for the death rate has been lower than in most general hospitals.

2. The second statement is to the effect that the universal belief that the moderate use of alcohol is beneficial for adults is, in their opinion, amply justified. Note the grounds of their opinion are not given. If the "universal belief" is to be taken as the proof required, then (1) the belief is by no means universal; millions believe the contrary. (2) This belief would demonstrate the benefit of much more than the doctor would admit to be "moderate." (3) Belief of benefit received would justify opium smoking and many other injurious customs.

On the other hand, it has been demonstrated by the experience of several life assurance societies and by friendly societies that abstainers live longer, on the average, have less sickness, and quicker recovery than nonabstainers. Whenever numbers of men can be compared abstainers can do more work, with greater endurance of heat, cold, and hardships, and with less inconvenience than drinkers of alcohol. These are facts which the opinions of any number of doctors can not overcome.

3. The third proposition is that any beneficial thing may be injurious in excess. This is true. But the admitted injury of alcoholic excess does not necessarily prove the innocence of a small amount. One of the greatest dangers of alcohol is that people may take a daily amount of alcohol which is doing them harm and shortening their lives without their noticing the injury and while they think it is doing them good, and there is also the certainty that in an unknown percentage of cases they will become drunkards.

An international medical manifesto on alcohol was issued in 1903, signed by many eminent English, American, and European professors, and in all by 6G4 doctors [finally by over 800], at the instance of the British Medical Temperance Association. This stated (1) that experiments have demonstrated that small quantities of alcohol are injurious, and that it is not a food; (2) that it increases liability to disease and shortens life; (3) that abstainers do more work, etc.; (4) that all functions of animals are best performed without alcohol, any contrary opinion being a delusion; (5) that alcohol injures the offspring and leads to the deterioration of the race, especially when taken by mothers. They therefore urged universal total abstinence, and said, "We believe that such an era of health, happiness, and prosperity would be inaugurated thereby that many of the social problems of the present age would be solved."

Nothing has since been discovered to contradict their conclusions.

J. J. RIDGE, M. D. (London),
Honorable Secretary British Medical Temperance Association.

EXTRACTS FROM MEDICAL OPINIONS AND EXPERIMENTAL FINDINGS ON THE MEDICAL USE OF ALCOHOL.

* * * * * * *

Prof. Dennig's investigations of the influence of alcohol upon blood pressure and the work of the heart in pathological conditions, especially fever, made in the City Hospital of Pforzheim, were reported in the Deutsches Archiv für Klinische Medizin, 1909, vol. 96, parts 1 and 2.

The conditions in which the action of alcohol was especially observed included pneumonia, erysipelas, sepsis, tuberculosis, pleurisy, scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria, purulent meningitis, asthma, heart disease, and arteriosclerosis.

The quantities used were classed as: Small, six-fifteenths cubic centimeters; medium, eleven-twentieths cubic centimeters; and large, thirty-fortieths cubic centimeters.

Observations were made of the effects upon maximal, minimal, and medium blood pressure, amplitude, and frequency of pulse, and temperature.

Parallel experiments were made upon animals.

The conclusions drawn were:

The pathological conditions, especially fever, affected by alcohol are:

(1) The blood pressure, in most cases negatively, seldom positively. The sinking, and in very rare cases the rising, is on the whole very slight, so that practically it has no significance.

(2) The size of the dose enters into consideration to the extent that the small doses affect the pressure less than large and the return to the original condition after small doses affect the pressure less than large doses and the return to the original condition after small doses takes place sooner than after large.

(3) The expansion of the blood vessels after the administration of alcohol is a significant feature and the sinking of the blood pressure appears to be due in part to the widening of the arteries.

The conclusion was that the results of the investigation pointed to more sparing use of alcohol in fevers than had previously been the practice.

Further investigations of the action of alcohol in pathological conditions by Dennig, Hindelang, and Grünbaum were reviewed by Dr. William Lee Secor, professor of therapeutics in the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery, in the New York Medical Record, December 17, 1910, as follows:

Carefully conducted studies on the effect of alcohol in the acute infections in man have recently been made by Dennig, Hindelang, and Grünbaum. The care with which these observations have been made render them more convincing than the entire mass of conflicting, inaccurate clinical reports.

Patients were selected who were not addicted to the use of alcohol and the systolic and diastolic blood pressure and pulse rate were observed for a period of one or more hours after the administration of the alcohol. This series of studies included 62 febrile patients, the majority acute infections. The test was applied to successive groups of patients, each receiving larger amounts of alcohol.

The first group of ten, including three pneumonia patients, received, well diluted, an equivalent of 6–10 c. c. of absolute alcohol. In all but three cases there was a fall in both systolic and diastolic pressure, and the systolic output, as determined by the product of pulse pressure by pulse rate, was reduced. This period of cardiovascular depression continued from one and one-half to two hours.

The second group, consisting of nine patients, including five suffering from pneumonia, received from 11–20 c. c. of alcohol. Two patients reacted by a slight rise in pressure and systolic output; in the remaining seven patients the blood fell and the systolic output was decreased.

The third group, including 25 patients, received, well diluted, an equivalent of 20–30 c. c. of absolute alcohol. All but five of these patients gave evidence of the depressing action of the alcohol.

Included in the cases that gave a slight rise in pressure were one pneumonia and one erysipelas case.

Still larger doses, equivalent to 30 and 40 c. c. of absolute alcohol, were administered to a group of seven febrile patients, and all reacted by a fall in pressure and lessened systolic output.

These results, on the whole, are in accord with those of Cabot, who was unable, with varying doses of alcohol, to demonstrate in febrile patients a rise in blood pressure.

The above results, like those of the animal experiments, impress us with the uncertainty of the reaction of the individual to alcohol, as even in small doses it may, and in large doses invariably does, depress the circulation. It is fair to assume that in these conditions drugs like camphor, caffein, and digitalis are of much more value, as they are more constant in their action and much less liable to affect the patient unfavorably.

Dr. Secor's summary was:

In the circulatory disturbances of the acute infections, impairment of the vascular regulatory mechanism is more apparent than active disturbance of the heart, and the therapeutic measures should be directed toward the prevention or correction of these vaso-motor disturbances. Alcohol in man and the lower animals, when taken in small amounts, frequently acts as a cardio-vascular stimulant. The exact method of action is still disputed. Larger amounts of alcohol, in individuals not addicted to its use invariably act as a cardio-vascular depressant by paralyzing the vasomotor center. The border line between the amount acting as a stimulant and the amount having a depressant action is variable, and this variability in action renders alcohol an undesirable therapeutic agent.

The effect of alcoholic drinks upon blood pressure was the subject of an investigation by Dr. M. John, of the city hospital Luisen, in Dortmund, published in the Zeitschrift für experimentelle Pathologie und Therapie, January, 1909.

The conclusion was that in the amounts of alcohol which he used (45 c. c., taken in 1½ liter of 3 per cent alcoholic liquid, in the space of an hour, or the equivalent amount of alcohol in more concentrated form) caused in many cases considerable fluctuation in the blood pressure which often ran a very characteristic course. After a temporary increase in amplitude, a considerable decrease is seen, lasting from 1 to 2 hours from the administration of the alcohol, caused by a fall in the systolic pressure without any change, or only very slight change, in the diastolic.

The symptoms, he said, reminded one of the behavior of the circulation in the circulatory weakness that is to be seen as a consequence of infectious diseases.

The manner of the lective influence of alcohol upon the splanchic region was that of a preliminary contraction of the vessels which soon gave place to dilatation.

The administration of alcohol in the doses here used, he concludes, to combat the circulatory weakness of infectious diseases would appear unsuitable.

Dr. W. Gilman Thompson, in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, April 21, 1910, made the following statement of his clinical experience in the use of alcohol:

There is at present a gratifying change of view as to the dietetic necessity of alcohol in the treatment of disease. We no longer regard beer as a necessary support to the nursing mother, malt liquor as a mainstay in phthisis, or Burgundy as a sheet anchor in anemia. As a hospital interne, now more than 25 years ago, I was brought up to regard alcohol as a food. I was taught to give whisky in typhoid fever and pneumonia to the extent sometimes of an ounce an hour and all day long, and to feed babies with diarrhea or diphtheria on brandy.

At present I never use alcohol in pneumonia except in a few cases among the very aged or cases complicated by delirium tremens. Not infrequently I order no alcoholics for weeks at a time in my general medical wards, preferring as cardiac supports the true cardiac drugs and the diffusable stimulants such as ammonia, camphor, etc.

"The Indications for Alcohol," an editorial in the American Journal of Clinical Medicine, February, 1916:

* * * * * * *

A plea for alcohol as a remedial agent appears in one of our exchanges, a journal of deservedly good reputation and high standards. We do not mention the name of this publication since in our opinion the argument presented for alcohol should be taken upon its merits, irrespective of the interests back of it. What concerns us is the truth or falseness of the thing and not whether the article is engraved on tablets of gold or imprinted on pitch. Let us examine in detail the claims made by our colleague.

The first indication claimed for alcohol is when pneumonia occurs in a person accustomed to the daily taking of alcohol, though not necessarily to excess. Here it is advised to give small doses every three hours to prevent nervousness and depression occasioned even in health by stopping the stimulant.

More than a half century ago N. S. Davis began the movement against the use of alcohol as a medicine, and this has steadily grown until now it is generally admitted that this agent is not the necessity it was then considered. This use in the pneumonia of drinkers was one of the last strongholds of the alcohol advocate. Everyone who has tried impartially to do without it here has found Davis right and shown alcohol to be useless.

The chief peril in pneumonia is toxemia, yet alcohol itself is a most potent cause of toxemia, it adds a danger here as in so many other cases. Such a patient needs elimination and cardio-nervous support; and his peril is greater than that of the nonuser of alcohol. Careful nutrition, coffee, cardiac tonics, and elimination will save more lives if the alcohol is omitted. Nervous phenomena indicate the need for more elimination and a suitable supply of food; the only indication added by reason of the alcohol habit is extra care of the heart.

The second indication is in some cases of delirium tremens (not many), where small doses are advised, large ones being always deleterious. Here again the experience of those who have treated many cases in hospitals is against this plea. Every drop of alcohol taken by the delirium tremens patient militates against his chances for recovery. We have passed many phases in the treatment of this malady, beginning with the sedatives and narcotics and ending with the eliminants. The condition is a pure toxemia, and it is successfully treated with emetine, purges, pilocarpine, and by very carefully sustaining the vitality, and especially the heart. Capsicum gave better results than narcotics; coca was an advance, but the modern method, by elimination, leaves nothing to be desired as to results, especially when the right eliminant is selected.

The third indication is when alcohol is being withdrawn from habitues with arteriosclerosis, degeneration of the heart muscle, kidneys, perhaps of the central nervous system, when the alcohol should be withdrawn gradually. This can hardly be called an indication for alcohol, and there may well be a psychic need for the proceedure, as the patient may not be willing to stop suddenly. Moreover, we are not indisposed to acknowledge the influence of habit, and the possible peril in abruptly stopping even a bad habit in persons well past the age of growth. But the evil is often due to the fact that the semblance of robust health may have been imparted by the alcohol, while its withdrawal leaves the patient as he really is, seemingly worse, although he may be truly in better condition. He was a mere shell of a man, we often hear when such a one falls under some trifling malady.

Fourth: Severe cases of diabetes mellitus. Diabetics are apparently able to burn up large quantities of alcohol, not only without detriment but with great benefit. * * * During the oatmeal days alcohol can be used in large quantities with good effect.

This point should be left for discussion with the specialist in diabetes. (The specialist in diabetes has discussed this question since the foregoing article was published in the Am. Jour. of Clinical Med.) In his own practice the present writer has not found need for alcohol in such instances, although he can see how these self-indulgent people may more readily submit to the occasional oatmeal or potato or greens days if these viands are plentifully seasoned with booze.

These are the only indications given by the author referred to at the outset, but he adds: In the whole range of infectious fevers alcohol was thought to be a necessity, but professional opinion has changed. It is not to be employed as a heart stimulant, but may be justifiably used as a narcotic in certain cases. We are scarcely so poor in narcotics that we must take this doubtful and dangerous agent, alcohol, for such use. The profession has hardly begun to realize here the value of the mild nonopiate members of this group. Many a time a dose of passiflora will answer the need perfectly. To those who know gelseminine and cicutine hydrobromides, neither alcohol nor opium derivatives are a necessity here.

The contraindications for alcohol as enumerated in the article in question are interesting. Here they are:

(1) As an appetizer, (2) as a food, (3) in tuberculosis in all stages, (4) nervous diseases, (5) exposure to heat and cold, (6) snake bite and other acute poisoning, (7) normal health.

It will be seen that in at least three of these, the third, fifth, and sixth, alcohol was until recently employed, and they formed strongholds to which the alcohol advocate retreated when beaten out of all other positions.

The whole article shows how very little the pleader for alcohol can find to claim in its favor, and when the objections are marshaled against it in these few possibly useful applications there is only one real reason left for using alcohol, and that is the user wants it.

An advertisement of Duffy's Malt Whisky—1916—contained this statement:

Now comes the Rockefeller Institute with the statement that whisky has been used by them for several months with great success for diabetes.

A letter of inquiry to the Rockefeller Institute, asking if the statement in the advertisement were true, brought the following reply from Dr. Frederick M. Allen, a recognized specialist in diabetes. In it he said:

Only brief abstracts have thus far been published in medical journals concerning our treatment of diabetes, which will be described in a monograph to appear in a few months. The mention of whisky you will find in a paper by myself in the Journal of the American Medical Association of September 12, 1914. The use of whisky is for patients in a serious condition of acidosis, emaciation, and weakness. It is not a new feature, but rather is a relic of the former treatment. Whisky is no essential part of the treatment, and there is no positive proof that it does good even in the minority of cases where it is used. It may be that alcohol is valuable to tide such patients over the fast which they undergo and to eke out their diet somewhat for a short time afterwards. In average cases we do not use it at all in treatment, and in all cases we try to stop it as soon as possible. Our treatment represents abandonment rather than advocacy of the use of whisky, since you will find that alcohol was used very freely in the treatment of severe diabetes heretofore. Our aim is to bring our patients back to healthful diet and hygiene as rapidly as possible, and we therefore avoid forming habits of alcohol, opium, and the like. Alcohol is not entirely forbidden to the elderly patients who are thoroughly accustomed to its use, but we avoid imposing the habit upon others. In any event, a malt whisky such as Duffy's would be unsuitable because of the carbohydrate content.

In May, 1916, the Journal of Experimental Research published an article by Higgins, Peabody, and Fitz on "A Study of Acidosis in Three Normal Subjects, with Incidental Observations on the Action of Alcohol as an Antiketogenic Agent." The study was carried out at the Carnegie Nutrition Laboratory, Boston, Mass., and the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital of Boston. The report states that—

The results of the administration may be dismissed briefly. Case 1 was given 100 cubic centimeters of whisky and cases 2 and 3, 180 cubic centimeters of whisky in the course of 24 hours. In no instance did the alcohol have any apparent inhibitory effect on the development of the acidosis. In fact, the acidosis as measured by the various indicators became most severe on the day on which the whisky was taken.

The gaseous metabolism on the morning following the day on which whisky was administered was increased more than on any of the previous days, and the subjective symptoms were most unpleasant. This negative result is thus in harmony with the work of von Jaksch, Hirschfeld, and Neubauer, and with the results obtained in one of three normal cases by Benedict and Török. In so far as our evidence goes it indicates that alcohol has no apparent effect on the acidosis induced in normal subjects by taking a carbohydrate free diet.

SUMMARY.

In three healthy subjects a carbohydrate-free diet caused the development of varying degrees of acidosis. The acidosis was shown by a lowered CO-tension of the alveolar air, by an increased urinary excretion of ammonia nitrogen and of acetone bodies and by the increase of titratable acidity of the urine. The acidosis was accompanied by subjective sensations of malaise, an increased oxygen consumption, a negative nitrogen balance, increased pulse rate, and increased ventilation. Alcohol given to the subjects on this diet in dosage comparable to that used for clinical purposes did not stop the progress of the acidosis or show any signs of stopping the destruction of tissue due to the absence of the fuel foods. Coincidental with its administration there was further increase in the oxygen consumption, and in the disagreeable subjective symptoms.

ALCOHOL IN THE TREATMENT OF ABDOMINAL TYPHUS.

In a clinical lecture on the treatment of abdominal typhus, Prof. Stadelmann, of Berlin, took up the question of prescribing alcohol during this disease, concerning which he said:

Special consideration is to be given to alcoholic drinks. They are administered in the form of white wines, red wines of various kinds, weak and strong, in the form of glowing wines, southern wines (Greek wine, Sherry, Port, Madeira, Tokay), cognac, arak, rum, champagne, etc. Nearly every physician has his favorite; one prefers this kind, another that; one physician gives much, another little alcohol. Opinions have greatly changed, but unanimity has by no means yet been reached. On the whole, however, it can be said that the immoderate prescription of wine and other alcoholic drinks belongs happily to the outgrown dogmas of the past, since the injuriousness of alcohol, even in the form of beer, has become more and more clear.

What has not been ascribed to the curative power of alcohol? It has been claimed that it had a stimulating action, a narcotizing, a temperature-lowering, fever-repelling, and bacteria and toxine counteracting influence; that it spares albumen, is a nutrient, protects nitrogenous tissue from consumption; that it enlivens and improves the spirits, exalts the nervous system, drives away dullness, dispels apathy and sleepiness, improves the appetite, stimulates digestion, etc.; and how little of all of these good qualities remain—how few of them have been able to stand precise, critical examination?

It is not the place here to contrast the action of alcohol upon the well with that upon the sick. It would lead too far afield. It is my opinion that of the properties of alcohol which we can take advantage of in therapeutics only the following remain secure:

First. It is a narcotic, but a very dangerous one.

Second. It may, in small doses, excite gastric secretion.

Third. It is burned in the organism and is in a certain sense a nutrient, while large doses act poisonously and destroy body substance. From this standpoint there is no objection to small doses of alcohol in typhus-fever treatment; large doses I hold to be doubtful, dangerous, and even injurious. The stimulating action (not the brain exciting or agitating, which is not to be doubted) must be looked upon as thoroughly unproved. If we need a stimulant medical science of our day offers us plenty that are much better and certainly less dangerous than alcohol. Alcohol in small doses is probably an excitant; in large doses it deadens; it does not generally have a fever-reducing action. If some authors regret that they, occasionally, in certain cases, have not given enough alcohol, and assert that typhus fever in certain stages and conditions must not be treated without alcoholics, I can only speak from my own experience; I have never yet been able to persuade myself that I knew a typhus patient had been benefited by large doses of alcohol. Moreover, most typhus patients quickly defend themselves against large doses of alcohol, they have no desire for the same, and are only induced by us to take them.

I emphatically warn against large doses, and advise the strictest moderation with our patients. If I had to choose between much alcohol or none, I would unhesitatingly choose the latter.—(Deutsche mediz. Wochenschrift, 1906, Nr. 47.)

At the annual meeting of the American Medical Association held in New York, June, 1917, Maj. Frank Billings, M. D., dean of Rush Medical School, Chicago, as chairman of the council on health and public instruction, introduced the following significant resolutions:

Whereas it is the unanimous opinion of the council on health and public instruction of the American Medical Association that alcohol has no drug value, either as a stimulant, as a tonic, or as a therapeutic agent, and that it has no food value; and

Whereas its use as a beverage or as a therapeutic agent is detrimental rather than beneficial to the individual; Therefore be it

Resolved, That the house of delegates of the American Medical Association at its sixty-eighth annual session, declares it is opposed to the use of alcohol by individuals either as a medicine or as a beverage; and be it further

Resolved, That its use in medicine is permissible only in the preparation and preservation of pharmaceutical products.

The following resolutions were passed by the American Medical Association at the same meeting:

Whereas we believe that the use of alcohol as a beverage is detrimental to the human economy; and

Whereas its use in therapeutics as a tonic or stimulant or as a food has no scientific basis: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Medical Association opposes the use of alcohol as a beverage; and be it further

Resolved, That the use of alcohol as a therapeutic agent should be discouraged.

Dr. Charles H. Mayo, one of the famous Mayo surgeons of Rochester, Minn., in his presidential address before the American Medical Association, 1917, said:

Medicine has reached a period when alcohol is rarely employed as a drug, being displaced by better remedies. Alcohol's only place now is in the arts and sciences.

From resolutions passed by West Virginia State Medical Society, May, 1908:

We deplore the fact that our profession has been quoted so long as claiming for alcohol virtues which it does not possess, and we earnestly pledge ourselves to discourage its use both in and out of the sick room.

"If you were sick in a hospital in Salt Lake City and you thought a drink of whisky would save your life, it would be impossible to get it for you," declared Gov. Bamberger, of Utah, to a Michigan audience recently. "Physicians informed us when we were framing our prohibition law that whisky was no longer considered a medical necessity, so we cut it out entirely. As a result there is no whisky to be had in the State."

Alcohol is passing as a popular remedy. (Winfield S. Hall, M. D., Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago, Ill.)

I do not believe that alcohol is a stimulant, and if I want to use a narcotic there are others that are more dependable than alcohol. * * * I find the advocacy of alcohol as a remedy decreasing quite distinctly. (George Blumer, dean of the medical faculty of Yale University.)

Alcoholic liquors are to my mind not only not valuable but distinctly disadvantageous in the treatment of disease, except in rare instances. (David L. Edsall, dean of the medical faculty of Harvard University, Boston, Mass.)

I believe that alcohol has no important uses in medicine. (Richard C. Cabot, professor of medicine, Harvard Medical School, Boston.)

I believe that in the scientific light of the present era alcohol should be classed among the anaesthetics and poisons, and that the human family would be benefited by its entire exclusion from the field of remedial agents. (Dr. J. S. Cain, dean of the faculty, medical department, University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.)

No one who has closely investigated the action of alcohol in recent years prescribes alcohol. * * * Everyone will feel relief when it is abolished. (Sir Victor Horsley, England's greatest neurological surgeon.)

Alcohol is not a heart stimulant. It has no tonic action. Alcohol causes a patient to feel better only by its strong narcotic effect, and this feeling of betterment is later followed by the depression of all vital activities, namely, there is mental weariness, circulatory weakness, loss of appetite, and impaired function of all internal secreting glands. Alcohol as a drug is only rarely needed in the treatment of disease, and then only in small amounts, and for a short time, much as a physician would use any other narcotic or circulatory depressant drug. (Oliver T. Osborne, professor of therapeutics, Yale Medical School.)

This hospital has used no whisky in any manner in the last six months. We have found that we can get along without its use just as well as with it. Personally I do not think it is necessary to use it at all as a drug. There are numerous better remedies that can be used in its place. (Arthur G. Hyde, superintendent State Hospital, Cleveland, Ohio.)

Briefly, it may be said that the modern physician finds very little use for alcohol internally. (Haven Emerson, former health commissioner, New York City.)

Alcohol has been much used in pneumonia, I believe without justification. I believe that it is never a true stimulant * * * but a depressant. * * * I believe there are few cases in which the patient would not be better off without than with alcohol. Argument for its use as a food should be met by argument for more rational dietaries in pneumonia. (Prof. Frank C. Mears, M. D., Cornell Medical School, New York City.)

The attitude of the homeopathic school has always been against the use of alcohol for medicinal purposes. (Royal S. Copeland, dean of New York Homeopathic Medical College and Flower Hospital; health commissioner, New York City, 1919.)

Dr. Howard A. Kelly, of Johns Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore, in a recent address to about 1,500 medical students in Philadelphia, advised them never to prescribe alcoholic liquors for their patients, despite the advice of older physicians, who, he declared, prescribe liquor from force of habit.

Alcohol can not properly be classed among the foods because its property of yielding energy is not its dominant property. Indeed, its food value is overshadowed by other important actions, viz, the local irritant action on the stomach; the destructive action upon the body tissue; the narcotic action; the ease with which it lends itself to the formation of a vicious habit. * * * it is probable that in almost all conditions a solution of sugar will be a better food. (From lecture to the students of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, New York City, by Prof. W. A. Bastedo, M. D.)

It is only in quite recent years that the fact is being forced upon the scientific mind that even small quantities of alcohol habitually taken may do serious harm. (Dr. W. McAdams Eccles, of England.)

The delusion that alcohol may be of benefit to the system as a stimulant is firmly rooted in the mind of the layman, and the family doctor is the only one who can convince him that he is wrong. (W. F. Boos, M. D., chemist and pharmacologist, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.)

The days of alcohol as a widely prescribed drug are past. (Dr. Donald B. Armstrong, in New York State health report.)

Bitters have no effect in increasing the appetite, or increasing the digestion. (Dr. T. Sollman, professor of materia medica, Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.)

A small quantity of alcohol three or four times a day may be of inestimable harm to some people. * * * No one can say that alcohol will not be harmful. (Maj. Frank Billings, M. D., United States Army Medical Corps.)

The tendency of alcohol in any quantity is to produce more or less congestion of the blood vessels of the stomach, and of the intestines, and if long continued of the liver and kidneys. (Dr. C. A. L. Reed, Cincinnati, Ohio, former president American Medical Association.)

Eight years ago I gave up the use of alcohol and nitroglycerin in treating pneumonia in my division of Bellevue Hospital (there are four divisions), and used those drugs by which we obtained a rise in blood pressure. After three months, when each division had from 125 to 137 patients each, I found that in those cases where alcohol and nitroglycerine had been used, the death rate was 10 per cent higher than where drugs that raised the blood pressure were used. (Alexander Lambert, New York, president American Medical Association, 1919.)

As a rule which might well be regarded as universal in the practice of medicine, alcohol in the treatment of disease is an evil. In ordinary doses and in continuous use the sum of its reactions increases exhaustion which may terminate in fatal results. Alcohol should never be given to children. (Dr. John Van Duyn, professor of history of medicine, Syracuse, N. Y.)

I rarely or never prescribe alcohol as a medicament, or as a food. (Dr. Augustus A. Eshner, professor of clinical medicine in the Philadelphia Polyclinic and College for Graduates in Medicine.)

I do not think you will meet with very many medical men in America who favor alcohol and its use. (Dr. A. Van der Veer, professor of surgery, Albany, N. Y.)

If during the last quarter of a century I have prescribed almost no alcohol in the treatment of disease, it is because I have found very little reason for its use; and it seemed to me that my patients got on better without it. (Sir James Barr, dean of the Medical School, Liverpool University.)

I am among those who think alcohol should not be used as a medicine. (Dr. W. A. Evans, health commissioner, Chicago.)

I do not consider spirituous liquors at all necessary in the treatment of disease. (Dr. John B. Murphy, former president American Medical Association, Chicago.)

Liquor in all its forms and used for any purpose whatever I believe to be an unmitigated evil. It could be abolished with profit. (Dr. Howard A. Kelly, professor in Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.)

I believe that alcohol is the greatest foe to the human race to-day. I feel that it would not be a serious harm if its use as a medicine were totally discontinued. (Dr. Walter E. Fernald, clinical lecturer in mental diseases, Tufts Medical College, Boston, Mass.)

I am forwarding you by to-day's mail a report of 303 cases of typhoid fever treated without alcohol, and my reasons for not using it. I believe the results will not suffer by comparison with those obtained in other hospitals where alcohol is used. (J. H. Landis, M. D., health officer, Cincinnati, Ohio.)

Alcohol in no case averts a fatal issue where such is impending. * * * The facts are dead against alcohol. In hospitals there has been an increase of 300 per cent in the use of milk and a decline of 47 per cent in the use of alcohol. Progress in treatment of disease has gone hand in hand with disuse of alcohol. The use of alcohol formerly was the outcome of ignorance, a confession of weakness and defeat; to-day it is the expression of inability to discard the fetters of an outworn routine. (Dr. C. Knox Bond, in Medical Times, England.)

The clinicians who decide for the deleterious action of alcohol in infectious conditions have what evidence of an experimental nature we possess at the present time to support their impressions. The advocates of the continuous use of the drug have this evidence against them. (Henry F. Hewes, M. D., Harvard Medical School, Boston, Mass.)

The facts brought out by the researches of Abbott and Laitinen and others do not furnish the slightest support for the use of alcohol in the treatment of infectious diseases in man. (Journal of the American Medical Association.)

It seems to me that the field of usefulness of alcohol in therapeutics is extremely limited, and possibly does not exist at all. (Dr. Reid Hunt, Harvard Medical School, Boston.)

From the statements of many chemists and investigators we may infer that the internal use of alcohol is of no help to the sick and can well be abandoned in their treatment. (From resolutions passed by the leading medical society of Russia, May, 1915.)

The first-aid division of the American Red Cross does not approve of the use of alcohol as a stimulant, a tonic, or a therapeutic agent. The field representatives who are organizing and instructing first-aid classes all call attention to the dangerous practice of giving any alcoholic liquor in accident cases. (C. H. Connor, lieutenant colonel, Medical Corps, United States Army, assistant director general, department military relief.)

The injection of alcohol (in sciatica) has been shown by Cadwalader to be unjustifiable, as alcohol destroys nerve tissue. (Therapeutics editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Mar. 18, 1916.)

Whisky and brandy were deleted from the United States Pharmacopœia because the committee of revision found that very few physicians are now prescribing alcoholic liquors. (Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Washington, D. C., chairman of the revision committee of the Pharmacopœia.)

I seldom hear of liquor being ordered by physicians nowadays. (Charles S. Heritage, M. D., president Gloucester County Medical Society, N. J.)

Latter-day research workers have conclusively demonstrated the fact that alcohol is a depressant, first, last, all the time; that is, not even a primary stimulant. There are better tonics than alcohol; why use something about which there is so much doubt? (N. S. Ferris, M. D., Washington, D. C.)

Dr. Henry Koplik, of New York City, reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association for November 17, 1917, that the death rate in Bellevue Hospital pneumonia cases among children had been much larger when whisky was given than when it was not given, so he had stopped all use of whisky in that disease.

I very seldom prescribe alcohol as a medicine, and think its effects are positively harmful in the vast majority of medical cases. (Dr. Allen A. Jones, adjunct professor of medicine, University of Buffalo, N. Y.)

I almost never use alcoholic liquors. The teaching of our school is generally against alcohol. (Dr. Henry William Cheney, associate in pediatrics, Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago.)

I never prescribe alcohol. (Dr. W. H. Walker, associate professor of medicine, Rush Medical College, Chicago.)

Regarding the use of alcohol in medical practice, I very rarely use it. At the Baptist Hospital I have not ordered it for a patient for several years. At the Massachusetts General Hospital in the out-patient department I never prescribe it. (Dr. George S. C. Badger, assistant in the theory and practice of medicine, Harvard, Boston.)

In the medical wards of the Pennsylvania Hospital I have found that in acute as well as chronic disease we can do without alcohol. It does harm rather than good. (Dr. J. H. Musser, Philadelphia, former president American Medical Association.)

Recent careful experiments in the nutrition laboratory of the Carnegie Institution at Washington show that alcohol is never a stimulant, but always a depressant or paralyzant. Other experiments made in the same laboratory show that alcohol is not a substitute for carbohydrates in diabetic conditions. The acidosis was more severe on the days when whisky was taken. (Martha M. Allen, author of Alcohol, a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine.)

Alcohol has a harmful action on the phagocytes, the agents of natural defense against infective microbes. (Prof. Metchnikoff, Pasteur Institute, Paris.)

After a careful study of alcohol as a beverage and medicine, I have been unable to discover one single beneficial or useful purpose it serves in the human economy. (Col. L. Melvin Maus, Medical Corps, U. S. Army.)

Many men have been killed by the alcohol given to relieve them from the effects of snake bite. (From Researches on Snake Bite, by Prof. S. Weir Mitchell.)

Alcohol has no place in medicine. (Dr. De Witt G. Wilcox, in presidential address, 1914, before the American Institute of Homeopathy.)

Alcohol diminishes the efficiency of the heart muscle. This discovery of science alone ought to banish whisky, brandy, wine, and all other intoxicating drinks from the armamentarium of every up-to-date physician, and the whisky and brandy bottle from the medicine chest of every family. (Dr. Matthew Woods, Philadelphia.)

BEER AS A MEDICINE.

The following statement was signed by thousands of the most eminent physicians, surgeons, and scientists of this country. Among them were such distinguished authorities as the president, vice president, and many members of the pharmacopœia convention, editors of medical journals, professors of 23 medical schools and colleges, physicians connected with the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, the Burke Foundation, the Mayo Foundation, the Life Extension Institute, and many other well-recognized authorities. The statement is as follows:

The undersigned physicians of the United States desire to place on record their conviction that the manufacture and sale of beer and other malt liquors for medicinal purposes should not be permitted. Malt liquors have never been listed in the United States Pharmacopœia as official medicinal remedies. They serve no medical purpose which can not be satisfactorily met in other ways, and that without the danger of cultivating the beverage use of an alcoholic liquor.

The executive committee of the National Association of Retail Druggists of the United States expressed their conviction that the manufacture and sale of beer and other malt liquors for medicinal purposes should be prohibited, as did several manufacturers of so-called near beer.

Mr. Oliver T. Remmers, attorney for Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co., formerly the largest manufacturer of beer in the world, in a statement recently made before the House Judiciary Committee said:

We deny that there is any emergency demand for beer for the sick. The cereal beverages manufactured by Anheuser-Busch, in strict compliance with the law, contain 20 per cent more of the soluble substances of the ingredients from which they are manufactured than the average good beer brewed in the United States. If beer is good for the sick, and we believe it is, our cereal beverages are better. And, moreover, we have been for 25 years manufacturing a malt tonic that contains approximately 15 per cent of malt solids, and it is ever so much better as a medicinal product than any beer that was ever manufactured. There is, therefore, no excuse for the sale of beer for medicinal purposes. If the patient needs alcohol, the physician can prescribe it. If he needs merely a tonic, he can get that without the alcohol. All this can be done and the dignity and sanctity of our law preserved.

OF

HON. AARON S. KREIDER,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, August 24, 1921.

Mr. KREIDER. Mr. Speaker, I suppose it is conceded that the enactment of a revenue law is the most vital problem with which this Congress has to deal. There is no other legislation in which the people of the country are so intensely interested as they are in the revenue bill which is now under consideration.

Federal taxes must be levied and collected totaling approximately $4,000,000,000 to meet the current governmental expenditures. When we remember that to this amount must be added the taxes levied by the various States and municipalities we find that the grand total will approximately double this amount. This gives us, as it were, a bird's-eye view of the taxes which the people must pay.

The problem before us, therefore, is how can this tax be levied so that the collection of it will not interfere with our economic and industrial structure and will result in the least possible discomfort and hardship to our people.

The bill under consideration is drawn with this purpose in view. In my judgment, the most important provision in the entire bill is the repeal of the transportation taxes. I do not believe that there is any tax levied which has had such a depressing effect upon industry as this particular tax. In addition to this, this bill repeals the tax on life insurance, on mutual fire insurance, and all of the so-called nuisance taxes, such as tax on soft drinks, ice cream, and so forth. It also repeals the excess-profits taxes on corporations, and increases the tax on corporations from 8 per cent to 12 per cent. It also reduces the surtax on individual incomes to a maximum of 32 per cent, and increases the exemption of all married persons having an income of $5,000 or less from $2,000 to $2,500, and increases the exemption from $200 to $400 for each child under 18 years of age.

The criticisms by the opponents of this bill are directed against the repeal of the excess-profits tax on corporations and the reduction of the surtax rates on large individual incomes, and then the charge is made repeatedly that this measure will not yield sufficient income to meet the Nation's requirements.

There is no question but our Democratic friends are closing their eyes to the actual facts and are yelling at the top of their voices for political purposes only that we are relieving the large corporations and the rich individuals from bearing their just share of the burden of taxation. They believe by so doing they are creating campaign material for use in the future; and it is true that they may be able to catch the votes of unthinking men and women who will believe their story; and they hope that in the future, as in the past, to be able to fool the voter. Now, as a matter of fact, it so happens that all of the responsible leaders of the Democratic Party under the Wilson administration are on record regarding the reduction of these taxes, but the need of campaign material is so pressing that the opinion of these leaders must be repudiated and the Democratic platform ignored.

We all know that both the Republican and Democratic platforms call for a revision of both the excess-profits tax and the lowering of the high surtaxes on incomes, and, to show you Democrats where your own party leaders stand on this proposition, I want to give you a few quotations. CARTER GLASS, Secretary of the Treasury in 1919, in his annual report on tax recommendations, made the following statement:

The upmost brackets of the surtax have already passed the point of productivity, and the only consequence of any further increase would be to drive possessors of these great incomes more and more to place their wealth in the billions of dollars of wholly tax-exempt securities heretofore issued and still being issued by States and municipalities, as well as those heretofore issued by the United States. This process not only destroys a source of revenue to the Federal Government but tends to withdraw the capital of very rich men from the development of new enterprises and place it at the disposal of State and municipal governments upon terms so easy to them—the cost of exemptions from taxation falling more heavily upon the Federal Government—as to stimulate wasteful and nonproductive expenditure by State and municipal governments.

Again, Secretary GLASS, in his report to Congress in 1919, said:

The Treasury's objections to the excess-profits tax, even as a war expedient, have been repeatedly voiced to the committees of the Congress. Still more objectionable is the operation of the excess-profits tax in peace times. It encourages wasteful expenditure, puts a premium on overcapitalization and a penalty on brains, energy, and enterprise, discourages new ventures, and confirms old ventures in their monopolies. In many instances it acts as a consumption tax, is added to the cost of production, upon which profits are figured in determining prices, and has been and will so long as it is maintained on the statute books continue to be a material factor in the increased cost of living.

This is the opinion of Hon. CARTER GLASS as expressed by himself when Secretary of the Treasury under the Wilson administration. He was succeeded by Secretary Houston. Let us see what he says on this subject. Secretary Houston in his annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, urged the repeal of the excess-profits tax in the following words:

The reason for the repeal of the excess-profits tax should be convincing even to those who on grounds of theory or general political philosophy are in favor of taxes of this nature. The tax does not attain in practice the theoretical end at which it aims. It discriminates against conservatively financed corporations and in favor of those whose capitalization is exaggerated; indeed, many overcapitalized corporations escape with unduly small contributions. It is exceedingly complex in its application and difficult of administration, despite the fact that it is limited to one class of business concerns—corporations. Moreover, it is rapidly losing its productivity. The invested capital of the average corporation earning profits high enough to subject it to the excess-profits tax is now estimated to be increasing at the approximate rate of 12 per cent per year, while the income of the average corporation is almost certainly declining at as great a rate. Both movements cut into the productivity of the tax.

Again, Secretary Houston addressed a letter to the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee on May 18, 1920—to which he refers in his annual report, 1920—saying:

As early as March of this year I pointed out in a letter to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means the necessity of a simplification of the tax system and the repeal of the excess-profits tax and a modification of the income supertaxes.

I do not see how Secretary Houston or Secretary GLASS could have expressed themselves more forcibly and clearly, nor can I see how this bill could have been written embodying their views more clearly than it does. Even President Wilson, in a speech delivered to this House on December 2, 1919, in which he referred especially to taxation, said:

The Congress might well consider whether the higher rates of income and profits taxes can in peace time be effectively productive of revenue, and whether they may not on the contrary be destructive of business activity and productive of waste and inefficiency. There is a point at which, in peace times, high rates of income and profits taxes discourage energy, remove the incentive to new enterprise, and encourage extravagant expenditures and produce industrial stagnation, with consequent unemployment and other attendant evils.

I am simply quoting these men for the purpose of showing where your party leaders stand on this proposition. They are in agreement with all thinking men. But you, in an effort to play peanut politics, in an effort to create campaign literature, with the hope that you can fool and mislead the unthinking voter, are repudiating that which is evident to all thinking men, regardless of their party affiliation, and I want to say here and now that the voters of the United States are not so easily fooled; they are beginning to think twice before they cast their votes, as is evidenced by the last election.

The real reason why this tax should be repealed is because it was the most unscientific and uneconomical tax ever written on the statute books of the Nation. This tax, perhaps legitimate in times of war, can not be defended as sound in times of peace. It penalizes thrift, industry, economy, and frugality, and favors indolence, extravagances, and industrial stupidity.

It violates every principle of economic production and thereby weakens the consuming power of the community.

It discourages expansion of established business and prevents the opening of new enterprises. No man or group of men will enter upon or engage in any industrial enterprise unless the probable net profits are in excess of the income on what are considered gilt-edge investments.

On the other hand, if we believe the testimony before the Finance Committee of the Senate, then the tax was not paid by the corporations, but was included in the price of the commodity; the manufacturer added the tax to the price of the article to the wholesaler, who paid it; the wholesaler added to the price of the article another tax to the one he already paid when he sold it to the retailer, and the retailer in turn, having paid the tax of the manufacturer and of the wholesaler, adds his own tax to the price of the article, and the consuming public pays the entire bill. If this be true, are you relieving the corporation or the consuming public by the repeal of this tax? There can be no mistake; all thinking people conversant with the actual facts demand the repeal of these taxes.

The other charge against this bill is that if we repeal these taxes the measure will not produce sufficient revenue for the requirements of the Government. I am not at all surprised that the Democrats on the floor of this House are making this assertion, and I admit that the ground is well taken if we do not take into consideration the fact that the administration is no longer in the hands of the Democratic Party; but bear in mind the fact that we had an election in November, 1920, and the further fact that those who have permitted reckless and criminal expenditures and a wicked waste of the people's money, who have mismanaged and dissipated the income of the Government, are no longer in office, but in their stead there have been placed in office men who have some regard for and an appreciation of the value of a dollar, men who have been able to manage their own financial affairs and who we know will be able to administer the affairs of the Nation on a business and economical basis. It may be refreshing to your minds if I call your attention to the appropriations demanded by Mr. Baker of the Sixty-sixth Congress, last session, when he came to this Congress demanding an appropriation of $690,000,000 for the Army. Congress, being Republican in both branches, refused to give it, but finally agreed upon an appropriation of $346,000,000. This bill was passed, but Mr. Wilson refused to sign it, because he said that the amount carried was too small.

On March 4, 1921, Mr. Harding became President and appointed Mr. Weeks Secretary of War; the Army appropriation bill having failed because of Mr. Wilson's veto, this same bill with minor changes but carrying an appropriation of $346,000,000—same amount as before—was passed and signed by President Harding. The result is that since the 4th of March Secretary Weeks has saved out of this appropriation the sum of $40,000,000, and I might state that notwithstanding the colossal and lavish appropriations heretofore made, Secretary Baker left as a legacy of his administration a deficiency amounting to $15,000,000. Secretary Weeks has overcome this deficiency which he inherited from his predecessor, Mr. Baker, and, in addition thereto, has saved from the appropriation, which was so small that the Democratic administration could not function, an additional $25,000,000, which is to-day in the Treasury of the United States.

I am mentioning these facts because I want the House to know and I want the country to know that the day of the squandering of the people's money has come to an end; at last we have a business man as the head of the War Department, a man who has some concern when it comes to spending money.

I might go on and continue to point out the savings that have been made and are being made and will be made in the future by all the departments of the Government in amounts varying from $100 to $1,000 to $100,000 to millions and even to the billions of dollars. So that, when we pass this measure and thereby take from the shoulders of the taxpayers of this country nearly $900,000,000, I want you to know, I want the people to know that this is only made possible because the administration of the affairs of the Nation is in the hands of men of sound judgment and administrative capacity and ability.

It is unfortunate that the provisions of this bill can not go into effect immediately, and the only reason why this is so is because the Democratic administration has bequeathed to us such heavy obligations of expenditures to which they have obligated the Government by signed contracts and otherwise, which, in spite of every effort at economy, can not be wholly overcome. This is the condition of affairs as we found them nearly three years subsequent to the signing of the armistice.

I do not want to go into many details, but in view of the fact that when I referred to the reckless waste I mentioned billions, I will only refer to two outstanding losses that run into the billions.

First, I shall refer, but not in detail, to the shipbuilding fiasco and farce. We know, and the country knows, that the people of the United States will lose on this one item over $3,000,000,000; some place it as high as $3,600,000,000. I shall not criticize the expenditures during the war, but I do most severely criticize the expenditures after the signing of the armistice, and the letting of contracts over two years after the signing of the armistice for the building of vessels which were declared to be a failure—known to be a failure; vessels of which there were hundreds and hundreds out of commission, and yet contracts were being entered into to build more and more of them. The concrete ships are an absolute failure; we all know it, and why more should have been contracted for, after the signing of the armistice, no man can explain. Three hundred and eighty-five wooden ships were built at a varying cost from $300,000 to $500,000 each, and we are now informed that 305 of them are being sold for $2,100 each. Can anything justify, or anybody imagine such reckless, criminal waste?

Take the railroad situation; there is no one who doubts the ability of the railroads to handle the products of the country better than they were handled during the Government control of the railroads, but the Wilson administration saw fit to take them over, I believe for political reasons only, and as a result of that action we have already appropriated, out of the Treasury of the United States, $2,600,000,000 in order to fulfill the contracts made by the Wilson administration and the railroads.

I realize that there is some discontent on the part of the public because the Congress is going slow in enacting this legislation, but let me remind you that it is far easier to destroy than it is to build a permanent structure in an intelligent manner upon a ruined foundation. It is better that we should move slowly, ascertain true conditions, and carry out an orderly program of legislation than to act in haste—especially is this true with the problem of tax reduction.

In other words, it was absolutely necessary to find out just what saving could be effected, what the overhang liabilities amounted to which we inherited from the former administration, before we could determine the revenue required and write a bill intelligently to meet these requirements. We believe, notwithstanding the assertions of you Democrats to the contrary, that this bill will produce the required revenue.

I have during this debate listened in vain for a reasonable or a reasoning argument against the various provisions of this bill. It is true it has been criticized, but without argument, the criticism abounding in reckless assertions without attempt to suggest a substitute for the betterment of the bill. The opposition to this bill has lacked every element of reasonableness, of statesmanship, and of logic; the only attempt, as stated before, was to make political capital, and by so doing they were compelled to completely abandon their former leadership in their own party.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is only the beginning of the revision of the taxes to relieve the burden of the people, and as you will note, it will decrease the taxes each year for the next three years, but it will remain for a later Congress to again and more fully revise the tax schedule. This revision should and will take place as soon as we shall have passed beyond the shadow of the war overhang and have entered upon a normal flow of national life and business.

In this measure we have relieved the burden only where it seemed most clearly of an emergency character, and relieved and lightened it for the benefit of every class and condition in the Nation. And, as stated in the beginning of these remarks, we have so framed this bill that it will produce the largest possible volume of revenue with the least possible discomfort and burden. It is drawn along sound, economic lines, and instead of driving private money into tax-exempt securities we believe this legislation will result in bringing at least a portion of these funds into the active commercial life of the Nation.

The bill is safe and sensible and will appeal to the sound judgment of the American people and should pass this House without a dissenting vote.

The Maternity Bill.

OF

HON. JAMES A. REED,

OF MISSOURI,

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,

Wednesday, June 29, Thursday, July 21, and Friday, July 22, 1921.

The Senate had under consideration Senate bill 1039, entitled "A bill for the public protection of maternity and infancy, and providing a method of cooperation between the Government of the United States and the several States."

Mr. REED. Mr. President, give a bill an attractive and appealing title, back it by a well-organized propaganda, abundantly financed, and an active lobby of persuasive ladies, who solicit and pledge votes, and the bill, whether good or bad, wise or foolish, is almost certain to pass.

The proponents of this measure have named it "the child welfare bill." Everybody wants babies and mothers to be happy. Accordingly, the mere title of the bill inclines everybody to be for it. But, sir, it is not enough that the title of the bill shall be alluring or that its alleged purpose shall be good. It remains for Congress to ascertain whether the measure will produce good or bad results and whether the acts contemplated lie within congressional jurisdiction.

Notwithstanding all the votes pledged, the influence of an active lobby, and the false propaganda disseminated country-wide and at Government expense, I intend to analyze this bill and to give frankly the reasons for my opposition.

The ambitious character of the scheme, the vast number of people its proponents hope to employ, is indicated by the fact that the bill as introduced called for an annual appropriation of $4,000,000. That demand being too much for the stomach of the Committee on Education and Labor, the bill as reported cuts the appropriation to $1,480,000 for the present year. One million dollars of the above amount is to be divided among the States in proportion to their population. Similar appropriations for each succeeding year are contemplated. It is certain much larger sums will be demanded. There is no limit within the bounds of the appropriation to the number of people who may be employed, the salaries which may be paid, or upon the money which may be expended in literature, propaganda, and traveling about the country. The entire control is placed in the Children's Bureau. It can do with the taxpayers' money almost anything it may desire. The States can get no money unless they expend the funds in accordance with the demands of the bureau, however fantastic, foolish, or dangerous the demands may be.

I have stated that the above-mentioned vast powers are vested in the Children's Bureau. But the chief of the bureau is in fact supreme. It is true that a dignified advisory committee is named in the bill, but the chief is nowhere compelled to accept its advice or that of anyone.

Mr. LODGE. In other words, unlike all other bureaus and commissions under the Government that I know of, the head of this bureau is in absolute and final control.

Mr. REED. I so understand the bill.

Mr. LODGE. Not even subject to the orders of the President of the United States, as far as this bill goes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Good Roads Bureau has similar authority.

Mr. REED. O Mr. President, that kind of argument is becoming quite familiar. When a piece of blundering or vicious legislation is exposed, the common defense is for one of its advocates to arise and declare that Congress has passed other unjustifiable bills. Having delivered that telling blow, he sits down in the serene confidence that his antagonist is vanquished. He has, however, only succeeded in proving that Congress has been guilty of prior blunders, which instead of inviting should warn against repetition. The commission of a vicious act can not be justified by the citation of a vicious precedent. Contemplate, if you please, the spectacle of a horse thief standing at the bar and pleading in defense that he had only followed an ancient precedent established by the horse thieves of the past. [Laughter.]

Returning to my theme—as these immense powers are conferred upon the chief and exercised through her associates in the bureau and her chosen assistants, the question of personality becomes important. Accordingly I give the names: Miss Julia Lathrop, chief; Mrs. Helen S. Woodbury, Miss Blanche Steele, Miss Emma Lundberg, Miss Catherine Lenroot, Miss Dr. Anna Ruhl, Miss E. N. Matthews, Miss Flora Seibert, Miss Mary Buckford. Observe that the entire bureau is composed of unmarried women, except Mrs. Helen Woodbury and her husband, who both hold jobs in the same department.

It seems to be the established doctrine of this bureau that the only people capable of caring for babies and mothers of babies are ladies who have never had babies. [Laughter.] This is further indicated by the list of field workers employed. The book "Maternity Care and the Welfare of Young Children in a Homesteading County in Montana" is prepared by Miss Dr. Grace L. Meigs, Miss Viola I. Paradise, Miss Helen M. Dart, Miss M. Letitia Fyffe, Miss Dorothy M. Williams, Miss Janet M. Geister, Miss Stella E. Packard, Miss May R. Lane, and Miss Etta F. Philbrook. The book "Infant Mortality" is credited to Miss Nila F. Allen, Miss Melissa Farrell, Miss Roberta King, Miss Elizabeth Moore, Miss Jessie Riall, Miss Mary Van Zile, and Miss Rena Rosenberg. The book "Rural Children in North Carolina" is by Dr. Frances Sage Bradley (presumably a miss) and Miss Margaretta A. Williamson. "Maternal Mortality" is the work of Miss Dr. Meigs, Miss Emma Duke, and Miss Viola Paradise. The book "Infant Welfare Work in Europe" is attributed to Miss Nettie McGill, Mrs. Frances Hawes, and Miss Anna Kalet. All the medical doctors who have been concerned in the preparation of literature or the work of the bureau are women and are, I believe, with one exception unmarried.

At the very threshold, therefore, we are confronted by the remarkable and amusing fact that we are asked to turn over questions of infant bearing and infant care to an aggregation composed almost exclusively of spinsters. It is enough to arouse "the laughter of the gods."

Not for a moment would I be understood as reflecting in any respect upon the good intentions of the ladies whom I have mentioned. Neither do I criticize in the slightest degree any woman because she happens to be unmarried. The state of single blessedness arises from many causes. Every woman has the full right to determine for herself whether she will enter the married state. For this decision she is obliged to give no reason. She may be unwilling to unite her fortunes with any man. She may never have come in contact with a man fulfilling her ideals. Possibly she exhibits superior taste by remaining single. She may not choose to endure the dangers and agonies of child bearing or the cares and anxieties of child rearing. Candor compels the admission that many of the finest women of the world live and die without entering the married state. The settlement of the question is the business of the woman. Because of her decision she should neither be made the subject of criticism nor the object of ridicule.

But, Mr. President, when we employ female celibates to instruct mothers how to raise babies they have brought into the earth, do we not indulge in a rare bit of irony? I repeat I cast no reflection on unmarried ladies. Perhaps some of them are too good to have husbands. But any woman who is too refined to have a husband should not undertake the care of another woman's baby when that other woman wants to take care of it herself.

A wise man places all important tasks in experienced hands. He does not engage as a civil engineer a man who has never seen a level; as a doctor, a person unacquainted with anatomy; or as an instructor in music, an individual ignorant of its notes. Is it not the height of unwisdom to delegate the solution of problems of child bearing and child care to a woman who has not had the experience of motherhood, and very possibly does not so desire, or to a bachelor girl who never beheld in a baby's eyes the mirrored vision of a mother's tender love, nor watched the loving dimples in a baby's cheek gather to welcome a mother's rapturous kiss?

What I have said and shall say I mean to apply to the members of the Children's Bureau, including its servants, agents, and employees, substantially all of whom enjoy the blissful and seemingly perpetual state of single blessedness.

I care not how estimable the officeholding spinster may be, nor how her heart may throb for the dream children she does not possess, her yearnings can not be substituted for a mother's experience. Official meddling can not take the place of mother love. Mother love! The golden cord that stretches from the throne of God, uniting all animate creation to divinity. Its light gleams down the path of time from barbarous ages, when savage women held their babes to almost famished breasts and died that they might live. Its holy flame glows as bright in hovels where poverty breaks a meager crust as in palaces where wealth holds Lucullian feasts. It is the one great universal passion—the sinless passion of sacrifice. Incomparable in its sublimity, interference is sacrilege, regulation is mockery.

The wild beasts hear its voice and answer to its call. A tigress finding her cubs slaughtered, pauses to lick their wounds, and then with raging heart seeks out their murderer. A she wolf standing at the mouth of her den, with gleaming fangs and blood-red tongue, dies in defense of her whelps. Tiger's cub or wolf's whelp, I would rather feel the rough caresses of the hairy paws of my savage mother, I would rather have her care and protection than that of an official animal trainer.

I once saw a little timorous mother quail, with marvelous intelligence and still more marvelous courage, protect her brood by exposing herself to the hunter's deadly aim. I then realized that nothing could take the place of mother love.

If its divine fire so warms and thrills the heart of beast and bird, with what intensity does it consume the bosom, with what ecstacy inspire the soul of a woman, for the child of her body. Although she knows that she must risk her own to bring forth a new life, she does not draw back. Her love-lit eyes behold only visions of happiness, of glory, and of power to be realized by her unborn child. With smiling lips and eager heart she enters the vale of shadows. The first cry of the newborn falls on her ear, sweet as the music of paradise. Her trembling hands caress the tender skin; her soul cries out the anxious question "Will my baby live?" The torturing days of convalescence fly swiftly upon wings of hope. She nestles the tiny, helpless thing to her bosom; sustains it with the milk of her body, every drop drawn from a fountain of infinite love.

With indescribable solicitude she watches over her offspring. Even when her body slumbers her soul keeps vigil and her hands in unison with her spirit will stretch forth to soothe the baby back to sleep. With glowing pride she watches the growing child, shields it from harm, guides it along the paths of rectitude, inspires its soul with lofty sentiments of honor and of faith in the eternal God.

When time has piled the snows upon her head and turned her brown or raven locks to white, her love will still abide, riper and sweeter with the passing years. Though she may live until her children are themselves grown old and gray, she yet will see the silken locks of youth; their roughened hands yet have the caressing touch of baby fingers; their voices bear to her the tender and melodious notes of industry. And when at last she approaches the portals of death there is no solace so sweet as the presence of those she bore "to people and replenish the earth."

For mother love there is no substitute, even though it bear an official stamp. If there be truth in religion, then this holy sentiment was planted in woman's heart by the hand of God. It has made life possible. It is in truth the very source of life itself. When all other passions are dead it survives. It will pass through the fiery furnaces of disgrace and yet live. It will endure the scorching breath of contumely with unwavering fidelity.

A mother will enter prisons of shame and kiss a felon hand thrust through the bars. She will sit beside the accused in courts of law, when the mob jeers and the heartless machinery of justice grinds its grist of agony, and with unwavering faith maintain her child is innocent. She will stand at the foot of the scaffold and, when the trap has fallen, cover the condemned body with kisses and with flowers. It is still to her the innocent suckling she once hugged to her breast.

But if the path of life has led her son to fields of honor, her heart will glow with pride, ineffable, unspeakable. If he is called to war, she will bid him good-by with dry eyes, although her heart be filled with tears. She will maintain a firm and hopeful mien, that he may gain sublimer courage from her sublime example. When he sleeps upon the tented field her spirit will keep watch. Whilst he is slumbering she will pray. In the agony of waiting she will die a thousand deaths, but will choke back her sobs and hide her torture. She will search for him amongst the slain, and try with kisses to warm the dead and unresponsive lips to life. She will coffin her heart with the beloved body, and her soul will keep the eternal vigil of a deathless love.

Mother love! It has produced, fondled, reared, inspired, and glorified all of the shadowy hosts who have passed across the "bank of time" since man first raised his eyes toward the heavens. It is, I say again, the golden cord that binds the earth to God. Official interference between the mother and her babe is tyrannical and criminal.

Mr. President, I invite attention to the terms of this bill, the purpose of its authors, and the sources of its inspiration.

First, the fundamental doctrines on which the bill is founded were drawn chiefly from the radical, socialistic, and bolshevistic philosophy of Germany and Russia. That proposition I shall sustain by the literature published by the Children's Bureau.

Second, the bill is intended to be an entering wedge for more radical measures among which are:

(a) The forced registration of pregnancy; (b) governmental prenatal examination of expectant mothers; (c) interference with the right of a woman to secure the services of a midwife or physician of her own selection. This I shall prove by the statements of the advocates of the pending legislation.

Third. The bill is calculated to (a) send governmental agents into the homes of the people to interfere in the most private and sacred relations of life; (b) it contemplates the inspection of the mother before childbirth and the intermeddling by officials in the care a mother may give her offspring.

It is therefore contrary to the fundamental principles of English law as they have existed for a thousand years. That such is the purpose of the bill I shall show from its terms and by the publications of the Children's Bureau. I proceed to the demonstration of the foregoing propositions.

Mr. President, the storm-flooded river breaks its banks, sweeps away dike and revetment, gathers the reek of earth, seizes the decaying carcasses of animals, tears from the tomb of the ages skeletons or forgotten monsters, and tosses all upon the surface of its maddened waters. Likewise the tempest of war disturbs the intellectual world, unsettles old methods of thought, destroys the ancient anchorages, and brings to the fore every impractical scheme and wild experiment conceivable by the war-fevered brain. Having just emerged from the greatest war, we must expect to find in its lap a motley litter of abnormal and deformed ideas.

This is, therefore, the great day of opportunity for the modern reformer, who conceives that progress consists in the destruction of all that is old and the substitution of something new, however bizarre, twisted, foolish, or dangerous it may be. They find many historic examples. Witness the French Revolution. Religion and law were abolished. The Christian calendar was set aside, the names of the week changed, property rights denied, courts of justice closed, entire classes indiscriminately condemned to banishment and death. It was the paradise of theorists, the Nirvana of dreamers. But the scaffolds were red and the gutters were clogged with blood.

Similarly, but in a lesser degree, all countries pass through periods of dangerous unrest succeeding a great war. Ours is no exception.

One of the worst products of the late war was the idea that the State should take charge of the individual citizen. That noxious plan reached its highest degree in Russia. It was asserted there that every child was the ward of the government; that parents were incapable of rearing their children, according to the high notions of the reformers; that motherhood and birth control should be established by law and the child taken from its mother's care and turned over to public officers. On top of all that the State was to take charge of the mother and pension her, so that, being the supporter of the mother, it could assert the right to dictate her course of conduct.

The Russian plan represents the frenzied extreme, but it does not stand alone. It is allied with, if not the legitimate outgrowth of, various radical schemes inaugurated in different European countries, notably Germany, where socialistic doctrinaires have long insisted upon the establishment of maternity benefit systems. These and many other regulations have been adopted in Germany and in other parts of Europe. In some countries subsidies are granted directly by the State to mothers, in others resort is had to schemes of insurance. Frequently the insurance is made compulsory. All of such plans involves the assumption by the State of the authority to interfere in the family relations. They imply the right of State visitation and espionage. Such doctrines are not to be tolerated in a free country.

I undertake now to show that the scheme of this bill is drawn from these European sources, and that the European idea has been promulgated and substantially indorsed by the head of the bureau, who is to enforce the provisions of this bill.

The bureau has printed at Government expense an enormous number of books and documents, to which I shall later call particular attention. For the moment I direct your minds to one of these books, entitled "Maternity Benefit Systems in Certain Foreign Countries," by Henry J. Harris, United States Department of Labor, Children's Bureau.

The book exploits various schemes adopted in European countries, including Russia. The introduction by Mr. Harris is in fact an artfully contrived argument in justification of these systems, extending them to the United States and in making them compulsory. It is not necessary to quote what Mr. Harris says, because almost his exact language is reproduced and specifically indorsed by Miss Julia Lathrop, the head of the Children's Bureau, who is to administer the present bill. She states in her letter of transmittal, page 9:

Maternity systems are not an experiment. * * * Germany, Austria, and Hungary early established such systems, and Denmark, Norway, Rumania, Russia, Serbia, Sweden, and Switzerland have also provided maternity benefits. * * * They vary from systems under which every woman, regardless of her financial status, receives a fixed sum on the birth of a child to systems of voluntary insurance. * * * No such system, once undertaken, has ever been abandoned. Instead the tendency of changes in existing legislation has always been toward including larger and larger groups of the population, toward increased benefits, and toward the compulsory as contrasted with the voluntary principle of insurance. * * *

Dr. Harris, who was especially qualified for the task by his wide knowledge of European wage legislation, was asked to summarize (European legislation) in the hope that the information might prove useful to the people of one of the few great countries which as yet has no system of State or national assistance in maternity—the United States.

Observe the language:

No such system, once undertaken, has ever been abandoned.

That, of course, includes Russia and the Russian system. The other language I have quoted is, in fact, an indorsement of these European systems. The book was sent out—I quote—

In the hope that the information may prove useful to the people of * * * the United States.

It is particularly to be noticed both Dr. Harris in his book and Miss Lathrop in her letter of transmittal not only substantially indorse the European systems but approve the trend toward making them compulsory. No fair man can read this literature without understanding from it that the head of the Children's Bureau believes that it is the right of the State to assume charge of women before, during, and after confinement and of the baby as soon as born, and to employ whatever force is necessary. In propagation of that doctrine this book is distributed for the instruction of the American people, one of its illuminating chapters being a dissertation upon the Russian system.

Mr. KENYON. Does the Senator mean that what he has read is Miss Lathrop's comment?

Mr. REED. Yes; Julia C. Lathrop.

Mr. KENYON. I merely wanted to be clear about that.

Mr. REED. I have just read from the letter of transmittal written by Miss Lathrop. For the benefit of the Senator I will read it again:

No such system, once undertaken, has ever been abandoned. Instead, the tendency of changes in existing legislation has always been toward including larger and larger groups of the population, toward increased benefits, and toward the compulsory as contrasted with the voluntary principle of insurance.

Meanwhile a considerable body of experience has accumulated as to methods of administration, cost, and other details of operation of the different systems. This experience Dr. Harris, who was especially qualified from the past by his wide knowledge of the European labor legislation, was asked to summarize, in the hope that the information might prove useful to the people of one of the few great countries which as yet has no system of State or National assistance in maternity—the United States.

Respectfully submitted.

JULIA C. LATHROP, Chief.

Hon. W. R. WILSON,
Secretary of Labor.

That, sir, is an unqualified indorsement of the maternity benefits and birth regulation systems of Europe. It can not be fairly construed otherwise. The book is printed at the expense of the Government of the United States in order that the benefit of this knowledge may be distributed to the benighted denizens of our land.

Let us examine the book sent out with that indorsement—I can not consume time to read it all.

Among other things it sets out a digest of the laws of the different countries that have adopted socialistic schemes from which this bill is modeled.

I call attention to this statement on page 175 of the book I have just quoted, under the heading "Russia":

The most comprehensive study on maternity benefits and insurance which has yet appeared in any language is the volume by Mme. A. Kollontai, Obshchestoo i Materinstvo. I. Gosudarstvennoe Strakhovanie Materinstva.

Who is this Mme. Kollontai whose book is so highly recommended by the Children's Bureau? According to the United States Committee on Public Information, for the reliability of whose publications I do not assume responsibility, Mme. Kollontai was one of the Russian conspirators who were in league with Germany against the Allies. It may be stated as a fact that she was concerned in the Russian peace propaganda and revolution a month before Lenin arrived in that country. She is the associate and compatriot of Lenin and the Russian bolsheviki. She was the head of the Russian "Maternity System" when the revolution broke and was afterwards made the Commissaire of Public Welfare.

Prof. Boris Sokoloff, a leading member of the socialist party, a revolutionist and one of the members of the first All Russian Constituent Assembly, writing in the Volia Russii, February 16, 1921, states:

I am prepared to forgive the bolsheviki many things, almost everything; but one thing there is which I can not and will not forgive them, namely, those experiments, positively criminal and worthy of the most savage tribes of the African jungle, which the bolsheviki have been making all this time with our young generation, with our children! This crime knows no parallel in the history of the world. They have destroyed morally as well as physically a whole Russian generation.

Proceeding, Prof. Sokoloff quotes the official journal of the Commissariat of Public Education, No. 4, as containing the following statement by the bolshevist commissary, Lelina:

We must nationalize the children. We must remove the children from the pernicious influence of the family. We must register the children; or—let us speak plainly—we must nationalize them. Thus they will from the very start remain under the beneficial influence of communist kindergartens and schools. Here they will grow up to be real communists. To compel the mother to surrender her child to us, to the soviet State, that is the practical task before us.

The pending bill is a sort of varioloid reproduction of the socialistic-bolshevistic epidemic which has cursed Europe during recent years. The poisonous virus was brought to the United States and the public mind cunningly inoculated by various enthusiasts and social emotionalists.

In illustration I quote Miss Alice Paul:

We intend to insist also that the State assume entire responsibility for the maintenance and education of children until they become of age. When the women of the world have junked the battleships and other impedimenta of war, enough money will be released to take care of these reforms. (See p. 7, Washington Herald, Oct. 25, 1920.)

There are others of these female reformers—and I speak of them kindly—driving in the same direction. Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch declares that—

Every woman, whether the wife of a millionaire or a day laborer, will, in the world builded by women, be made to feel that society honors motherhood sufficiently to raise it above all sordid considerations. (Washington Times, Oct. 13, 1920, p. 6.)

Miss Helen Todd, former chief campaign speaker for the New York Suffrage Association, and later chairman of New York's greatest "birth control" meeting—for be it known some of these protagonists advocate "birth control"—had this to say:

Place the mothers on the Government pay roll and pay them the money which would otherwise be spent in preparing for war. * * * Every mother, rich or poor, should receive Government endowment.

"Endowment of Motherhood" by an English committee, of which Kathleen D. Courtney, former secretary of the British National Union of the Women's Suffrage Societies, is chairman, contains this illuminating remark:

Of course, the sums are inadequate even under English standards. But if mothers are going to get on the pay roll of society at all they will have to be willing to begin at the bottom. * * *

In the event of wage disputes the workers will know that a large number of their dependents are secure and that the call on strike funds will be less. * * *

Family endowment would be of immense advantage in the struggle for higher wages. * * *

To those who are looking to the socialization of industry in one form or another, we would point out that a scheme such as the one advocated here will be found essential.

What was that scheme? The support of mothers. Why was it advocated? It was an advance of socialism. What is the scheme of the pending bill? The support of mothers during maternity, if the maiden lady who is in charge of mothers sees fit to support them. It embraces the dissemination of knowledge and the hiring of midwives and doctors if the said maiden lady sees fit to take that course.

This book, "The Endowment of Motherhood," from which I have been quoting, is reviewed under the title of "Wages for mothers" in the November, 1920, Suffragist, and advertised in display on the back cover of "The Birth Control Review" for February, 1921, under "Books on sex, feminism, birth control, and kindred subjects," by the New York Woman's Publishing Co. (Inc.).

In seeking to determine the purposes of the Children's Bureau I think it is only fair to consider the entire field of its activities and the complete propaganda sent out by it.

Among other things, the bureau called a meeting in June, 1919, to develop plans for carrying on its work. It selected and brought together people of its own choice, whose advice it undoubtedly regarded as desirable, and it printed the entire proceedings of the meeting, including the speeches and papers of the delegates, and scattered them broadcast to be read by the American people. If the bureau regarded the ideas of these men as unsound and inimical to the public welfare, it certainly should not have given them publicity. Government moneys ought never to be expended in the promulgation of unsound doctrines. The doctrines, however, are substantially indorsed in these words:

Herewith are submitted the proceedings of a conference on child-welfare standards, recently held under the auspices of the Children's Bureau. * * *

It was felt that the presence at the conference of guests who were engaged in the practical protection of children under war conditions in allied countries would be an invaluable stimulus to this country. * * *

Then follows a list of the invited guests, which includes such notables as Dr. Radmila Milochevitch Lazarevitch, from Serbia; Mr. Takayuki Namaye, of Japan; Mr. Isador Maus, of Belgium; Miss L. E. Carter, principal of high schools of Brussels; and Dr. Rene Sand.

The conference was not content with holding its meetings in Washington, but laid out an itinerary and held meetings in eight or nine other cities. Of course, the expense of these meetings was paid for out of Government funds.

The bureau's introduction to the book contains this language:

Naturally somewhat varying views of method and approach are presented by the different authorities whose contributions make up this volume. On the great essentials of a child-welfare policy for the Nation there is, however, marked agreement. Public responsibility for the growing generation, confidence in constructive measures, insistence upon greater uniformity in laws, and upon the necessity of enlisting able and devoted citizens to carry on both public and private child-welfare activities, are all steadily emphasized. At the end of the Washington conference the tentative child-welfare standards which appear in this book were agreed upon.

As a matter of fact, they are promulgated as minimum demands.

Consider, now, the sort of doctrine advocated in the speeches of the delegates published and circulated by the Children's Bureau at Government expense.

At page 11 of the book, "Standards of Child Welfare," appears this statement:

The Children's Bureau conferences reported in this volume represent perhaps the most conspicuous single attempt yet made to state what contemporary civilization has learned concerning the welfare of childhood. The presidential sanction under which these conferences were summoned called for the statement of "certain irreducible minimum standards for the health, education, and work of the American child." That required common counsel of those in the United States and in other countries—

And so forth.

A wide section of the earth was naturally culled for advice. Guests came from Great Britain, Canada, France, Belgium, Italy, Serbia, and Japan to the conferences.

Think of importing a Jap to tell an American mother how to take care of her baby!

A considerable number of Americans distinguished in their various fields were invited to participate.

Among those thus invited, Dr. J. Whitridge Williams is given honorable mention in the introduction. I quote:

Dr. J. Whitridge Williams, of Johns Hopkins University, proposed "certain standard requirements for obstetrical care in order to render as safe as possible both mother and child." * * *

The distinction accorded the doctor makes his views of great importance, because the bureau evidently indorsed his paper or particular mention would not have been made of its author.

Here is one of his recommendations, on page 146.

Mr. KENYON. What is the volume? I am trying to follow the Senator. Will the Senator give me the title of the volume?

Mr. REED. It is "Standards of Child Welfare. A Report of the Children's Bureau Conferences, May and June, 1919."

This gentleman states:

I take it that the first step in such a campaign of education for the improvement of obstetrical conditions must consist in the compulsory registration of pregnancy through the local health officer. In this event it will be possible for every pregnant woman throughout the entire country to be supplied gratis with certain of the publications of the Children's Bureau, and thereby, if able to read, to be convinced of the importance of insisting upon adequate care.

Mr. President, until recently the subject would have been too delicate to mention in the presence of ladies in the galleries, but under the leadership of modern radicals we have progressed to such intellectual heights that almost any question, including eugenics, may be debated before mixed audiences, even though girls of tender years are present. I sometimes wonder whether the teachings of our mothers are to be abandoned and the cheek of the maiden of the future never crimson with the blush that proclaims innocence. I hope it shall never be so. Under existing circumstances I make bold to discuss as diplomatically as possible the proposition advanced by this doctor reformer. It is that the most refined woman—who, if permitted to follow her natural impulses, would upon discovering she is about to become a mother, the crimson tide of modesty mounting from neck to cheek and from cheek to brow, with trembling lips, whisper the news in her husband's ear—shall be compelled to register her delicate condition with a public official and proclaim it to the world. The plan bears a very distinct resemblance to the registration of pedigreed dogs. The author of this delectable scheme, I repeat, is singled out for special mention in the book which publishes in full his heartless harangue.

I read further from the general summary of the convention, put forth by the Children's Bureau. It is stated:

The logic of the evidence adduced seemed to indicate that a very large ratio of the families of the United States obtain incomes too small to make possible the rearing of children in the manner which scientific and humane considerations, as well as the prosperity of the Nation, demand.

So, if this scheme is put into effect, the Government must apply it to the majority of the people in the United States, take charge of a majority of the mothers both before and after childbirth and also take charge of the rearing of the majority of all the infants.

Mr. KENYON. Is that an extract from another speech or from the same speech?

Mr. REED. No; this is the introduction.

Mr. KENYON. The introduction by whom?

Mr. REED. The introduction to this book.

Mr. KENYON. By whom?

Mr. REED. The general summary is by William L. Chenery. Miss Julia Lathrop writes the letter of transmittal. Does anybody claim that that is not an indorsement? How can it be so claimed? What is this book printed and distributed for except to impress these doctrines upon the people of the country?

Permit me to read an excerpt from the Children's Bureau publication, "Standards of Child Welfare," page 43. It is insisted that there be established—

A minimum below which no income can go, no family maintenance be put, * * * the giving to all of the opportunity to remain on or above that level, * * * thus enabling the mother to specialize in the exercise of the maternal function.

The fixation of an economic level and the maintenance of all the people on or above that level necessarily involves the control of the business affairs and individual life of the citizen.

That was the very doctrine taught by Karl Marx, Friederick Engels, and all the leading socialists of Europe. It is the quintessence of socialism. As we proceed in the examination of this document we find that the identical phraseology of socialism is constantly employed. On page 31 Dr. Royal Meeker refers to the "economic interpretation of history." The phrase and the socialistic doctrine it expresses were coined by Karl Marx, the father of German socialism.

Mr. McCORMICK. He is the same Royal Meeker who is the American representative on the League of Nations staff, is he not?

Mr. FERNALD. Yes; he is.

Mr. KING. He is.

Mr. REED. Of the present League of Nations?

Mr. McCORMICK. The late League of Nations. [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. Proceeding in his discussion of "the economic interpretation of history," Dr. Meeker says:

Whether we discuss babies, baseball, bolshevism, or the binomial theory, we finally come up against the fundamental philosophy of life—the meaning of creation. What is it all about? Many economic discussions deal with babies chiefly as potential labor power. * * * I take it that the Children's Bureau has been established for a purpose quite similar to that which brought about the establishment of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry. * * *

I shall read no more of that rot. The man who can watch the laughter-loving dimples in a baby's cheek and behold the light of an immortal soul shining from its eyes and thereafter regard the child as a mere factor of "potential labor power" or consider its physical care and spiritual guidance as akin to feeding live stock for the market is not fit to advise mothers or to have the custody of either babes or beasts.

On page 45 Miss Florence Nesbitt emits this choice bit of communism:

The cost of living must come down or there must be a nationalization of financial responsibility which will relieve the individual family of a portion of the cost which they must now bear or wages must rise to cover the cost of living.

At the conclusion of its deliberations the convention published its minimum demands. Bear in mind these were minimum demands. The very employment of the term indicates that they are but the beginning. The demands are so long that I can only quote a few samples.

It is demanded that there be established—

Maternity or prenatal centers sufficient to provide for all cases not receiving prenatal supervision from private physicians. * * *

The application of the Wasserman (syphilis) test when indicated.

Rules are to be laid down specifying how long women shall remain in bed after confinement.

Medical supervision is to be established over infants and children not under the care of private physicians.

At least once a month mothers are to be instructed how to feed and care for their babies; this is to be continued until the child is old enough to attend school. The instruction includes nutrition clinics. * * *

There are to be employed a sufficient number of public-health service nurses to do home visiting and to give instructions to expectant mothers in the hygiene of pregnancy and early infancy and to make visits and care for patients in puerperium and to see that the infant is referred to a welfare center.

There are many other things embraced in this scheme, but it is not complete without attention being again called to the fact that at the convention the compulsory registration of pregnant women was openly advocated without opposition or rebuke. Indeed, as I shall show, it is a necessary prerequisite to the inauguration and prosecution of the plan.

The program outlined in these minimum requirements embraces an organization coextensive with the country. To be effective it must reach into every community and into every home where lives a pregnant woman, a baby, or a child.

Forced registration of pregnancy is not included in the program of "minimum requirements." But it must be remembered that the minimum requirements are but the beginning, and that the Children's Bureau has printed the speech to which I have referred, in which forced registration is advocated. Indeed, it is a necessary prerequisite in determining what homes must be visited.

The scheme as outlined clearly embraces the inspection of the home, the watching of mothers during pregnancy, the inspection of their foods, the physical examination of the mothers, and where suspicion is aroused the application of the Wasserman test for syphilis. It involves the regulation of the time the mother shall remain in bed, inquiry into the character of the family physician or the midwife, the feeding of babies and children, instruction of the mother in nutrition clinics, and the hygiene of pregnancy. In short, it involves an interference by the State in all the conditions of all the homes where an expectant mother may live. It makes public all that heretofore has been covered with the cloak of privacy.

I insist that the proponents of the bill contemplate the invasion of the home and intend to interfere in social and family conditions. I read from a pamphlet.

Mr. KENYON. From what is the Senator reading?

Mr. REED. I am reading from a pamphlet entitled "Income and Infant Mortality."

Mr. KENYON. Is it one of the bureau's pamphlets?

Mr. REED. Oh, it is written by Miss Lathrop herself.

Mr. KENYON. What is the number of it?

Mr. REED. It has not a number on it. It is a reprint from the American Journal of Public Health:

None of the studies made by the bureau attempt to approach infant mortality as a medical question. They are concerned with the economic, social, civic, and family conditions surrounding young babies.

Does that not indicate that they intend to interfere in the home; that they contemplate a supervision of the domestic affairs of people? The lady proceeds to tell what has been done:

The surroundings of each child were traced through his first year of life, or such shorter period as he survived, by women agents of the bureau who called upon each mother and obtained the information through direct personal interviews. * * *

While it was plainly necessary to accept the mother's statement with reference to matters directly pertaining to the daily life of the baby, it was thought that she might not always know about her husband's earnings and that other sources of information might be more important. * * * Pay rolls were consulted, and employers and the fathers themselves were interviewed.

So that already, without any special authority, these Federal officeholders assume to demand from a woman how much her husband earns. Not content with that, they go snooping through the pay rolls of his employers. They unhesitatingly thrust themselves into the private business of the citizen! To give authority to anybody to say that he is a Federal officeholder is becoming very dangerous. This recent experience has shown. Daily and hourly petty Federal officers, in utter disregard of the common and statutory law of the land, without warrant, in defiance of one of the most precious rights secured in the Constitution, have invaded the homes of citizens, and by sheer brute force proceeded to search and seize. This they have done and are doing notwithstanding the express prohibition of the Constitution.

I assert, if this bill is passed, the abuse of the powers it creates will begin with its enactment. In proof of the fact that homes have already been invaded by the representatives, I call attention to the testimony of Mrs. A. M. McManamy, of Oregon, given before the Committee on Education and Labor. I shall read from it briefly. She said:

This bill tends to vitiate the ability to think and act independently. It invades the home. I declare that it does invade the home. It is just a short time ago that I visited a niece of mine who has a 4-months-old baby. In the morning, when we were giving the baby its bath, a lady came to the door, and I went to the door. The woman stood there, and of course I waited for her to state her business. She said that she was a visiting nurse. I said, "I do not believe that we need you." She said, "Well, but I must come in. You have got a baby here?" I said, "Yes; but he is a perfectly well, healthy baby." She said, "But I must get in and see the baby." I said, "But the baby is having its bath at the present time." She said, "Well, but I must come in and see the baby, and see that it is perfectly healthy, and I must be admitted," and with that she pushed past me and went into the bathroom and went where the baby was against the wishes of the baby's mother and my own wishes. There is a sample of what it will be if this thing goes on. I don't know that they would have the nerve to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. They would not do it under this law.

Mrs. MCMANAMY. They did it under another law. There is some sort of a law at least that they were working under in order to get a record of all the babies. Now, if this one woman did that without any authority, what will they do when they have authority? And especially what will they do when they are given authority by the United States?

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I have already called attention to the invasion of the home. In further evidence that such is the ultimate purpose, I quote from Standards of Child Welfare, page 148:

It appears to me that progress in this regard can be made only along three lines: (a) * * * Women and their husbands are to be taught that it is their right and their duty to demand from the State reasonable care during pregnancy and at the time of labor; (b) by the institution of State aid and by national subventions, partly for educational purposes, but particularly for the carrying out of such minimal standards as seem essential; (c) by legislation requiring the local health officers in localities in which midwives are generally employed, or in the open country, where they represent the most available source of assistance, to assume charge of the situation and to lay down certain regulations which the midwives must be compelled to follow.

"To assume charge of the situation" is the language employed. Now, notice what follows:

I take it that the first step in such a campaign of education for the improvement of obstetrical conditions must consist in the compulsory registration of pregnancy through the local health officer. * * * Furthermore, it should be the duty of the local health officer to see that the women who register should promptly arrange for suitable care during pregnancy and at the time of labor.

How is he to see to it unless he has the authority to compel it?

If a physician were engaged the health officer's responsibility would end. * * *

Why? Why should he not inquire whether the physician is competent? Why should not he inquire whether the physician practices in accordance with the code of the Spinsters' Bureau?

I read:

If a physician were engaged the health officer's responsibility would end, but if the patient is to be cared for by a midwife, it would be his duty, or that of a paid substitute acting for him, to see that certain examinations and requirements were carried out.

In other words, if a woman prefers to hire a midwife, it will be the duty of the health officer, according to the ideas of this gentleman—and his ideas are promulgated by this bureau—to demand that the woman submit to a physical examination and to "see to it;" that is, force her to comply with regulations by him prescribed.

I continue reading:

Thus I believe that it should be stipulated that midwives could attend only such patients as offer every prospect of having a normal labor.

How are you going to determine that? There must be a physical examination of the woman. It must be ascertained officially by this official board that the woman's labor is to be normal. In that event she may be permitted to get some one of her own choice to attend her during the trying hour, otherwise she must submit herself to the regulation and the care of somebody satisfactory to the board.

Let me read a little further:

This could be effected by providing that they could not assume charge of a patient until a certificate had been procured from a properly qualified medical man stating that he had made suitable preliminary examination and had found everything in order, and that he considered a normal outcome likely.

Observe that if a woman wants to employ a midwife, she must first obtain the approval of the board. That can only be secured when the board doctor has made a physical examination. Such is the recommendation made by this distinguished gentleman and published to the people of the United States as words of wisdom.

Bear in mind that in the following the official examination is assumed to have been made:

This could be further checked by the health department providing suitable blanks for the purpose, and stipulating that they must be returned when the birth certificate is filed. Furthermore, the midwives should be required by law, even in cases which have been certified as presumably normal, to call a physician whenever labor lasts for more than 24 hours, or any unexpected abnormality develops.

Such a procedure would have a highly educative effect upon the patients, especially upon the foreign born.

Yes, Mr. President; it will "have a highly educative effect." It will teach our people to hate the Government that invades their homes, that thrusts the ugly official face of a politician, who tramped to Washington and got a job, into the sacred chamber of the woman about to give birth to a child.

I read further:

Such a procedure would have a highly educative effect upon the patient. * * * In the cities the midwives might bring their patients to the obstetrical dispensaries, when such are available, where the certificates could be filled out gratis for the very poor and for a small fee in the case of women in more comfortable circumstances.

On the other hand, women who present some abnormality at the preliminary examination should be referred directly to a physician or be sent to a hospital at the county seat for treatment.

Of course, the general adoption of such regulations would necessitate a revolution in the medical practice in rural districts. * * *

"Of course, it would necessitate a revolution in rural districts." It would necessitate a revolution in our civilization. It would constitute a revolution of all the old fundamental doctrines—that husband and wife are the master and mistress of their home; that it is their castle, beyond the threshold of which no official can set his intruding foot unless he comes with a warrant of law issued by a court of competent jurisdiction. But that does not make any difference with the advocates of the bill. They would rather administer legislative soothing syrup to a bunch of spinsters who may have votes than to preserve the Constitution of the United States and the fundamentals of American liberty.

I read further:

Of course, the general doctrine of such regulations would necessitate a revolution in the methods of medical practice in rural districts and could only be carried out if funds were available for the employment of suitable persons to regulate the midwives, as well as for the institution of hospitals at the county seats, which would be available for the reception of patients urgently needing hospital care.

Why, it would take all the money in the Treasury to finance such a plan into effect. If carried too far, it might require soldiers to batter down the doors of homes. For be it remembered, husbands are inclined to protect their wives in the delicate months of pregnancy and the tragic hours of birth. Then, if at no other time, should they be immune from the espionage of all governmental agents.

I read further:

The suggestions here made do not cover in any way the supervision of the child during the first year of life, and I imagine that in rural communities this could be effected only by the employment by the county of visiting trained post-natal nurses who would make tours through districts at regular intervals and see the children under their care. I take it that radical reforms in these directions can only be attained after a campaign of intensive education.

But, Mr. President, the jurisdiction of this bureau is not intended to be limited to the poor and humble. I read again from Miss Lathrop's pamphlet:

"Maternal ignorance is sometimes regarded as a chief factor in the causation of excessive child mortality. It is a comfortable doctrine for the well-to-do person to adopt; and it goes far to relieve his conscience in the contemplation of excessive suffering and mortality among the poor * * *. There is little reason to believe that the average ignorance in matters of health of the working-class mother is much greater than that of mothers in other classes of society."

So that milady, seated in her boudoir, surrounded by all the refinements of life, with competent physicians awaiting her beck and call, is by Miss Lathrop regarded as so ignorant that she, too, like the humble and lowly, must come under governmental supervision. She, also, must await the advice of the bureau ladies who never had babies, and who, judging by past and present, never intend to, for they do not get married.

There is your proposition, and all the dodging and backing and filling you may do will not exculpate you for having inaugurated a system whose proponents intend to extend to home invasion and State control, extended by force. Employing an ancient illustration, you introduce the "camel's nose" with the full knowledge that it will be followed by the gross body of the beast. You introduce the principle of socialism. Back of it is the beast—bolshevism.

I repeat, that to carry out this plan there must be created a vast army of officials, spies, snoopers, tattletales, informers, and meddlers. The range of their activities will embrace everything from diapers to dietetics, from hygiene to hysteria.

According to the opinion of these reformers and theorists, no housewife can cook a meal properly unless instructed by them. Mothers are incapable of properly bearing children until they have had at least a few lessons from women who have never given birth to a child.

Before this band of devoted spinsters, who do not have babies, assayed the task of teaching women who do have babies how to raise babies billions of babies were born and managed somehow to survive with no other help than the care of a loving mother and the attention of "the old family doctor." Ever since Eve first hugged Cain to her breast women have known how to feed a baby, what to feed a baby, and when to feed a baby. The mother of to-day has sense enough to know in general what her baby needs. When she is in doubt she resorts to the assistance of her husband, the counsel of some good old mother, and the advice of the family doctor.

Common sense is, after all, the best guide. The people, living according to the rules of common sense, have reared all the races of men who have ever passed across this earth. It is now proposed to turn the control of the mothers of the land over to a few single ladies holding Government jobs at Washington. I question whether one out of ten of these delightful reformers could make a bowl of buttermilk gruel that would not give a baby the colic in five minutes. [Laughter.] We would better reverse the proposition and provide for a committee of mothers to take charge of the old maids and teach them how to acquire a husband and have babies of their own. [Laughter.]

All the experience and customs of the past are to be set aside and for them substituted the schemes of the modern reformer. Let me develop the practical workings of this new-fangled proposition: A girl modestly but lovingly permits the youth of her choice to lead her to the altar. They establish a little nest and call it by the sacred name of "home." After a while their souls are delighted by the prophesy of a new life.

The poor, blushing little woman is compelled to register upon the public records the fact of her pregnancy. About that time a bespectacled lady, nose sharpened by curiosity, official chin pointed and keen, is observed eagerly inspecting the ledger to ascertain the names of future mothers. Having concluded, she sails majestically and authoritatively to the home of the prospective mother and demands admission in the name of the law. Armed with pencil and pad and bureau forms she proceeds with the inquisition about as follows: "When is it going to happen?" "How did it come to happen?" "Is the husband healthy?" "Is the Wasserman test indicated?" "Has it been applied?" "Will a doctor or midwife be employed?" "Are they competent?" "Has the midwife been approved by the Children's Bureau?" "Have you read the regulations of the bureau?" "Are you obeying them?" "What food do you eat?" "When do you eat?" "How long do you eat?" And so forth. The cupboard will be examined, the premises inspected. The poor girl will be required to tell how much money her husband earns and she will doubtless be soundly lectured. It is certain she will be thoroughly dissected and discoursed on at the next meeting of the local branch of the Children's Bureau. How delightful it will all be. [Laughter.]

True, the committee has inserted an amendment prohibiting the entrance of a house by force, but that clause was not contained in the bill as prepared by its proponents. Clearly, the committee feared that the agents of the bureau would employ force unless specifically prohibited. But, notwithstanding the provision, we all are aware that especially the poor and humble will fear to refuse admission to anyone demanding entrance in the name of the great Federal Government.

We are not yet to have forced registration, but it has been recommended and the speech favoring it printed by this bureau. If the scheme is established and made effective, public registration will soon be demanded by the bureau and required by statute.

I know that the proponents of this bill will answer that none of these things will be done. I answer that unless you carry your supervision and inspection to the point indicated you will not comply with the "Minimum Requirements"; neither will you do anything for these people which is not better done to-day through the instrumentality of the family doctors, the trained nurses, the schools, and the hospitals. It is only when you go further than these existing instrumentalities and do something which they do not now do—namely, force your way into the homes and compel obedience to your demands—that your bill can be effective.

At this point I again quote from "Minimum Requirements":

Employment of a sufficient number of nurses to do home visiting and to give instruction to expectant mothers.

This would require an army of employees running far into the thousands. It involves a constant and offensive survey of the home. The bill is based upon the assumption that the American people do not have sense enough to take care of themselves and must, therefore, be taken care of by Government officials.

But somebody exclaims, "Oh, this is only intended for the poor." Assuming the statement to be true, the discrimination only makes the scheme more indefensible. I assert that the poor man in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of one thousand takes care of his wife; that the children of the poor survive the vicissitudes of fortune better than the children of the rich; that the little fellow cared for by a poor but loving mother, though he plays in the streets and oftentimes has dirt on his cheeks and bare feet, usually lives longer and is sturdier than the children born in the palaces of wealth and reared by hired servants according to the latest rules of reformers and experts.

Fundamentally the scheme of the bill amounts to this: We are asked to select from all of the millions of women of the United States four or five spinsters, whose unofficial advice would probably not be sought by a single mother in the land and who would be laughed at if they undertook to instruct a mother; we are asked to confer upon these inexperienced ladies a title and a salary, whereupon it is assumed they will immediately become endowed with wisdom and be qualified to instruct the mother, who has been with her baby before it was born and after it was born, how to take care of that baby. Also it is assumed that this band of lady officials can perform that function in the homes of a hundred and ten million people. What sheer, utter rot and nonsense is such a thing as that! Yet Senators will vote for it.

To what purpose do we make this revolutionary change? Why do we create this new army of Government employees? Why set up this entirely new organization? There already exists an organization infinitely its superior. A hundred and fifty thousand physicians, skilled in all the learning which has been gathered from the day of Hippocrates to this hour, are scattered over the United States. There is not a hamlet or village which is not blest with its family doctor. These physicians to a very large extent are acquainted with their patients, know the history of their ailments, the conditions of their homes, and the habits of their lives. Night and day they are ready to respond to every call. Alike through storm and sunshine they pursue their errands of mercy. What they can not accomplish will not be brought about by a society of spinsters trekking over the country in automobiles, armed with tracts advocating new theories and fantastic notions.

Supplementing the great army of doctors are 200,000 trained nurses who have been specially taught to care for the sick. These women, like the doctor, are to be found in almost every hamlet and village. In every serious case, where it is possible, they are called in to stand guard and administer to the wants of the sick during the absence of the physician. They have proven their devotion and skill in millions of homes and in the hospitals of war. One of them is worth more in a sick room than all the propagandists who have assembled in Washington for the purpose of extracting a salary from the Federal Treasury.

It is not to be forgotten that, in addition to the trained nurses and doctors, there are established in every town of any considerable size hospitals, both public and private, in which all the instrumentalities of science are placed at the disposal of skilled specialists and nurses who administer to the unfortunates placed under their care.

This great organization of doctors, nurses, and hospitals is the outgrowth of necessity and the development of centuries of time, thought, and experience. If the Government is to embark in the business of overseeing childbirth and the rearing of children, then the natural and sensible thing to do would be to employ the existing organization for that purpose. But we are asked to substitute for the ministrations of the family doctor and the care of nurses and hospitals the fulminations of propagandists and the imagination of superannuated single ladies.

If it is claimed that the Children's Bureau is to devote its attention chiefly to the poor, my answer is that the poor are entitled to the best as well as the rich. Therefore, if the Government is to render aid to the poor, it should do so by paying skilled physicians, who would be required to render services to any poor woman needing attention and to do it free of charge. But this is not the purpose of this bill. I repeat that its basic idea is that the American people do not know how to take care of themselves; that the State must force its official nose into the private homes of the people; that a system of espionage must be established over every woman about to give birth to a child and over the child, at least until it arrives at school age.

Mr. President, proceeding in a lighter vein, I summon you to a consideration of a speech made by the Hon. William F. Osborn, of the Department of Labor, at the convention called by the Children's Bureau. I read from page 26. After discussing the question "How to state algebraically the cost of living," the distinguished reformer comments as follows:

> According to this scale a man equals one; a woman equals nine-tenths of one [laughter]; a child from birth to 3 years, inclusive, equals fifteen-hundredths of one; a child from 4 to 6 years, inclusive, equals four-tenths of one; a child from 7 to 10, inclusive, equals seventy-five one-hundredths of one; a child from 11 to 14, inclusive, equals nine-tenths of one; a girl over 14 equals nine-tenths of one; and a boy over 14 equals one [laughter]. A discussion of the representativeness of this scale and also a full discussion of the formation of the equations is found in a forthcoming bulletin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

One equation is as follows:

> X raised to the fourth power equals forty-five and sixty-one one-hundredths minus one hundred and three ten-thousandths, multiplied by X raised to the third power, plus three and one hundred and thirty-two one-thousandths, multiplied by X squared, in which X cubed represents the total annual expenditure in dollars, equals the cost of food."

[Laughter.]

> By an equally simple process we ascertain the cost of clothing. Here it is: "X raised to the fifth power equals eight and ninety-five one-hundredths, minus zero decimal five hundred and sixty-nine one hundred-thousandths, multiplied by X raised to the third power, minus zero decimal two hundred and forty-nine thousandths, multiplied by X squared, equals clothing."

A man who can not tell what his clothing will cost next year with that formula before him is a plain idiot. [Laughter.]

Of course, the mathematician and expert knows all about it, but the expert generally knows all about everything without a formula as well as with one. [Laughter.] I am sure all the Senators understand. [Laughter.]

Mr. POMERENE. Does "X" represent the department?

Mr. REED. That, I think, is represented by some letter lower down in the alphabet than "X." [Laughter.] There are several pages of this, and on page 29 are various examples. Observe its simplicity. How dense must be the brain incapable of appreciating its utility.

The equation "X raised to the sixth power equals twenty-one and fifty-nine one-hundredths, minus zero decimal five hundred and eighty-nine one hundred-thousandths, multiplied by X raised to the third power, minus zero decimal five hundred and seventy-seven ten-thousandths multiplied by X squared represents rent." That formula was probably employed by the Washington landlord each time he raised the rent on his helpless tenant. [Laughter.]

Here is an easy one, "X raised to the thirteenth power equals ninety-two and fifty-one one-hundredths plus zero decimal two hundred and thirty-five ten-thousandths multiplied by X raised to the third power, minus fifteen and seventy-one one-hundredths multiplied by X squared, represents deficit or surplus." You can take your choice. [Laughter.]

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, who got this up? It sounds like an income-tax report. [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. An expert from the Department of Labor, whose talents were so valuable the Children's Bureau requisitioned them for its meeting.

Mr. KENYON. The Department of Labor?

Mr. REED. A man like that could be found nowhere else on earth.

Mr. KENYON. I hope there are not many of them.

Mr. KING. It is indorsed by the bureau.

Mr. KENYON. Is that from the Children's Bureau, or is that man connected with the Children's Bureau?

Mr. REED. This is one of the delegates, one of the men invited to the meetings I described. He is one of the bright particular stars in the constellation of reform. He was invited to the convention that he might illumine the night of ignorance through which the mothers of the land grope. Accordingly, he came with blackboard and chalk, with multiplication table, and algebraic equations, but chiefly as an expert on producing babies by mathematical formula. [Laughter.] He made the whole troublesome question so plain that the pangs of childbirth began immediately to disappear. [Laughter.] His able paper is printed that the public mind may be clarified.

There is one sentence that I think I ought in all fairness to read. It follows the algebraic equations:

> In conclusion, it will be clear that this paper does not concern the question of what a child ought to have in order to be properly reared. * * * This paper shows rather what does happen to family budgetary costs where children are born and reared. It is a sad story.

The statement goes on to say that a man must have $1,325 to live on.

And the concluding sentence is:

> At bottom, it shows the self-denial of the father and mother.

[Laughter.]

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, does that formula as to rent apply to the District of Columbia?

Mr. REED. I think you can figure anything out by it. It is an equation by which you can get any result you want. Nobody understands it, and hence no one can dispute your quotient.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FERNALD in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. POMERENE. It occurs to me that the writer of that article must be one of the highbrows of the country who has been defined as a person who is educated beyond his capacity. [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. Let us have done with mathematics and follow the meanderings of the Children's Bureau, both geographic and intellectual. Thus we shall learn with what practical good sense they go about this business. I confine myself to their own publications.

I exhibit to the Senate book after book. An entire book is frequently devoted to a single small town. Here is one describing Manchester, N. H., another Johnstown, Pa., another

Akron, Ohio, another Saginaw, Mich., another a single "homesteading county in Montana." There are others. These books are accompanied by maps and pictures, probably as elaborate as were used at the Battle of the Marne. They are filled with illustrations. They even include pictures and the exact dimensions of automobiles run as "baby specials." It seems that these ladies go touring the country in automobiles known as "baby specials." "Baby Special No. 2" is given particular prominence. We are even furnished with a portrait of the person in charge. That individual appears in petticoats, but I solemnly affirm that it is a portrait of George Monroe in the character of "My Aunt Bridget." [Laughter.] In this connection I exhibit illustration No. 3, "Baby Week Parade in North Dakota." It shows a few people walking along the streets of some town in North Dakota. A little later on, for the delectation of Congress and the people of the United States, are photographs of a lot of diminutive figures of babies, each carrying a banner containing such highly instructive legends as "Give us pure milk," "Give us fresh air," "We need love" [laughter], "We want clean homes," "We do not want flies," "Give us fathers who think." Of course, any one of the spinsters could select for a baby already born a father who would think. They could spot them with their naked eyes. [Laughter.]

Here are some other legends:

"Give us proper clothes." "We want intelligent care." [Laughter.] Here is a picture of a naked child—a boy, I hope—with a fur wrapped around his neck. He is represented as saying, "We must have medical attention." Here is another picture of a child, seated, crying and holding up his banner, which displays the legend, "We must have regular habits." [Laughter.] "We want plenty of pure water," says another. Probably some prohibitionist stuck that in. [Laughter.] Another says, "Register our births"; another exclaims, "Give us visiting nurses"; another cries, "Down with patent medicines." The entire parade is brought up by a pug dog, really the most interesting character in the scene. [Laughter.]

Here [exhibiting] is a page which is taken up with such stuff as this: "Don't kiss me; I don't like it; you may have germs. Yours truly, Baby." [Laughter.]

I now read a wonderful poem, outrivaling in exaltation of theme the verse of Milton and in majestic measure "the surge and thunder of the Odyssey." Attend in silence while I entrance your ears with the matchless melody of words:

I pledge to be a baby's friend
And everybody tell,
Fresh air, fresh food, and clothes quite clean
He needs to keep him well.

[Laughter.]

Without taking the time of the Senate to further explore the field I say that these books are gorged with matter so silly, senseless, inane, absurd, impractical, and revolutionary as to brand the intellectuality of the people who conduct the business of the bureau.

Here [exhibiting] is illustration No. 12, entitled "Watch us wash and feed the baby."

There sits a baby solitary and alone, except that there are five nurses waiting for the operation. "Watch us"—five nurses—"wash the baby." That is sent out to teach the mothers of the land how to rear their babies. [Laughter.]

Mr. LODGE. Is that document which the Senator from Missouri is reading a Government publication?

Mr. REED. Certainly. It is a Government publication printed at the Washington Government Printing Office as a "revised edition." It was so good they printed it twice. Why is twaddle of this kind printed? Trace twaddle back to its source and you will find a twaddler.

Mr. President, here [exhibiting] is another picture. Undoubtedly it was put into this book because of its value—illustration No. 1; it heads the list and is entitled:

Baby week was celebrated in the Indian Territory.

Then follows a picture of an Indian mother nursing her baby. It is a sweet picture; but, so far as I can observe, this Indian woman nurses her babe in the good old way in vogue since Cain was a cub.

Mr. President, here is another book, entitled, "Maternity Care and the Welfare of Young Children in a Homesteading County in Montana." These young ladies have gone out to Montana, traveled all over that State, of course at the expense of the Government, and they are now presenting us with pictures of Montana cabins.

Evidently the Children's Bureau intends to see to it that the Montana frontiersmen build better houses or quit raising babies. That must be the reason for publishing the picture. In this book [exhibiting] are portrayed dugouts and cabins and sod houses and all the other kinds of buildings one sees on the frontier, exactly the kind of temporary buildings that the frontiersman has employed from the first. The frontiersman goes in advance because he has iron in his blood and courage in his heart. He is determined to make his way in face of all obstacles. And so he builds a cabin or dugout and lives in it for a few months or years and then builds something better. He clears a farm. He raises a family. He helps establish cities, construct railroads, and create empires. But these Washington ladies do not like the character of houses of people who live in the wilds of Montana. Accordingly their houses are exhibited as a horrible example.

What are you going to do about it, you Socialists? Are you going out there to regulate the character of houses and prohibit babies until the model homes are built? If you are not, why are you putting such pictures in this book?

Do you contemplate regulating by law the kind of houses in which people shall live? If that be your purpose, then from its hallowed niche in this Chamber remove the American flag and in its place erect a statue of Karl Marx. Let his spirit preside over the deliberations of the Senate. But if you keep the flag, never forget that it typifies the independence of the individual; that every man's home is his castle; that within its walls no Government has the right to obtrude, save in the enforcement of the laws of the land.

Returning to my muttons, allow me to exhibit another such book, devoted to North Carolina. The Children's Bureau is not pleased with what people in North Carolina eat.

Mr. McCORMICK. Where is the book published?

Mr. REED. It is published in the Government Printing Office by the Children's Bureau.

Mr. OVERMAN. Has any State escaped?

Mr. REED. No State which they have reached has escaped. The money now sought is needed to help them cover the country.

They are speaking now of parts of North Carolina:

Corn is a staple article of diet, whether as "roasting ears," hominy grits, or ground into meal.

That is awful.

Molasses, homemade from sorghum cane, is widely used for "sweetening" during the winter season.

The preparation of food, from the point of view of the needs of growing children, leaves much to be desired.

The idea is that they do not treat children right in North Carolina. They starve them. I make profert of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] as an illustration of the emaciated people they raise in that State on corn and sorghum molasses. [Laughter.]

Mr. OVERMAN. And the Thirtieth Division.

Mr. REED. Yes; the Thirtieth Division. There is no particular reason why I should eulogize North Carolina. I do not know that it is better than other States, but it is one of the magnificent States of the Union. It was created by the brain and brawn and courage of people who went into the wilderness. They lived in cabins. They fought with wild animals and wild men. They furnished some of the best soldiers who followed Jackson in his heroic march through the South, and who afterwards stood with him behind the cotton bales. The mothers of North Carolina do not need the supervision of a lot of superannuated ladies out of jobs and lacking husbands.

Referring again to the book on North Carolina, I find a picture of a mountain grist mill. Now, just what has that to do with raising babies? Here is a hillside cornfield picture, and, pray, what has that to do with maternity? And here a group is portrayed actually grinding sorghum cane for molasses. An ox, apparently contented, notwithstanding the gentle prodding of a bare-headed, healthy looking boy, is doing the work. A sweet-faced old lady is serenely watching the operation. I venture a guess that the old lady is happier and knows more about raising babies than the entire Children's Bureau.

Here is another photograph, "Bad roads an obstacle to progress." You see, there is no limit to what these people propose to take in. They are not only to reform the houses of the people, regulate their diet, avert the deadly assaults of sorghum molasses and mitigate the horrors of corn pone, but they also propose to abolish dirt roads and wooden bridges—else why is the picture here? Or is it put here simply because the people who compiled this book did not have sense enough to stick to the subject they were attempting to handle?

Here is another picture of a log cabin in the mountains. About the kind of cabin that Abe Lincoln was born in; about the kind of cabin in which were born many of the men who made history and wrote legends of glory above the name of the United States; but it does not suit these ladies who board at fine hotels and draw large salaries and want them still further extended.

There are innumerable other photographs—an old-fashioned washtub, a gristmill, a handsome girl "toting fodder," a farmer driving an ox, a bevy of very pretty girls going to school, some of them actually in their bare feet, an old-fashioned worm fence, a field with the stumps uprooted, another field with the stumps not yet pulled. What a world of information a woman about to become a mother could gain from these pictures! Why are the public moneys squandered in this way?

If I be accused of speaking harshly of the women of the bureau, my reply is that when a woman takes a public office it is as necessary to talk frankly about her capacity as it would be if a man held the position.

Mr. President, I have dwelt overlong on this mass of official foolishness, published at public expense. I turn from it, not because its possibilities are exhausted but that I may remind Senators that dangerous seeds of socialism and bolshevism are contained in the bill itself.

It will be replied by the distinguished Senator who proposes this bill [Mr. KENYON] and by its enthusiastic champion, the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], that the bill does not go as far as the Russian system. That is true; and yet, as I have said, it involves exactly the same principle. What is that principle? That the State shall stand beside the mother who is bringing a young life into the world; that the State asserts the right of official interference. You reply that the mother is not obliged to accept the services of the State. The fact remains that the State undertakes that work. It assumes to go into the home, into the privacy of the chamber, and to supply information to the mother as to how she shall bring her child into the world. It assumes to furnish medical attention. If the State assumes to do that, we will soon be told that there are certain mothers who refuse to follow the official advice and that it is the duty of the State to compel their acceptance. The question is, Shall the Government, for the first time in America, enter the home, thrust its official nose into family affairs, and assert a right of interference in the holiest, tenderest, most tragic thing that ever occurs upon this earth—the birth of a child?

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. I should like to call the attention of my friend the Senator from Missouri to the peculiar situation in the South on account of our racial problems. The State which I in part represent contains the largest Negro population in the United States. Roughly, the races are divided half and half. We have three or four hundred thousand more Negroes than Mississippi has; more than South Carolina has. I was astonished myself when I discovered that we had 1,200,000 Negroes in the State of Georgia. We can not legislate upon these delicate, experimental matters without some consideration for the actual facts as they exist and with which we are trying to deal. I would be very much obliged to the Senator from Missouri if he would indicate what he thinks might be the unfortunate consequences of such legislation in a State like Georgia, for instance.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, perhaps I can answer the Senator's question best by reading the provisions of section 10. I quote:

> That the facilities provided by any State agencies cooperating under the provisions of this act shall be available for all residents of the State.

Of course, that means available to all alike, and how it could be conducted without an intermingling of the races, if they are ever called together in any schools of instruction, or in any community matter, is something I do not undertake to say.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, of course that is entirely as the State agency determines. The Senator from Georgia would not expect for a moment that his State agency would have a commingling of the races.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I think the Senator is wrong. I think that if the State did not provide absolute equality in this matter then, under section 10, the money would be withheld. A good many of these reformers have insisted from the first upon race equality. Some have advocated intermarriage between the races. I do not attribute the latter doctrine to the Children's Bureau as at present constituted. I do not see any reason for the language of section 10, unless it is intended to cover the identical problem presented by the Senator from Georgia.

Further light is thrown on the question of the Senator from Georgia by two speeches delivered at the convention held by the Children's Bureau.

Dean S. B. Breckinridge, of the University of Chicago, was one of the honored delegates. He advocated—> the fixation of an economic level below which no man could fall * * *. Including in the program * * * both white and black, * * * thus enabling the mother to specialize in the exercise of the maternal function.

A colored delegate, Prof. Miller, of Howard University, delivered an impassioned speech on behalf of the Negro, which appears at length in the printed report of the proceedings. I quote briefly:

> There is no Negro problem as such * * *. All the topics listed on the program of these several sessions apply to the Negro child as well as to any other. * * * We are speaking of standardizing children. We can have only one standard; there is only one ethical standard; there is only one scientific standard; there is only one political standard. You can not have two yardsticks; you can not have two multiplication tables, one applied to one race and one to the other. * * * If the Federal Government will educate every child according to his needs, this will be the first important step in this direction.
> The social environment of the Negro child benumbs his higher powers and faculties. He looks at the proclaimed new order of things and longs to enter into its sunshine and joy. * * * The new freedom * * * will prove to be but vanity and vexation of spirit if the least of these is denied his God-given birthright to enter into this proclaimed new order.

Perhaps the quotations answer the question of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. President, the proponents of the bill also say: "We only intend to give useful information." The Children's Bureau has given us a sample of the kind of information it is sending out. The books I have quoted from are pregnant with bolshevistic and socialistic doctrines. They go forth with the approval of a governmental bureau and are paid for with taxpayers' money. Is it not about time to stop that sort of thing?

Who shall say that persons who publish literature of the kind I have described can be safely trusted to instruct mothers or to train children? Is it not entirely likely that those who disseminate the fantastic doctrines of the European socialist and bolshevist will teach methods of child rearing and mother care equally foolish and abhorrent? Will not countless women and children be made innocent victims of false rules of health promulgated by those who have already demonstrated the unreliability of their judgment and the revolutionary trend of their ideas?

Certain it is that the bill confers upon the bureau unrestricted powers. The bill is a general commission to roam at large.

I read from section 3:

> The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor shall be charged with the carrying out of the provisions of this act, and the Chief of the Children's Bureau shall be the executive officer.
> It shall be the duty of the Children's Bureau to make or cause to be made such studies, investigations, and reports as will promote the efficient administration of this act.

The bureau shall have power to cooperate with State agencies.

Section 8 reads:

> That any State desiring to avail itself of the benefits of this act shall submit to the Children's Bureau for its approval detailed plans for carrying out the provisions of this act. These plans shall include the provisions to be made in the State for the administration of the act; and provision for instruction in the hygiene of maternity and infancy through public health nurses, consultation centers, and other suitable methods.

Mr. KENYON. Each State submits its plan as to its method of instruction in the matter of the hygiene of maternity and infancy. That may be through consultation centers, or it may be through instruction given by public health nurses.

Mr. REED. But the plans of the States are to be submitted to Miss Lathrop?

Mr. KENYON. Yes.

Mr. REED. There is no limitation in this bill as to what those plans may embrace.

Mr. KENYON. Except as the act itself defines the general purpose, under section 1, to be cooperating with the States in protecting the care of maternity and infancy.

[At this point Senator REED yielded the floor, stating that he would resume his remarks the following day.]

Friday, July 22, 1921.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I insert a letter from Dr. Fred H. Clark, protesting against the bill:

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION OF THE SOUTHWEST, COMPOSED OF THE STATES OF MISSOURI, KANSAS, OKLAHOMA, ARKANSAS, AND TEXAS.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., May 4, 1921.

To the Senate committee in charge of the Federal maternity bill:

GENTLEMEN: I have just been furnished with a copy of S. 1039, entitled "A bill for the public protection of maternity and infancy," and providing a method of cooperation between the Government of the United States and the several States.

I sincerely trust that the committee will see fit to make an unfavorable report upon this bill.

I am speaking for 10,000 physicians of the great Southwest, as the representative of the Medical Association of the Southwest, when I make this request.

This, I am sure the committee will agree, is but the entering wedge of State medicine. I am one of those who at the call of our Government at the first opportunity dropped my usual duties to respond to the call for help to put down Prussianism, and, so, of course, can not be expected to have any liking for anything as distinctly Prussian as is State medicine, of which I have stated before this is but the entering wedge.

Very respectfully,

(Dr.) FRED H. CLARK, Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. President, why should doctors protest against this bill? I think I can answer. This interference by the Government will probably cause the death of many infants and destroy the health of many women. In illustration, I remark there is not a lawyer who does not know that books of the type, "Every Man His Own Lawyer," produce endless litigation. Falling into the hands of men ignorant of the principles of the law, such books serve only to mislead. The layman taking them as his guide soon is in all kinds of controversies and frequently must employ several lawyers to rescue him from his blunders. Lawyers know that is true. Doctors know that there is nothing which fills the offices of the doctors so quickly or the graves of cemeteries so generously as the effort of people to doctor themselves according to the teachings of books which they can not understand.

If this bill were drawn along the right lines, it would seek to induce the women who are about to bear children to consult the best physician of their neighborhood, consult him at an early date, and follow his advice. If there are any too poor to pay the doctor, then a stipend might well be paid by the State. In that way the very poor could have the aid of a man capable of rendering real service.

That, sir, is not the line on which this bill proceeds. It undertakes to teach the women through books how to rear their children. It seeks to dictate through traveling nurses how they shall rear their children. Every tendency of the bill is to keep women from consulting the family physician and to rely upon the literature, lectures, and teachings of this bureau.

Mr. President, the scheme is one of the most pernicious ever devised. How many little children are to go to their death because the Government has sent out a book to an ignorant mother who, in trying to interpret it, makes a tragic mistake? How much better to teach her to send for a competent physician, and to send in time.

I repeat, there are a hundred and fifty thousand physicians in the United States. There is not a hamlet of any size which does not have its doctor. In nearly every State the doctor must be a graduate of some approved medical school. He should, therefore, be armed with the best knowledge that the medical profession has gathered during the long ages.

The doctor is there for that business. He is part of the life of the community. He knows the people and they know him. He is the proper adviser in every case where health is concerned. The local doctor, if he can not master the disease, if he be conscientious, will always call in consultation his brother physicians.

The tendency of the bill is to substitute for the family doctor, learned in the profession and devoted to his people, the traveling nurses, the circus-wagon lecturer, the socialistic and bolshevistic theorist, and to induce the people to trust to their guidance and care. Such, indeed, is the purpose of the bill. I think the Senate is going to pass it, because many Senators are pledged. The man who pledges his vote in advance gives away his legislative birthright, forfeits the opportunity to gain by debate, and to learn in the consideration of a bill its defects or its merits.

At the recent election among other ideas repudiated was the interference of the Government with private affairs. There will come other elections in which the people will repudiate the employment of a vast force of Government agents to invade the privacy and the sanctity of their homes and, like the locusts of Egypt, to eat up the substance of the land.

Mr. President, I repeat the unanswerable objection to the bill—it proposes that the Government shall regulate the private life of the citizen. They have undertaken that in other countries; they are undertaking it here. There is no limit, apparently, to the desire of a few men seated in Washington to control the millions of people who are at home. They proceed upon the theory that the citizens have not sense enough to regulate their own habits, to conduct their own homes, to live their own lives, to work out their own salvation. They hold that the Government is infallible and all wise; that it can therefore regulate the lives of the people better than the individual can regulate his own.

But what is this Government, undertaking these enormous duties and seeking to perform these remarkable functions, but a few men taken out of the body of the people, with no greater intelligence than the average man possesses? I make the challenge, and I make it boldly; I make the assertion, and I will make it in the face of any man or any set of men on earth, that the intelligence of the American Congress is not above the intelligence of the bar of any first-class county or city of the Nation.

I am not now seeking to discredit the Congress. I believe that for the most part the men who come here, charged with these high responsibilities, try to live up to them; but I emphasize the fact that there are thousands of men at home just as capable as we are. When a brilliant legislative light is snuffed out, either by the blasts of election or by the decree of Heaven, his place is speedily filled. He disappears as a stone in the ocean. Like the stone, his departure soon ceases to create a disturbing ripple upon the surface of the sea of time.

The average intelligence of the American people is just about fairly represented in the Congress. But that is not generally true of bureaus and boards. Let me explain: Outside of the offices of honor, Government positions attract—for the most part—people who have failed at home.

Men come to Congress because it is regarded as a great honor. How long it shall continue to be I do not know. Men seek the Presidency because of its great honors. Men aspire to Cabinet positions because of their great honors. Not so the bread and butter brigade, who come to Washington attracted by meager salaries. Such individuals flock here because they can get more money here than they can at home. The salaries paid by the Government are usually below those paid in the various communities of the United States for similar services. Why, then, do these men come here? Examine, and in 99 cases out of 100 you will find they were failures and could not make a living at home. I have seen some of them arrive with feet sticking from the sides of their shoes. I have seen them come without money to pay a week's board bill. I have seen them come outcasts and failures of the commercial and the industrial world. I have seen them the next day wearing an official badge authorizing them to enter the greatest business institutions of the country and to demand books and papers. I have observed the spectacle of these men, incompetent to hold employment, in that plant undertaking to lay down rules and regulations for its management. Now women are flocking here, just as the men have come, in search of jobs. Their qualifications are about equal to those of the men.

Therefore when we talk about the Government of the United States carrying out the provisions of any of these bills, remember they will be enforced largely by the kind of men I have described. Government is merely an idea. It functions through individuals. I have described these individuals. Consequently the proposal to place the care of the business of the country in the Government, in the last analysis, means that you usually place business in the hands of some business failure who has come to Washington and secured a position. Likewise when you put the health of the people of the United States within the control of a bureau at Washington you are consigning that great problem to hands far from infallible. In this case we know the Children's Bureau is unlearned in the care of the sick, uneducated in the science of medicine. The supreme irony is that you put motherhood in charge of a band of ladies who have chosen not to be mothers.

Oh, what a mockery it all is! In these times of pinch, when we are taxing our people to death, we propose to take this money and turn it over to these single ladies and have them go out and teach the married women how to rear their babies. But the car of moral progress and reform will move on. The propaganda relentlessly advances. The lobby has been very busy. Senators have been buttonholed, have yielded, have pledged themselves, and now sit here disgusted with their own performance. I do not say that is true of all. There are some who believe in this sort of thing, who think the Government should regulate everything. They believe that if Congress were to pass a bill directing all men to be happy, every human face would thereafter wear a smile of perpetual joy. These enthusiasts seem to believe we can disregard human nature, the experience of the ages, the environments of life, the conditions under which God Almighty planted human beings on this earth, and that all we have to do is to pass a bill, and all will be serene and lovely. Unhappily the epitaph of all such ventures is failure! failure! failure!

Mr. President, in the past at least the authority of the Government stopped at the threshold of the home. An officer could only enter when armed with a warrant of law issued by a court. The whole scheme and policy of our Saxon civilization rests upon the basic idea that the master of the home could hold it inviolate. At its threshold he could stand and command all to keep off. In defense of the home he could strike dead the intruder. Within that little kingdom the master and mistress were king and queen, they reared according to their own ideas and their own hopes the family which they, under the providence of God, had brought forth. The responsibility was theirs.

How has that responsibility been fulfilled? Whence came the country of America? It was not created by cranks or dreamers, by socialists or bolsheviki. It was builded by a sturdy yeomanry who believed in the inviolability of the home, in the right of the individual to live his own life, to conduct his own affairs, always, of course, with due regard for the rights of others as laid down in the law.

So we developed individuality, so we made strong men and strong women, so we taught the doctrines of virtue and honesty and rugged integrity. So we inspired men and women with self-reliance. Our mothers with heroic courage went through the travail of death and brought forth a race of men and women who made America the miracle of all the ages. We have so wrought because we have recognized and taught the independence of the individual man. Thus have we developed a spirit that stops at no obstacle, that conquers alike in the contests of peace and upon the fields of war.

Now, the thin edge of socialism is to be introduced, the home is to be invaded, and a band of spinsters will be appointed to take charge of the mothers who have always so tenderly, so devotedly, and so well reared the children of America. It will end in failure; let us hope it will not bring disaster.

Mr. President, I thank the Senate.

OF

HON. OTIS WINGO,

OF ARKANSAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, July 12, 1921.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I had not intended to take any part in the debate on the pending tariff bill, because with my knowledge of the situation I can not take its proposals seriously, for as I understand the situation the pending proposal has no chance to become a law, and I dislike to waste time in a mock performance. But the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] made some statements a little while ago with reference to the world's gold supply that I do not care to let go unchallenged in the record. Whatever may have been his intentions, he distinctly left the impression that of the great amount of gold produced during recent years and now being produced the United States has only a small portion. The gentleman puts forward this suggestion as an answer to the repeated inquiry that has been propounded during this debate to the proponents of the measure how Europe is to pay not only the debt she owes us, and the current interest thereon, but for our surplus products that we export to her if we erect a tariff wall so high as to cut down in a large measure the volume of the goods she sends to us. Those who have propounded this inquiry have, during this debate, repeatedly called attention to the fact which is axiomatic to every intelligent mind that Europe can pay us only in gold, labor, or commodities, and as we have garnered most of the free gold of the earth, Europe is left in a position where if we do business with her and where if she is to pay us the current interest as well as the principal of the debt she owes and at the same time takes our surplus products, it must be upon a basis of exchange of commodities to a larger degree than ever before.

The gentleman from Illinois was seeking to meet that argument by the suggestion that those who had presented these facts had not only overlooked the proportion which our commerce bore to the entire commerce of the world, but he also suggested that we were overlooking the production of gold by the various countries; so it is apparent when I challenged his suggestion that the rest of the world had ample gold and asked him to name any other nation than the United States with one exception that was able to maintain its gold reserve, and also asked him what proportion of the free gold of the world we held in our Federal reserve banks and in the Treasury, he not only admitted that he was not informed but he charged that it was immaterial to his discussion and that I, as usual, was trying to indulge in sophistry.

The gentleman is an able Member of this House, and usually speaks with a knowledge of facts as a basis for his contentions, and naturally having entered a field of discussion with which he admits he is not informed he resorts to the old method of declaring immaterial questions about which he has no information and dismissing as sophistry arguments that he is unable to meet. If the gentleman will inform himself on the question of the world's gold supply, the production of which he attempted to discuss, he will find that it is one of the disturbing factors in the efforts of those who seek to stabilize the commerce and the exchanges of the world.

If the gentleman had exercised his usual diligence and kept posted in current events, he would have noticed but a little while ago how the exchanges of the whole earth were disturbed by the transfer of a mere handful of gold by Germany to the United States for allied reparation account. In the opinion of most men whose opinions are regarded of any value, there can be no stabilization of world exchanges until there is a practical resumption of what is called the free flow of gold through the channels of world trade and finance.

In our vaults we hold one-third of all the available gold supply of the world, and that abnormal position will not be changed, nor will there be a resumption of anything like a stable world trade until there is a gradual resumption of the free flow of gold.

In my opinion, this abnormal condition can not be righted nor can there be a resumption of the free flow of gold and a stable basis of international exchange except upon a basis of a larger volume of barter and exchange of commodities.

Can any man be found except the gentleman from Illinois who will contend that the nations who owe us are able to get the gold with which to even pay the interest on their debt to us? If they can not get the gold to pay the interest on their debt to us, how are they going to be able to get gold to pay for our surplus commodities?

But you may waive aside the question as mere sophistry and say that credits can be arranged, but ultimately these credits have to be settled either with gold or commodities, and at the present time we are the only nation that is able to scrape together enough gold to redeem its outstanding paper currency, and the continual increase in the volume of paper credits and paper currency without any exchange of commodities will only make the world confusion worse confounded.

Not a great nation on earth has adequate gold reserves except the United States, and possibly one other. In this connection I shall insert in the RECORD a table showing the distribution of gold reserves prior to the war, at the time of the armistice, and at a recent date. The figures given in the table refer to the gold holdings of the central banks and of the various governmental agencies:

Gold reserves of the principal countries before the war, at the time of the armistice, and at the latest available date.

But the gentleman from Illinois seeks to meet these facts with the suggestion that the world production of gold is enormous, and that we are only producing a small part of it. He suggests that the year 1917 is the year when the last statistics are available, but he is in error about this, because statistics are available down to and including last year. I shall take the liberty of inserting in the RECORD at this point a table giving the gold production of the world by years for the last 10 years:

While it is true that the British Empire and other countries produce more gold than we do, yet the gentleman overlooks the fact that we are getting practically all the gold produced in the world. The reason for this is that when the new gold produced is put on the market for sale America purchases it because no other country has at the present time a free gold market and dollar exchange is at a premium, and nobody can outbid us or even bid on even terms with us.

The South African field is the most productive in the world. The producers of South Africa send their smelted gold to London, where the gold is put through a process that refines it to .999 of purity. It is then placed on the auction block and is bid in by agents of the dollar exchange rate, and dollar exchange is at such a premium that no other country can afford to bid against us. It is not a question of where the gold is produced, but where does it go when it is refined?

I shall insert in the RECORD at this point a table showing the distribution of new gold during the first six months of 1921:

Mr. Chairman, I repeat, Europe can pay us her debt, the interest thereon, and for our surplus products in only two ways, first, by paying us in gold, and second, in the exchange of commodities. Not having the gold and with world exchanges as they are, the new gold pouring into us, there is but one alternative, and that is either accept commodities from Europe or else have a diminished market for our surplus products. This being true, it is folly, as is proposed by the pending measure, to put a prohibition on their trade with us, and at the same time expect them to pay us either what they already owe us or furnish us a market for our surplus wheat, cotton, and manufactured products. Upon the steady, profitable disposition in the world's market of that surplus depends, more than upon any other factor, domestic prosperity. Domestic stagnation now awaits the revival of that market. Instead of this bill meeting the situation it simply makes the confusion worse confounded.

To suggest that Europe has ample gold to pay us the accumulated interest on the billions she already owes us, the debt itself, and finance her future purchases of our surplus products indicates that he who advances such a suggestion is either ignorant of or has a reckless disregard of well-known indisputable facts. [Applause.]

OF

HON. ROYAL C. JOHNSON,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, October 5, 1921.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with permission granted by unanimous consent of the House to extend my remarks in the RECORD and print the so-called "slacker lists," I desire to call attention to a letter of The Adjutant General, P. C. Harris, dated September 30, 1921.

It is my intention to insert these lists on the 5th day of each month until all of the names are printed. No good soldier will be injured by the publication of his name in these lists; but, on the contrary, if his military record is one to be proud of, the publication will only serve to call attention to that record. If by mistake the names of good soldiers have not been eliminated from the record, it will be my pleasure and duty to insert in the RECORD the facts in each individual case and to see that the facts are brought to the attention of the Secretary of War, who is as anxious as any soldier of the late war with Germany to have the records correct. Mistakes ought to be corrected while the men are living and while there is evidence to substantiate any valid claim as to service.

The letter is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, September 30, 1921.

Hon. ROYAL C. JOHNSON,
House of Representatives.

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of October 5, 1921, lists of alleged draft deserters, which lists were released by the War Department for publication between August 5 and September 4, 1921, both dates inclusive. A copy of the statement to be printed at the head of the lists is also herewith.

There is also transmitted herewith, for insertion in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, a list of the names of registrants which have been removed from the lists of alleged draft deserters heretofore published in the RECORD, the reasons for such removals being set forth in the second paragraph of the statement which is to precede the lists in the RECORD.

Very respectfully,

P. C. HARRIS,
The Adjutant General.

The following names have been removed from the lists of alleged draft deserters heretofore published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD since the publication of such names:

LOCAL BOARD FOR DIVISION NO. 1, COUNTY OF KANAWHA, STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

2999 Frank Payne, Dawes, W. Va.

The men whose names appear below and who were under the jurisdiction of the local boards named were, according to the public draft records, classified and reported by the draft authorities as deserters from the military service of the United States. The lists in which these names were originally included have been given at least one month's publicity.

The name of any man who, since the publication of the lists, has been found to have actually rendered service in either our own forces or in those of the Allies during the period between May 18, 1917, and November 11, 1918, is not included, nor is that of any man who, though he rendered no service during the period mentioned, has, since the publication of his name, been found to have been erroneously inducted or to have been erroneously certified as a deserter, nor that of any man who is known to be no longer living.

Every reasonable effort has been made by the War Department to eliminate from these lists names which for any of the aforementioned reasons should not appear thereon. Should it develop, however, that certain of the names listed below should for any of these reasons likewise be removed, notice to that effect will be published in each such case in a later issue of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.
